THE

ODYSSEY.

BOOK I.
ARGUMENT.

Minerva’s Descent to Ithaca.

The Poem opens within forty-eight days of the arrival of Ulysses in his dominions. He had now remained seven years in the island of Calypso, when the gods assembled in council proposed the method of his departure from thence, and his return to his native country. For this purpose it is concluded to send Mercury to Calypso, and Pallas immediately descends to Ithaca. She holds a conference with Telemachus, in the shape of Meutes, king of the Taphians; in which she advises him to take a journey in quest of his father Ulysses, to Pylos and Sparta, where Nestor and Menelaus yet reigned; then, after having visibly displayed her divinity, disappears. The suitors of Penelope make great entertainments, and riot in her palace till night. Phemius sings to them the return of the Grecians, till Penelope puts a stop to the song. Some words arise between the suitors and Telemachus, who summons the council to meet the day following.

ODYSSEY.

BOOK I.

THE man, for wisdom's various arts renown'd,
Long exercis'd in woes, oh Muse! resound.
Who, when his arms had wrought the destin'd fall
Of sacred Troy, and raz'd her heaven-built wall,
Wandering from clime to clime, observant stray'd,
Their manners noted, and their states survey'd.
On stormy seas unnúmer'd toils he bore,
Safe with his friends to gain his natal shore:
Vain toils! their impious folly dar'd to pray
On herds devoted to the god of day;
The god vindictive doom'd them never more
(Ah, men unbless'd!) to touch that natal shore.
Oh, snatch some portion of these acts from fate,
Celestial Muse! and to our world relate.
Now at their native realms the Greeks arriv'd; 15
All who the wars of ten long years surviv'd,
And 'scap'd the perils of the gulpy main.
Ulysses, sole of all the victor train,
An exile from his dear paternal coast,
Deplor'd his absent queen and empire lost.
Calypso in her caves constrain'd his stay,
With sweet, reluctant, amorous delay:
In vain—for now the circling years disclose
The day predestin'd to reward his woes.
At length his Ithaca is given by fate,
Where yet new labours his arrival wait;
At length their rage the hostile powers restrain,
All but the ruthless monarch of the main.
THE ODYSSEY.

But now the god, remote, a heavenly guest,
In Æthiopia grac'd the genial feast
(A race divided, whom with sloping rays
The rising and descending sun surveys);
There on the world's extremest verge rever'd
With hecatombe and prayer in pomp preferr'd,
Distant he lay: while in the bright abodes
Of high Olympus, Jove conven'd the gods:
Th' assembly thus the sire supreme addrest,
Ægysthus' fate revolving in his breast,
Whom young Orestes to the dreary coast
Of Pluto sent, a blood-polluted ghost.

Perverse mankind! whose wills, created free,
Charge all their woes on absolute decree;
All to the dooming gods their guilt translate,
And follies are miscall'd the crimes of fate.
When to his lust Ægysthus gave the rein,
Did fate, or we, th' adulterous act constrain?
Did fate, or we, when great Atrides dy'd,
Urge the bold traitor to the regicide?
Hermes I sent, while yet his soul remain'd
Sincere from royal blood, and faith profan'd;
To warn the wretch, that young Orestes, grown
To manly years, should re-assert the throne.
Yet, impotent of mind, and uncontroul'd
He plung'd into the gulf, which heaven foretold.
Here paus'd the god; and pensive thus replies,
Minerva, graceful with her azure eyes.
O thou! from whom the whole creation springs,
The source of power on earth deriv'd to kings!
His death was equal to the direful deed;
So may the man of blood be doom'd to bleed!
But grief and rage alternate wound my breast
For brave Ulysses, still by fate oppress'd.
Amidst an isle, around whose rocky shore
The forests murmur, and the surges rear,
The blameless hero from his wish'd-for home
A goddess guards in her enchanted dome:
(Atlas her sire, to whose far-piercing eye
The wonders of the deep expanded lie;
BOOK I.

THE ODYSSEY.

Th' eternal columns which on earth he rears
End in the starry vault, and prop the spheres.

By his fair daughter is the chief comfort;
Who soothes to dear delight his anxious mind:
Successless all her soft caresses prove,
To banish from his breast his country's love;
To see the smoke from his lov'd palace rise,
While the dear isle in distant prospect lies,
With what contentment could he close his eyes!

And will Omnipotence neglect to save
The suffering virtue of the wise and brave?

Must he, whose altar's on the Phrygian shore
With frequent rites, and pure, avow'd thy power,
Be doom'd the worst of human ills to prove,
Unblest, abandon'd to the wrath of Jove?

Daughter! what words have pass'd thy lips unworth'd!

(Reply'd the Thunderer to the martial maid:)

Deem not unjustly by my doom oppress,
Of human race the wisest and the best.

Neptune, by prayer repentant rarely won,
Afflicts the chief, to avenge his giant son,
Whose visual orbs Ulysses robb'd of light;

Great Polyphemus, of more than mortal might!

Him young Thoas bore (the bright increase
Of Phoeceas, dreaded in the sounds and seas):
Whose Neptune ey'd with bloom of beauty blest,
And in his cave the yielding nymph comprest.

For this, the god constrains the Greek to roam,
A hopeless exile from his native home,
From death alone exempt—but cease to mourn;
Let all combine to achieve his wish'd return:
Neptune awoke, his wrath shall now restrain,
Or dwarf the synod of the gods in vain.

Father and king ador'd! Minerva cry'd,
Since all who in the Olympianbower reside
Now make the wandering Greek their public care,
Let Hermes to the Atlantic isle repair;

a Ogygia.
Bid him, arriv'd in bright Calypso's court,
The sanction of the assembled powers report:
That wise Ulysses to his native land
Must speed, obedient to their high command.
Meantime Telemachus, the blooming heir
Of sea-girt Ithaca, demands my care:
'Tis mine, to form his green, unpractis'd years,
In sage debates; surrounded with his peers,
To save the state, and timely to restrain
The bold intrusion of the suitor-train:
Who crowd his palace, and with lawless power
His herd and flocks in feastful rites devour.
To distant Sparta, and the spacious waste
Of sandy Pyle, the royal youth shall haste.
There, warm with filial love, the cause inquire
That from his realm retards his god-like sire:
Delivering early to the voice of fame
The promise of a great, immortal name.
She said: the sandals of celestial mould,
Fledg'd with ambrosial plumes, and rich with gold,
Surround her feet: with these sublime she sails
Th' aerial space, and mounts the winged gales:
O'er earth and ocean wide prepar'd to soar,
Her dreaded arm a beamy javelin bore.
Ponderous and vast; which, when her fury burns,
Proud tyrants humbles, and whole hosts o'erturns.
From high Olympus prone her flight she bends,
And in the realms of Ithaca descends.
Her lineaments divine, the grave disguise
Of Mentes' form conceal'd from human eyes
(Mentes, the monarch of the Taphian land):
A glittering spear wav'd awful in her hand.
There in the portal plac'd, the heaven-born maid
Enormous riot and misrule survey'd.
On hides of beevens, before the palace gate
(Sad spoils of luxury), the suitors sate.
With rival art, and ardour in their mien,
At chess they vie, to captivate the queen;
Divining of their loves. Attending nigh,
A menial train the flowing bowl supply:
Others, apart, the spacious hall prepare.
And form the costly feast with busy care.
There young Telemachus, his bloomy face
Glowing celestial sweet, with godlike grace
Amid the circle shines: but hope and fear
(Painful vicissitude!) his bosom tear.
Now, imag’d in his mind, he sees restor’d
In peace and joy the people’s rightful lord;
The proud oppressors fly the vengeful sword.
While his fond soul these fancied triumphs swell’d,

The stranger guest the royal youth beheld:
Griev’d that a visitant so long should wait
Unmark’d, unhonour’d, at a monarch’s gate;
Instant he flew with hospitable haste,
And the new friend with courteous air embrac’d.
Stranger! who’er thou art, securely rest,
Affiance in my faith, a friendly guest:
Approach the dome, the social banquet share,
And then the purpose of thy soul declare.

Thus affable and mild, the prince precedes,
And to the dome th’ unknown celestial leads.
The spear receiving from her hand, he plac’d
Against a column, fair with sculpture grace’d;
Where seemly rang’d in peaceful order stood
Ulysses’ arms, now long disus’d to blood.
He led the goddess to the sovereign seat,
Her feet supported with a stool of state
(A purple carpet spread the pavement wide);
Then drew his seat, familiar, to her side;
Far from the suitor-train, a brutal crowd,
With insolence, and wine, elate and loud;
Where the free guest, unnoted, might relate,
If haply conscious, of his father’s fate.
The golden ewer a maid obsequious brings,
Replenish’d from the cool, translucent springs;
With copious water the bright vase supplies
A silver laver of capacious size:
They wash. The tables in fair order spread,
They heap the glittering canisters with bread:
Viands of various kinds allure the taste,
Of choicest sort and savour, rich repast!
Delicious wines th' attending herald brought;
The gold gave lustre to the purple draught.
Lat'd with the vapour of the fragrant feast,
In rush'd the suitors with voracious haste:
Marshall'd in order due, to each a sewer
Presents, to bathe his hands; a radiant ewer.
Luxurious then they feast. Observant round
Gay stripling youths the brimming goblets crown'd.
The rage of hunger quell'd, they all advance,
And form to measur'd airs the mazy dance:
To Phemius was consign'd the chored lyre,
Whose hand reluctant touch'd the warbling wire:
Phemius, whose voice divine could sweetest sing
High strains responsive to the vocal string.
Meanwhile, in whispers to his heavenly guest
His indignation thus the prince exprest.
Indulge my rising grief, whilst these (my friend)
With song and dance the pompous revel end.
Light is the dance, and doubly sweet the lays
When for the dear delight another pays.
His treasure'd stores these cormorants consume,
Whose bones, defrauded of a regal tomb
And common turf, lie naked on the plain,
Or doom'd to welter in the whelming main.
Should he return, that troop so blythe and bold,
With purple robes inwrought, and stiff with gold,
Precipitant in fear would wing their flight,
And curse their cumb'rous pride's unwieldy weight.
But, ah, I dream!—th' appointed hour is fled;
And hope, too long with vain delusion fed,
Deaf to the rumour of fallacious fame,
Gives to the roll of death his glorious name!
With venial freedom let me now demand
Thy name, thy lineage, and paternal land;
Sincere, from whence began thy course, recite,
And to what ship I owe the friendly freight?
BOOK I.  THE ODYSSEY.     11

Now first to me this visit dost thou deign,
Or number'd in my father's social train?
All who deserv'd his choice, he made his own,
And, curious much to know, he far was known.

My birth I boast (the blue-ey'd virgin cries)
From great Anchialus, renown'd and wise;
Mentes my name; I rule the Taphian race
Whose bounds the deep circumpient waves embrace:

A duteous people, and industrious isle,
To naval arts inur'd, and stormy toil.
Freighted with iron from my native land,
I steer my voyage to the Brutian strand;
To gain by commerce, for the labour'd mass,
A just proportion of refulgent brass.
Far from your capital my ship resides
At Reithrus, and secure at anchor rides;
Where waving groves on airy Nelion grow
Supremely tall, and shade the deeps below.

Thence to revisit your imperial dome,
An old hereditary guest I come:
Your father's friend. Laertes can relate
Our faith unspotted, and its early date;
Who, prest with heart-corroding grief and years,
To the gay court a rural shed prefers,
Where, sole of all his train, a matron sage
Supports with homely food his drooping age,
With feeble steps from marshalling his vines
Returning sad, when toilsome day declines.

With friendly speed, induc'd by erring fame,
To hail Ulysses' safe return, I came;
But still the frown of some celestial power
With anxious joy retards the blissful hour.
Let not your soul be sunk in sad despair;
He lives, he breathes this heavenly vital air,
Among a savage race, whose shelty bounds
With ceaseless roar the foaming deep surrounds.
The thoughts which roll within my ravish'd breast,
To me, no seer, th' inspiring gods suggest;
Nor skill'd, nor studious, with prophetic eye
To judge the winged omens of the sky.
Yet hear this certain speech nor deem it vain;
Though adamantine bonds the chief restrain,
The dire restraint his wisdom will defeat,
And soon restore him to his regal seat.
But, generous youth! sincere and free declare,
Are you, of manly growth, his royal heir?
For sure Ulysses in your look appears,
The same his features, if the same his years.
Such was that face, on which I dwelt with joy
Ere Greece assembled stemm'd the tides of Troy;
But, parting then for that detested shore,
Our eyes, unhappy! never greeted more.

To prove a genuine birth (the prince replies)

On female truth assenting faith relies:
Thus manifest of right, I build my claim
Sure-founded on a fair maternal fame,
Ulysses' son: but happier he, whom fate
Hath plac'd beneath the storms which toss the great!
Happier the son, whose hoary sire is blest
With humble affluence, and domestic rest!
Happier than I, to future empire born,
But doom'd a father's wretched fate to mourn!

To whom, with aspect mild, the guest divine:

Oh true descendant of a scepter'd line!
The gods a glorious fate from anguish free
To chaste Penelope's increase decree.
But say, yon jovial troop so gaily drest,
Is this a bridal or a friendly feast?
Or from their deed I rightlier may divine,
Unseemly flown with insolence and wine;
Unwelcome revellers, whose lawless joy
Pains the sage ear, and hurts the sober eye.

Magnificence of old (the prince reply'd)
Beneath our roof with virtue could reside;
Unblam'd abundance crown'd the royal board,
What time this dome rever'd her prudent lord;
Who now (so Heaven decrees) is doom'd to mourn;
Bitter constraint, erroneous and forlorn.
BOOK I. THE ODYSSEY.

Better the chief, on Ilion’s hostile plain,
Had fall’n surrounded with his warlike train;
Or safe return’d, the race of glory past,
Now to his friends’ embrace, and breath’d his last!
Then grateful Greece with streaming eyes would raise

Historic marbles to record his praise;
His praise, eternal on the faithful stone,
Had with transmissive honour grace’d his son.
Now snatch’d by harpies to the dreary coast,
Sink is the hero, and his glory lost:
Vanish’d at once! unheard-of, and unknown?
And I his heir in misery alone.
Nor for a dear lost father only flow
The shedding tears, but woe succeeds to woe:
To tempt the spouseless queen with amorous wiles,
Resort the nobles from the neighbouring isles;
From Samos, circled with th’ Ægæan main,
Dulichium, and Zacynthus’ sylvan reign:
Ev’n with presumptuous hope her bed e’ ascend,
The lords of Ithaca their right pretend.

She seems attentive to their pleaded vows,
Her heart detesting what her ear allows.
They, vain expectants of the bridal hour,
My stores in riotous expense devour,
In feast and dance the mirthful months employ,
And meditate my doom to crown their joy.

With tender pity touch’d, the goddess cried:
Soon, may kind Heaven a sure relief provide,
Soon may your sire discharge the vengeance due,
And all your wrongs the proud oppressors owe! Oh! in that portal should the chief appear,
Each hand tremendous with a brazen spear,
In radiant panoply his limbs incas’d
(For so of old my father’s court he grace’d,
When social mirth undent his serious soul,
O’er the full banquet, and the uprightly bowl):
He then from Ephyre, the fair domain
Of Ilus, sprung from Jason’s royal strain,
Measur’d a length of seas, a toilsome length in vain.
For, voyaging to learn the direful art
To taint with deadly drugs the barbed dart;
Observant of the gods, and sternly just,
Heus resus'd t' impart the baneful trust:
With friendlier zeal my father's soul was fir'd,
The drugs he knew, and gave the boon desir'd.
Appear'd he now with such heroic port,
As then conspicuous at the Taphian court;
Soon should you boasters cease their haughty strife,
Or each atone his guilty love with life.
But of his wish'd return the care resign;
Be future vengeance to the powers divine.
My sentence hear: with stern distaste avow'd,
To their own districts drive the suitor-crowd:
When next the morning warms the purple east,
Convoke the peerage, and the gods attest;
The sorrows of your inmost soul relate;
And form sure plans to save the sinking state.
Should second love a pleasing flame inspire,
And the chaste queen connubial rites require;
Dismiss'd with honour, let her hence repair
To great Icarius, whose paternal care
Will guide her passion, and reward the choice
With wealthy dower, and bridal gifts of price.
Then let this dictate of my love prevail:
Instant, to foreign realms prepare to sail,
To learn your father's fortunes: Fame may prove,
Or omen'd voice (the messenger of Jove),
Propitious to the search. Direct your toil
Through the wide ocean first to sandy Pyre;
Of Nestor, hoary sage, his doom demand:
Thence speed your voyage to the Spartan strand;
For young Atrides to th' Achaian coast
Arriv'd the last of all the victor host.
If yet Ulysses views the light; forbear,
Till the fleet hours restore the circling year.
But if his soul hath wing'd the destin'd flight,
Inhabitant of deep disastrous night;
Homeward with pious speed repass the main,
To the pale shade funereal rites ordain,
Plaint the fair column o'er the vacant grave,
A hero's honours let the hero have.
With decent grief the royal dead deplor'd,
For the chaste queen select an equal lord.
Then let revenge your daring mind employ,
By fraud or force the suitor-train destroy,
And starting into manhood, scorn the boy.
Hast thou not heard how young Orestes, sir'd
With great revenge, immortal praise acquir'd?
His virgin-sword, Egysthus' veins imbru'd;
The murderer fell, and blood a ton'd for blood.
O greatly bless'd with every blooming grace!
With equal steps the paths of glory trace;
Join to that royal youth's your rival name,
And shine eternal in the sphere of fame.—
But my associates now my stay deplore,
Impatient on the hoarse-resounding shore.
Thou, heedful of advice, secure proceed;
My praise the precept is, be thine the deed.

The counsel of my friend (the youth rejoin'd)
Imprints conviction on my grateful mind.
So fathers speak (persuasive speech and mild)
Their sage experience to the favourite child.
But, since to part, for sweet refection due
The genial viands let my train renew:
And the rich pledge of plighted faith receive,
Worthy the heir of Ithaca to give.

Defer the promis'd boon (the goddess cries,
Celestialazure brightening in her eyes),
And let me now regain the Reithrian port:
From Temese return'd, your royal court
I shall revisit; and that pledge receive;
And gifts, memorial of our friendship, leave.
Abrupt, with eagle-speed she cut the sky;
Instant invisible to mortal eye.
Then first he recogniz'd th' ethereal guest;
Wonder and joy alternate fire his breast;
Heroic thoughts, infus'd, his heart dilate:
Revolving much his father's doubtful fate.
At length, compos'd, he join'd the suitors throng:
Hush'd in attention to the warbled song.
His tender theme the charming lyrist chose
Minerva's anger, and the direful woes
Which voyaging from Troy the victors bore,
While storms vindictive intercept the shore.
The shrilling airs the vaulted roof rebounds,
Reflecting to the queen the silver sounds.
With grief renew'd the weeping fair descends;
Their sovereign's step a virgin train attends:
A veil, of richest texture wrought, she wears,
And silent to the joyous hall repairs.
There from the portal, with her mild command,
Thus gently checks the minstrel's tuneful hand:
Phemius! let acts of gods, and heroes old,
What ancient bards in hall and bower have told,
Attemper'd to the lyre, your voice employ:
Such the pleas'd ear will drink with silent joy.
But, oh! forbear that dear disastrous name,
To sorrow sacred, and secure of fame:
My bleeding bosom sickens at the sound,
And every piercing note inflicts a wound.
Why, dearest object of my duteous love,
(Reply'd the prince) will you the bard reprove?
Oft, Jove's ethereal rays (resistless fire)
The chanter's soul, and raptur'd song inspire;
Instinct divine! nor blame severe his choice,
Warbling the Grecian woes with harp and voice;
For novel lays attract our ravish'd ears;
But old, the mind with inattention bears;
Patient permit the sadly pleasing strain;
Familiar now with grief, your tears refrain,
And in the public woe forget your own;
You weep not for a perish'd lord alone.
What Greeks now wandering in the Stygian gloom,
With your Ulysses shar'd an equal doom!
Your widow'd hours, apart, with female toil
And various labours of the loom, beguile;
There rule, from palace-cares remote and free;
That care to man belongs, and most to me.
Mature beyond his years, the queen admires
His sage reply, and with her train retires.
Then swelling sorrows burst their former bounds,
With echoing grief afresh the dome resounds;
Till Pallas, piteous of her plaintive cries,
In slumber clos’d her silver-streaming eyes.

Meantime, rekindled at the royal charms,
Tumultuous love each beating bosom warms;
Intemperate rage a wordy war began;
But bold Telemachus assum’d the man.
Instant (he cry’d) your female discord end,
Ye deedless boasters! and the song attend:
Obey that sweet compulsion, nor profane
With dissonance the smooth melodious strain.

Pacific now prolong the jovial feast;
But when the dawn reveals the rosy east,
I, to the peers assembled, shall propose
The firm resolve, I here in few disclose:
No longer live the cankers of my court;
All to your several states with speed resort;
Waste in wild riot what your land allows,
There ply the early feast, and late carouse.
But if, to honour lost, ’tis still decreed
For you my bowl shall flow, my flocks shall bleed;
Judge and revenge my right, impartial Jove!—
By him and all th’ immortal thrones above
(A sacred oath), each proud oppressor slain,
Shall with inglorious gore this marble stain.

Aw’d by the prince, thus haughty, bold and young,
Rage gnaw’d the lip, and wonder chain’d the tongue.
Silence at length the gay Antinoüs broke,
Constrain’d a smile, and thus ambiguous spoke:
What god to your untutor’d youth affords
This headlong torrent of amazing words?
May Jove delay thy reign, and cumber late
So bright a genius with the toils of state!

Those toils (Telemachus serene replies)
Have charms, with all their weight, t’allure the wise.
Fest by the throne obsequious fame resides,
And wealth incessant rolls her golden tides.
Nor let Antinous rage, if strong desire
Of wealth and fame a youthful bosom fire:
Elect by Jove his delegate of sway,
With joyous pride the summons I'd obey.
Whene'er Ulysses roams the realm of night,
Should factional power dispute my lineal right,
Some other Greeks a fairer claim may plead;
To your pretence their title would precede.
At least, the sceptre lost, I still should reign
Sole o'er my vassals, and domestic train.
To this Eumachus: To heaven alone
Refer the choice to fill the vacant throne.
Your patrimonial stores in peace possess;
Undoubted, all your filial claim confess:
Your private right should implore power invade,
The peers of Ithaca would arm in aid.
But say, that stranger guest who late withdrew,
What and from whence? his name and lineage shew.
His grave demeanour and majestic grace
Speak him descended of no vulgar race:
Did he some loan of ancient right require,
Or came fore-runner of your scepter'd sire?
Oh son of Polybus! the prince replies,
No more my sire will glad these longing eyes:
The queen's fond hope inventive rumour cheers,
Or vain diviners' dreams divert her fears.
That stranger-guest the Taphian realm obeys,
A realm defended with encircling seas.
Mentes, an ever-honour'd name of old
High in Ulysses' social list enrolled.

Thus he, though conscious of th' ethereal guest,
Answer'd evasive of the sly request.
Meantime the lyre rejoins the sprightly lay;
Love-dittied airs, and dance, conclude the day.
But when the star of eve with golden light
Adorn'd the matron-brow of sable night;
The mirthful train dispersing quit the court,
And to their several domes to rest resort.
A towering structure to the palace join'd;
To this his steps the thoughtful prince inclin'd:
In his pavilion there, to sleep repairs;
The lighted torch, the sage Euryclea bears
(Daughter of Ope, the just Pisner's son,
For twenty beves by great Laertes won;
In rosy prime with charms attractive grac'd,
Honour'd by him, a gentle lord and chaste,
With dear esteem: too wise, with jealous strife
To taint the joys of sweet connubial life.
Sole with Telemachus her service ends,
A child she nurs'd him, and a man attends.)

Whilst to his couch himself the prince adrest,
The duteous dame received the purple vest:
The purple vest with decent care dispos'd,
The silver ring she pull'd, the door reclos'd;
The bolt, obedient to the silken cord,
To the strong staple's inmost depth restor'd,
Secure'd the valves. There wrapt in silent shade,
Passive, the ruses the goddess gave, he weigh'd;
Strearch'd on the downyacie, no rest he knows,
And in his repose'd soul the vision glows.
ARGUMENT.

The Council of Ithaca.

Telemachus, in the assembly of the lords of Ithaca, complains of the injustice done him by the suitors, and insists upon their departure from his palace; appealing to the princes, and exciting the people to declare against them. The suitors endeavour to justify their stay, at least till he shall send the queen to the court of Icarius her father; which he refuses. There appears a prodigy of two eagles in the sky, which an augur expounds to the ruin of the suitors. Telemachus then demands a vessel to carry him to Pylos and Sparta, there to inquire of his father's fortunes. Pallas in the shape of Mentor (an ancient friend of Ulysses,) helps him to a ship, assists him in preparing necessaries for the voyage, and embarks with him that night; which concludes the second day from the opening of the poem.

The scene continues in the palace of Ulysses in Ithaca.
BOOK II.

Now reddening from the dawn, the morning-ray
Glow'd in the front of heaven, and gave the day.
The youthful hero, with returning light,
Rose anxious from th' inquietudes of night.
A royal robe he wore with graceful pride,
A two-edg'd falchion threaten'd by his side,
Embroider'd sandals glitter'd as he trod,
And forth he mov'd majestic as a god.
Then by his heralds, restless of delay,
To council calls the peers: the peers obey.
Soon as in solemn form th' assembly sate,
From his high dome himself descends in state.
Bright in his hand a ponderous javelin shin'd;
Two dogs, a faithful guard, attend behind;
Pallas with grace divine his form improves,
And gazing crowds admire him as he moves.
His father's throne he sitt'd: while distant stood
The ha'ry peers, and aged wisdom bow'd.
'Twas silence all. At last Egyptius spoke;
Egyptius, by his age and sorrows broke:
A length of days his soul with prudence crown'd,
A length of days had bent him to the ground.
His eldest hopes in arms to Ilium came,
By great Ulysses taught the path to fame;
But (hapless youth) the hideous Cyclops tore
His quivering limbs, and quaff'd his spouting gore.
Three sons remain'd: to climb with haughty fires.
The royal bed, Euryanomus aspires;
The rest with duteous love his griefs assuage,
And ease the sire of half the cares of age.
Yet still his Antiphus he loves, he mourns,
And, as he stood, he spoke and wept by turns.
Since great Ulysses sought the Phrygian plains,
Within these walls, inglorious silence reigns.

* Antiphus.
Say then, ye peers! by whose commands we meet;
Why here once more in solemn council sit?
Ye young, ye old, the weighty cause disclose:
Arrives some message of invading foes?
Or say, does high necessity of state
Inspire some patriot, and demand debate?
The present synod speaks its author wise;
Assist him, Jove, thou regent of the skies!

He spoke. Telemaclus with transport glows,
Embrac'd the oner, and majestic rose
(His royal hand th' imperial sceptre sway'd);
Then thus, addressing to Egyptius, said:
Reverend old man! lo here confess he stands
By whom ye meet; my grief your care demands.
No story I unfold of public woes,
Nor bear advices of impending foes:
Peace the blest land, and joys incessant crown:
Of all this happy realm, I grieve alone.
For my lost sire continual sorrows spring,
The great, the good; your father and your king.
Yet more; our house from its foundation bows,
Our foes are powerful, and your sons the foes:
Hither, unwelcome to the queen they come;
Why seek they not the rich Icarian dome?
If she must wed, from other hands require
The dowry: is Telemaclus her sire?
Yet through my court the noise of revel rings,
And wastes the wise frugality of kings.
Scarcely all my herds their luxury suffice;
Scarcely all my wine their midnight hours supplies.
Safe in my youth, in riot still they grow,
Nor in the helpless orphan dread a foe.
But come it will, the time when manhood grants
More powerful advocates than vain complaints.
Approach that hour! insufferable wrong
Cries to the gods, and vengeance sleeps too long.
Rise then, ye peers! with virtuous anger rise;
Your fame reverse, but most th' avenging skies.
By all the deathless powers that reign above,
By righteous Themis and by thundering Jove
BOOK II.

THE ODYSSEY.

(Thou, who gives to councils, or denies Success; and humbles, or confirms the wise),
Rise in my aid! suffice the tears that flow
For my lost sire, nor add new woe to woe,
If ever he bore the sword to strengthen ill,
Or, having power to wrong, betray the will,
On me, on me your kindled wrath assayage,
And bid the voice of lawless riot rage.
If ruin to our royal race ye doom,
Be you the spoilers, and our wealth consume.
Then might we hope redress from juster laws,
And raise all Ithaca to aid our cause:
But while your sons commit th' unpunish'd wrong,
You make the arm of violence too strong.
While thus he spoke, with rage and grief he frown'd,
And dash'd th' imperial sceptre to the ground.
The big round tear hung trembling in his eye:
The synod griev'd, and gave a pitying sigh,
Then silent sate—at length Antinous burns
With haughty rage, and sternly thus returns.

O insolence of youth! whose tongue affords
Such railing eloquence, and war of words.
Studious thy country's worthies to defame,
Thy erring voice displays thy mother's shame.
Elusive of the bridial day, she gives
Food hopes to all, and all with hopes deceives.
Did not the sun, through heaven's wide azure roll'd,
For three long years the royal fraud behold?
While she, laborious in delusion spread
The spacious loom, and mix'd the various thread:
Whereas to life the wondrous figures rise,
Thus spoke th' inventive queen, with artful sighs:

"Though cold in death Ulysses breathes no more,
Cease yet awhile to urge the bridal hour;
Cease, till to great Laërtes I bequeath
A task of grief, his ornaments of death.
Lest when the Fates his royal ashes claim,
The Grecian matrons taint my spotless fame;
When he, whom living mighty realms obey'd,
Shall want in death a shroud to grace his shade."
Thus she: at once the generous train comply'd; nor fraud mistrusts in virtue's fair disguise.

The work she ply'd; but, studious of delay,

By night revers'd the labours of the day.

While thrice the sun his annual journey made,

The conscious lamp the midnight fraud survey'd; unheard, unseen, three years her arts prevail;

The fourth, her maid unfolds th' amazing tale.

We saw, as unperceiv'd we took our stand,

The backward labours of her faithless hand.

Then urg'd, she perfects her illustrious toils;

A wondrous monument of female wiles!

But you, oh peers! and thou, oh prince! give ear
(I speak aloud, that every Greek may hear):

Dismiss the queen; and if her sire approves,

Let him espouse her to the peer she loves.

Bid instant to prepare the bridal train,

Nor let a race of princes wait in vain.

Though with a grace divine her soul is blest,

And all Minerva breathes within her breast,

In wondrous arts than woman more renown'd;

And more than woman with deep wisdom crown'd;

Though Tyro nor Mycenæ match her name,

Nor great Alcmene (the proud boasts of fame)

Yet thus by heaven adorn'd, by heaven's decree

She shines with fatal excellence, to thee:

With thee, the bowl we drain, indulge the feast,

Till righteous heaven reclaim her stubborn breast.

What though from pole to pole resounds her name!

The son's destruction waits the mother's fame:

For, till she leaves thy court, it is decreed,

Thy bowl to empty, and thy flock to bleed.

While yet he speaks, Telemachus replies:

Ev'n nature starts, and what ye ask denies.

Thus, shall I thus repay a mother's cares,

Who gave me life, and nurs'd my infant years?

While sad on foreign shores Ulysses treads,

Or glides a ghost with unapparent shades;

How to Icarius in the bridal hour

Shall I, by waste undone, refund the dower?
How from my father should I vengeance dread! 156
How would my mother curse my hated head!
And while in wrath to vengeful fiends she cries,
How from their hell would vengeful fiends arise!
Abhor'd by all, accurs'd my name would grow,
The earth's disgrace, and human-kind my foe. 160
If this displease, why urge ye here your stay?
Haste from the court, ye spoilers, haste away:
Waste in wild riot what your land allows,
There ply the early feast and late carouse.
But if, to honour lost, 'tis still decreed
For you my bowl shall flow, my flocks shall bleed;
Judge and assert my right, impartial Jove!
By him, and all th' immortal host above
(A sacred oath,) if heaven the power supply,
Vengeance I vow, and for your wrongs ye die. 170
With that, two eagles from a mountain's height
By Jove's command direct their rapid flight;
Swift they descend, with wing to wing conjoin'd,
Stretch their broad plumes, and float upon the wind,
Above th' assembled peers they wheel on high, 175
And clang their wings, and hovering beat the sky;
With ardent eyes the rival train they threat,
And shrieking loud, denounce approaching fate.
They cuff, they tear; their cheeks and neck they rend,
And from their plumes huge drops of blood descend:
Then, sailing o'er the domes and towers, they fly
Full toward the east, and mount into the sky.
The wondering rivals gaze with cares opprest,
And chilling horrors freeze in every breast.
Till big with knowledge of approaching woes
The princes of augurs, Halitherses, rose:
Prescient he view'd th' aerial tracks, and drew
A sure presage from every wing that flew.
Ye sons (he cry'd) of Ithaca, give ear,
Hear all! but chiefly you, oh rivals! hear. 190
Destruction sure o'er all your heads impends;
Ulysses comes, and death his steps attends.
Nor to the great alone is death decreed;
We and our guilty Ithaca must bleed.
Why cease we then the wrath of heaven to stay? Be humbled, all, and lead, ye great! the way. For lo! my words no fancy'd woes relate: I speak from science, and the voice is fate.

When great Ulysses sought the Phrygian shores To shake with war proud Ilion's lofty towers, Deeds then undone my faithful tongue foretold: Heaven seal'd my words, and you those deeds beheld. I see (I cry'd) his woes, a countless train; I see his friends o'erwhelm'd beneath the main; How twice ten years from shore to shore he roams: Now twice ten years are past, and now he comes!

To whom Eurymachus—Fly, dotard, fly! With thy wise dreams and fables of the sky. Go prophecy at home, thy sons advise:

Here thou art sage in vain—I better read the signs. Unnumber'd birds glide through the aereal way, Vagrants of air, and unforeboding strag. Cold in the tomb, or in the deeps below, Ulysses lies: oh wert thou laid as low! Then would that busy head no broils suggest, Nor fire to rage Telemachus's breast. From him some bribe thy venal tongue requires, And interest, not the god, thy voice inspires. His guideless youth, if thy experience'd age Mislead fallacious into idle rage,

Vengeance deserv'd thy malice shall repress, And but augment the wrongs thou would'st redress a Telemachus may bid the queen repair. To great Iarius, whose paternal care Will guide her passion, and reward her choice, With wealthy dower, and bridal gifts of price. Till she retires, determin'd we remain, And both the prince and augur threat in vain: His pride of words, and thy wild dream of fate, Move not the brave, or only move their hate. Threat on, O prince! elude the bridal day, Threat on, till all thy stores in waste decay. True, Greece affords a train of lovely dames, In wealth and beauty worthy of our flames:
BOOK II. THE ODYSSEY.

But never from this nobler suit we cease;
For wealth and beauty less than virtue please.

To whom the youth: Since then in vain I tell
My numerous woes, in silence let them dwell.
But heaven and all the Greeks have heard my wrong;
To heaven, and all the Greeks, redress belongs.
Yet this I ask (nor be it ask'd in vain,)
A bark to waft me o'er the rolling main,
The realms of Pyle and Sparta to explore,
And seek my royal sire from shore to shore:
If, or to fame his doubtful fate be known,
Or to be learn'd from oracles alone.
If yet he lives, with patience I forbear,
Till the fleet hours restore the circling year:
But if already wandering in the train
Of empty shades; I measure back the main,
Plast the fair column o'er the mighty dead,
And yield his consort to the nuptial bed.

Hecan'd; and while abash'd the peers attend,
Mentor arose, Ulysses' faithful friend:
[When fierce in arms he sought the scenes of war, "My friend (he cry'd) my palace be thy care;
"Years roll'd on years my godlike sire decay,
"Guard thou his age, and his behests obey.""
Stars as he rose, he cast his eyes around,
That bash'd with rage; and as he spoke, he frown'd:
O never, never more, let king be just,
Be mild in power, or faithful to his trust!
Let tyrants govern with an iron rod,
Oppress, destroy, and be the scourge of God;
Since he who like a father held his reign,
So soon forgot, was just and mild in vain!
True, while my friend is griev'd, his griefs I share;
Yet now the rivals are my smallest care:
The, for the mighty mischiefs they devise,
Ere long shall pay—their forfeit lives the price.
But against you, ye Greeks! ye coward train!
Gods! how my soul is mov'd with just disdain!
Dumb ye all stand, and not one tongue affords
His injur'd prince the little aid of words.
While yet he spoke, Leocritus rejoined:
O pride of words, and arrogance of mind!
Would'st thou to rise in arms the Greeks advise?
Join all your powers! in arms, ye Greeks, arise!
Yet would your powers in vain our strength oppose:
The valiant few o'ermatch an host of foes.
Should great Ulysses stern appear in arms,
While the bowl circles, and the banquet warms;
Though to his breast his spouse with transport flies,
Torn from her breast, that hour, Ulysses dies.
But hence retreating to your domes repair,
To arm the vessel, Mentor! be thy care,
And, Halitherses! thine: be each his friend;
Ye lov'd the father: go, the son attend.
But yet, I trust, the boaster means to stay
Safe in the court, nor tempt the watery way.

Then, with a rushing sound, th’ assembly bend,
Diverse their steps: the rival rout ascend
The royal dome; while sad the prince explores
The neighbouring main, and sorrowing treads the shores.

There, as the waters o'er his hands he shed,
The royal suppliant to Minerva pray'd:
O goddess! who descending from the skies
Vouchsaf'd thy presence to my wondering eyes,
By whose commands the raging deeps I trace,
And seek my sire through storms and rolling seas!
Hear from thy heavens above, oh warrior-maid!
Descend once more, propitious to my aid,
Without thy presence, vain is thy command:
Greece, and the rival train thy voice withstand.

Indulgent to his prayer the goddess took
Sage Mentor's form, and thus like Mentor spoke.
O prince, in early youth divinely wise,
Born, the Ulysses of thy age to rise!
If to the son the father's worth descends,
O'er the wide waves success thy ways attends:
To tread the walks of death, he stood prepar'd;
And what he greatly thought he nobly dur'd.
Were not wise sons descendent of the wise,
And did not heroes from brave heroes rise,
BOOK II. THE ODYSSEY. 27

Vain were my hopes: few sons attain the praise of their great sires, and meet their sires' disgrace.
But since thy veins paternal virtue inspire,
And all Penelope thy soul inspires,
Go, and succeed! the rivals' aims despise;
For never, never, wicked man was wise.
Blind they rejoice, though now, ev'n now they fall;
Death hastes again: one hour o'erwhelms them all!
And lo, with speed we plough the watery way;
My power shall guard thee, and my hand convey:
The winged vessel studious I prepare,
Through seas and realms companion of thy care.
Thou to the court ascend; and to the shores.
(When night advances) bear the naval stores;
Bread, that decaying man with strength supplies,
And generous wine, which thoughtful sorrow flies.
Meanwhile the mariners, by my command,
Shall speed aboard, a valiant chosen band.
Wide o'er the bay, by vessel vessel rides;
The best I choose to waft thee o'er the tides.
She spoke: to his high dome the prince returns,
And, as he moves, with royal anguish mourns.
'Twas riot all, among the lawless train;
Boar bled by boar, and goat by goat lay slain.
Arriv'd, his hand the gay Antinous prest,
And thus deriding, with a smile addrest.

Grieve not, oh daring prince! that noble heart:
Ill suits gay youth the stern heroic part.
Indulge the genial hour, unbend thy soul,
Leave thought to age, and drain the flowing bowl.
Studious to ease thy grief, our care provides
The bark, to waft thee o'er the swelling tides.

Is this, returns the prince, for mirth a time?
When lawless gluttons riot, mirth's a crime;
The luscious wines, dishonour'd, lose their taste;
The song is noise, and impious is the feast.
Suffice it to have spent with swift decay
The wealth of kings, and made my youth a prey.
But now the wise instructions of the sage,
And manly thoughts inspir'd by manly age,
Teach me to seek redress for all my woe,
Here, or in Pyle—in Pyle, or here, your foe.
Deny your vessels, ye deny in vain:
A private voyager I pass the main.
Free breathe the winds, and free the billows flow;
And where on earth I live, I live your foe.

He spoke and frown'd, nor longer deign'd to stay,
Sterly his hand withdrew, and strode away.

Meantime, o'er all the dome, they quaff, they feast,
Derisive taunts were spread from guest to guest,
And each in jovial mood his mate address.

Tremble ye not, oh friends! and coward fly,
Doom'd by the stern Telemachus to die?
To Pyle or Sparta to demand supplies,
Big with revenge, the mighty warrior flies:
Or comes from Ephyré with poisons fraught,
And kills us all in one tremendous draught!

Or who can say (his gamesome mate replies)
But, while the dangers of the deeps he tries,
He, like his sire, may sink depriv'd of breath,
And punish us unkindly by his death?

What mighty labours would he then create,
To seize his treasures, and divide his state,
The royal palace to the queen convey,
Or him she blesses in the bridal day!

Meantime the lofty rooms the prince surveys,
Where lay the treasures of th' Ithaeian race:
Here ruddy brass and gold refulgent blaz'd;
There polish'd chests embroidered vestures grac'd;
Here jars of oil breath'd forth a rich perfume;
There casks of wine in rows adorn'd the dome
(Pure favorous wine, by gods in bounty given,
And worthy to exalt the feasts of heaven.)

Untouch'd they stood, till, his long labours o'er,
The great Ulysses reach'd his native shore.
A double strength of bars secur'd the gates:

Fast by the door the wise Euryclea waits;
Euryclea, who, great Ops! thy lineage shar'd,
And watch'd all night, all day, a faithful guard.

To whom the prince: O thou, whose guardian care
Mum'd the most wretched king that breathes the air!
UNT)ouch’d and sacred may these vessels stand, 396
Till great Ulysses views his native land.
But by thy care twelve urns of wine be fill’d; 400
Next these in worth, and firm those urns be seal’d;
And twice ten measures of the choicest flour
Prepar’d, e’er yet descends the evening hour.
For when the favouring shades of night arise,
And peaceful slumbers close my mother’s eyes,
Me from our coast shall spreading sails convey,
To seek Ulysses through the watery way. 405

While yet he spoke, she fill’d the walls with cries,
And tears ran trickling from her aged eyes.
Oh whither, whither flies my son? she cry’d,
To realms, that rocks and roaring seas divide?
In foreign lands thy father’s days decay’d,
And foreign lands contain the mighty dead.
The watery way ill-fated if thou try,
All, all must perish, and by fraud you die!
Then stay, my child! storms bear, and rolls the main;
Oh, beat those storms, and roll the seas in vain! 415

Far hence (reply’d the prince) thy fears be driven:
Heaven calls me forth; these counsels are of Heaven.
But, by the powers that hate the perjur’d, swear,
To keep my voyage from the royal ear,
Nor uncompeil’d the dangerous truth betray,
Till twice six times descends the lamp of day:
Lost the sad tale a mother’s life impair,
And grief destroy what time awhile would spare.

Thus be. The matron with uplifted eyes
Attest th’ all-seeing sovereign of the skies. 425
Then studious she prepares the choicest flour,
The strength of wheat, and winces an ample store.
While to the rival train the prince returns,
The martial goddess with impatience burns;
Like thee, Telemachus, in voice and size,
With speed divine from street to street she flies,
She bids the mariners prepare’d, to stand,
When night descends, embody’d on the strand,
Then to Noimous swift she runs, she flies,
And asks a bark: the chief a bark supplies.
And now, declining with his sloping wheels,
Down sunk the sun behind the western hills.
The goddess shov’d the vessel from the shores,
And stow’d within its womb the naval stores.
Full in the openings of the spacious main
It rides; and now descends the sailor-train.

Next, to the court, impatient of delay,
With rapid step the goddess urg’d her way:
There every eye with slumberous chains she bound,
And dash’d the flowing goblet to the ground.
Drowsy they rose, with heavy fumes oppress’d,
Reel’d from the palace, and retir’d to rest.

Then thus, in Mentor’s reverend form array’d,
Spoke to Telemachus the martial maid.
Lo! on the seas, prepar’d the vessel stands,
Th’ impatient mariner thy speed demands.
Swift as she spoke, with rapid pace she leads;
The footsteps of the deity he treads.
Swift to the shore they move: along the strand
The ready vessel rides, the sailors ready stand.

He bids them bring their stores; th’ attending train
Load the tall bark, and launch into the main.
The prince and goddess to the stern ascend;
To the strong stroke at once the rowers bend.
Full from the west she bids fresh breeses blow;
The sable billows foam and roar below.
The chief his orders gives; th’ obedient band
With due observance wait the chief’s command:
With speed the mast they rear, with speed unbind
The spacious sheet, and stretch it to the wind.
High o’er the roaring waves the spreading sails
Bow the tall mast, and swell before the gales;
The crooked keel the parting surge divides,
And to the stern retreat’ing roll the tides.
And now they ship their oars, and crown with wine
The holy goblet to the powers divine:
Imploring all the gods that reign above,
But chief the blue-ey’d progeny of Jove.

Thus all the night they stem the liquid way,
And end their voyage with the morning ray.
ARGUMENT

The Interview of Telemachus and Nestor.

Telemachus, guided by Pallas in the shape of Mentor, arrives in the morning at Pylos, where Nestor and his sons are sacrificing on the sea-shore to Neptune. Telemachus declares the occasion of his coming; and Nestor relates what past in their return from Troy, how their fleets were separated, and he never since heard of Ulysses. They discourse concerning the death of Agamemnon, the revenge of Orestes, and the injuries of the suitors. Nestor advises him to go to Sparta, and inquire further of Menelaus. The sacrifice ending with the night, Minerva vanishes from them in the form of an eagle: Telemachus is lodged in the palace. The next morning they sacrifice a bullock to Minerva; and Telemachus proceeds on his journey to Sparta, attended by Pisistratus.

The scene lies on the sea-shore of Pylos.
BOOK III.

The sacred sun, above the waters rais'd,
   Thro' Heaven's eternal, brazen portals blaz'd;
And wide o'er earth diffus'd his cheering ray,
To gods and men to give the golden day,
Now on the coast of Pyle the vessel falls,
   Before old Neleus' venerable walls.
There suppliant to the monarch of the flood,
At nine green theatres the Pylians stood,
Each held five hundred (a deputed train,) 5
At each, nine oxen on the sand lay slain.
They taste the entrails, and the altars load
With smoking thighs, an offering to the god.
Full for the port the Ithacensians stand,
And furl their sails, and issue on the land.
Telemachus already prest the shore; 10
Not first, the power of wisdom march'd before,
And ere the sacrificing throng he join'd,
Admonish'd thus his well-attending mind.

Proceed, my son! this youthful shame expel;
An honest business never blush to tell,
To learn what fates thy wretched sire detain,
We past the wide, immeasurable main.
Meet then the senior far renown'd for sense,
With reverend awe, but decent confidence:
Urge him with truth to frame his fair replies; 15
And sure he will: for wisdom never lies.
Oh tell me, Mentor! tell me, faithful guide
(The youth with prudent modesty reply'd,) 20
How shall I meet, or how accost the sage,
Unskill'd in speech, nor yet mature of age?
Awful th' approach, and hard the task appears,
To question wisely men of riper years.
To whom the martial goddess thus rejoin'd.
Search, for some thoughts, thy own suggesting mind;
And others, dictated by heavenly power, 35
Shall rise spontaneous in the needful hour.
BOOK III. THE ODYSSEY.

For aught unprosperous shall thy ways attend,
Born with good omens, and with Heaven thy friend.
She spoke, and led the way with swiftest speed:
As swift, the youth pursu’d the way she led;
And join’d the band before the sacred fire,
Where sate, encompast with his sons, the sire.
The youth of Pylos, some on pointed wood
Transfix’d the fragments, some prepar’d the food:
In friendly throngs they gather to embrace
Their unknown guests, and at the banquet place.
Pisistratus was first to grasp their hands,
And spread soft hides upon the yellow sands;
Along the shore th’ illustrious pair he led,
Where Nestor sate with youthful Thrasymed.
To each a portion of the feast he bore,
And held the golden goblet foaming o’er;
Then first approaching to the elder guest,
The latent goddess in these words address’d.
Woe’er thou art, whom fortune brings to keep
These rites of Neptune, monarch of the deep,
They first it fits, oh stranger! to prepare
The due libation and the solemn prayer:
Then give thy friend to shed the sacred wine:
Though much thy younger, and his years like mine,
He too, I deem, implores the power divine:
For all mankind alike require their grace,
All born to want; a miserable race!
He spake, and to her hand preferr’d the bowl:
A secret pleasure touch’d Athana’s soul,
To see the preference due to sacred age
Regarded ever by the just and sage.
Of Ocean’s king she then implores the grace.
Oh thou! whose arms this ample globe embrace,
Fulfil our wish, and let thy glory shine
On Nestor first, and Nestor’s royal line;
Next grant the Pylian states their just desires.
Plead with their hecatomb’s ascending fires;
Last deign Telemachus and me to bless,
And crown our voyage with desired success.
Thus she: and having paid the rite divine,
Gave to Ulysses’ son the rosy wine.
Suppliant be pray'd. And now the victims dress
They draw, divide, and celebrate the feast.
The banquet done, the narrative old man,
Thus mild, the pleasing conference began.
Now, gentle guests! the genial banquet o'er,
It suits to ask ye, what your native shore,
And whence your race? on what adventure, say,
Thus far you wander through the watery way?
Relate, if business, or the thirst of gain,
Engage your journey o'er the pathless main:
Where savage pirates seek through seas unknown
The lives of others, venturous of their own.

Urg'd by the precepts by the goddess given,
And fill'd with confidence infused from Heaven,
The youth, whose Pallae destin'd to be wise
And fam'd among the sons of men, replies.
Inquir'st thou, father! from what coast we came?
(Oh grace and glory of the Grecian name!)
From where high Ithaca o'erlooks the floods,
Brown with o'er-arched shades and pendent woods,
Us to these shores our filial duty draws,
A private sorrow, not a public cause.
My sire I seek, where'er the voice of fame
Has told the glories of his noble name,
The great Ulysses; fam'd from shore to shore
For valour much, for hardy suffering more.
Long time with thee before proud Ilion's wall
In arms he fought: with thee beheld her fall.
Of all the chiefs, this hero's fate alone
Has Jove reserv'd, unheard-of, and unknown;
Whether in fields by hostile fury slain,
Or sunk by tempests in the gulfy main?
Of this to learn, opprest with tender fears,
Lo, at thy knee his suppliant son appears.
If or thy certain eye, or curious ear,
Have learnt his fate, the whole dark story clear:
And, oh! what's heaven destin'd to betide,
Let neither flattery smooth, nor pity hide.
Prepar'd I stand: he was but born to try
The lot of men: to suffer and to die.
Oh then, if ever through the ten years' war
The wise, the good Ulysses claim'd thy care;
If e'er he join'd thy council, or thy sword,
True in his deed, and constant to his word;
Far as thy mind though backward time can see,
Search all thy stores of faithful memory:
'Tis sacred truth I ask, and ask of thee.

To him experience'd Nestor thus rejoin'd:
O friend! what sorrows dost thou bring to mind!
Shall I the long, laborious scene review,
And open all the wounds of Greece anew?
What toils by sea! where dark in quest of prey
Dauntless we row'd; Achilles led the way:
What toils by land! where mix'd in fatal fight
Such numbers fell, such heroes sunk to night:
There Ajax great, Achilles there the brave,
There wise Patroclus, fill an early grave:
There too my son—ah, once my best delight,
Once swift of foot, and terrible in fight;
In whom stern courage with soft virtue join'd,
A faultless body and a blameless mind:
Antilocheus—What more can I relate?
How trace the tedious series of our fate?

Not added years on years my task could close,
The long historian of my country's woes:
Back to thy native islands might'st thou sail,
And leave half-heard the melancholy tale.
Nine painful years on that detested shore;
What stratagemas we form'd, what toils we bore!
Still labouring on, till scarce at last we found
Great Jove propitious, and our conquest crown'd.
Far o'er the rest thy mighty father shin'd,
In wit, in prudence, and in force of mind.

Art thou the son of that illustrious sire?
With joy I grasp thee, and with love admire.
So like your voices, and your words so wise,
Who finds thee younger must consult his eyes.
Thy sire and I were one; nor vary'd ought
In public sentence, or in private thought;
Alike to council or th' assembly came,
With equal souls and sentiments the same.
But when (by wisdom won) proud Ilium burn'd,
And in their ships the conquering Greeks return'd 160
'Twas God's high will the victors to divide,
And turn th' event, confounding human pride:
Some he destroy'd, some scatter'd as the dust
(Not all were prudent, and not all were just.)
Then Discord, sent by Pallas from above,
165
Stern daughter of the great avenger Jove,
The brother-kings inspir'd with fall debate;
Who call'd to council all th' Acaian state,
But call'd untimely (not the sacred rite
Observ'd nor heedful of the setting light,
Nor herald sworn the session to proclaim.)
Sour with debauch, a reeling tribe they came,
To these the cause of meeting they explain,
And Menelaus moves to cross the main;
170
Not so the king of men: he will'd to stay,
The sacred rites and hecatombs to pay,
And calm Minerva's wrath. Oh blind to fate!
The gods not lightly change their love, or hate.
With ireful taunts each other they oppose,
Till in loud tumult all the Greeks arose.
175
Now different counsels every breast divide,
Each burns with rancour to the adverse side:
Th' unquiet night strange projects entertain'd
(So Jove, that urg'd us to our fate ordain'd.)
180
We, with the rising morn our ships unmoor'd,
And brought our captives and our stores aboard;
But half the people with respect obey'd.
The king of men, and at his bidding stay'd.
Now on the wings of winds our course we keep
(For God hath smooth'd the waters of the deep;) 190
For Tenedos we spread our eager ears,
There land, and pay due victims to the powers:
To bless our safe return, we join in prayer;
But angry Jove dispers'd our vows in air,
And rais'd new discord. Then (so Heaven decreed)
Ulysses first and Nestor disagreed:
BOOK III.  THE ODYSSEY.

Wise as he was, by various counsels sway'd,
He there, though late, to please the monarch, stay'd.
But I, determin'd, stem the fomous floods,
Warn'd of the coming fury of the gods.
With us, Tydides fear'd, and urg'd his haste:
And Menelaüs came, but came the last.
He join'd our vessels in the Lesbian bay,
While yet we doubted of our watery way;
If to the right to urge the pilot's toil
(The safer road,) beside the Payrian isle;
Or the straight course to rocky Chios plough,
And anchor under Mimas' shaggy brow.
We sought direction of the power divine:
The god propitious gave the guiding sign;
Through the mid seas he bid our navy steer,
And in Eubea shun the woes we fear.
The whistling winds already wak'd the sky;
Before the whistling winds the vessels fly,
With rapid swiftness cut the liquid way,
And reach Gerestus at the point of day.
There hecatombs of bulls, to Neptune slain,
High-flaming please the monarch of the main.
The fourth day shone, when all their labours o'er,
Tydides' vessels touch'd the wish'd-for shore.
But I to Pylos send before the gales,
The gods still breathing on my swelling sails;
Separate from all, I safely landed here;
Their fates or fortunes never reach'd my ear.
Yet what I learn'd, attend; as here I sate,
And ask'd, each voyager each hero's fate;
Curious to know, and willing to relate.
Safe reach'd the Myrmidons their native land,
Beneath Achilles' warlike son's command.
Those, whom the heir of great Apollo's art,
Brave Philoctetes, taught to wing the dart;
And those whom Idomen from Ilium's plain
Had led, securely cross the dreadful main.
How Agamemnon touch'd his Argive coast,
And how his life by fraud and force he lost,
And how the murderer paid his forfeit breath;
What lands so distant from that scene of death
But trembling heard the fame? and heard, admire
How well the son appeas'd his slaughter'd sire!
Ev'n to th' unhappy, that unjustly bleed,
Heaven gives posterity, t' avenge the deed,
So fell Ægysthus; so may'st thou, my friend
(On whom the virtues of thy sire descend,)
Make future times thy equal act adore,
And be what brave Orestes was before!

The prudent youth reply'd: O thou the grace
And lasting glory of the Grecian race!
Just was the vengeance, and to latest days
Shall long posterity resound the praise.
Some god this arm with equal prowess bless!
And the proud suitors shall its force confess;
Injurious men! who while my soul is sore
Of fresh affronts, are meditating more.
But Heaven denies this honour to my hand,
Nor shall my father re-possess the land:
The father's fortune never to return,
And the sad son's to suffer and to mourn!

Thus he: and Nestor took the word: My son,
Is it then true, as distant rumours run,
That crowds of rivals, for thy mother's charms
Thy palace fill with insults and alarms?
Say, is the fault, through tame submission, thine?
Or, leagu'd against thee, do thy people join,
Mev'd by some oracle, or voices divine?
And yet who knows, but ripening lies in fate
An hour of vengeance for th' afflicted state;
When great Ulysses shall suppress these harms,
Ulysses singly, or all Greece in arms.
But if Athena, war's triumphant maid,
The happy son will, as the father, aid
(Whose fame and safety was her constant care
In every danger and in every war:
Never on man did heave'ly favour shine
With rays so strong, distinguish'd, and divine,
As those with which Minerva mark'd thy sire.)
So might she love thee, so thy soul inspire!
Soon should their hopes in humble dust be laid,
And long oblivion of the bridal bed.
Ah! no such hope (the prince with sighs replies) Can touch my breast; that blessing Heaven denies. Ev'n by celestial favour were it given, Fortune or fate would cross the will of Heaven. What words are these, and what imprudence thine? (Thus interpos'd the martial maid divine) Forgetful youth! but know, the Power above With ease can save each object of his love; Wide as his will, extends his boundless grace: Nor lost in time, nor circumscrib'd by place. Happier his lot, who, many sorrow's past, Long labouring gains his natal shore at last; Then who, too speedy, hastens to end his life By some stern Russian, or adulterous wife. Death only is the lot, which none can miss, And all is possible to Heaven, but this. The best, the dearest favourite of the sky Must taste that cup, for man is born to die. Thus check'd, reply'd Ulysses' prudent heir: Mentor, no more—the mournful thought forbear; For he no more must draw his country's breath, Already snatch'd by fate, and the black doom of death!

Pass we to other subjects; and engage On themes remote the venerable sage (Who thrice has seen the perishable kind Of men decay, and through three ages shin'd Like gods majestic, and like gods in mind;) For much he knows, and just conclusions draws, From various precedents, and various laws. O son of Neleus! awful Nestor, tell How he, the mighty Agamemnon, fell; By what strange fraud Ægisthus wrought, relates (By force he could not) such a hero's fate? Liv'd Menelaus not in Greece? or where Was then the martial brother's pious care? Condemn'd perhaps some foreign shore to tread; Or sure Ægisthus had not dard the deed. To whom the fall of days. Illustrious youth, Attend (though partly thou hast guest) the truth,
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK III.

For had the martial Menelaus found
The ruffian breathing yet on Argive ground;
Nor earth had hid his carcass from the skies,
Nor Grecian virgin shrunk'd his obsequies,
But fowls obscene dismembered his remains,
And dogs had torn him on the naked plains,
While us the works of bloody Mars employ'd,
The wanton youth inglorious peace enjoy'd;
He, stretch'd at ease in Argos' calm recess
(Whose stately steeds luxuriant-pastures bless,)
With flattery's insinuating art
Sooth'd the frail queen, and poison'd all her heart.
At first, with worthy shame and decent pride,
The royal dame his lawless suit deny'd.
For virtue's image yet possess her mind,
Taught by a master of the tuneful kind;
Atrides, parting for the Trojan war,
Consign'd the youthful consort to his care.
True to his charge, the bard preserv'd her long
In honour's limits; such the power of song.
But when the gods these objects of their hate
Dragg'd to destruction by the links of fate;
The bard they banish'd from his native soil,
And left all helpless in a desert isle:
There he, the sweetest of the sacred train,
Sung dying to the rocks, but sung in vain.
Then virtue was no more; her guard away,
She fell, to lust a voluntary prey.

Ev'n to the temple stalk'd th' adulterous spouse,
With impious thanks, and mockery of vows,
With images, with garments, and with gold;
And odorous fumes from loaded altars roll'd.

Meantime from flaming Troy we cut the way,
With Menelaus, through the curling sea.
But when to Sounion's sacred point we came,
Crown'd with the temple of th' Athenian dame;
Atrides' pilot, Phrontes, there expir'd
(Phrontes, of all the sons of men admir'd)
To steer the bounding bark with steady toil,
When the storm thickens, and the billows boil;)

While yet he exercised the steersman's art,
Apollo touch'd him with his gentle dart;
Ev'n with the rudder in his hand, he fell.

To pay whose honours to the shades of hell,
We cheer'd our haste, by pious office bound,
And laid our old companion in the ground.

And now, the rites discharge'd, our course we keep
Far on the groovy beams of the deep:

Soon as Malva's misty tops arise,
Sudden the Thunderer blackens all the skies,
And the winds whistle, and the surges roll
Mountains on mountains, and obscure the pole.
The tempest scatters, and divides our fleet;

Part, the storm urges on the coast of Crete,
Where winding round the rich Cretan plain,
The streams of Jordan issue to the main.
There stands a rock, high-eminent and steep,
Whose shaggy brow o'wrhangs the shady deep,
And views Gortyna on the western side;

On this rough Auster drove th' impetuous tide:
With broken force the billows roll'd away,
And heav'd the fleet into th' neigh'ring bay.
Thus sav'd from death, they gain'd the Phaestan shores,
With shatter'd vessels and disabled oars;

But five tall barks the winds and waters test,
Far from their fellows on th' Egyptian coast.

There wander'd Menelaus through foreign shores,
Amassing gold, and gathering naval stores,

While unstaid Egyptus the detested deed
By fraud fulfill'd, and his great brother bled.
Seven years, the traitor rich Mycenae sway'd,
And his stern rule the groaning land obey'd;
The eighth, from Athens to his realm restored,
Orestes brandish'd the revenging sword,
Slew the dire pair, and gave to funeral flame
The vile assassin, and adulterous dame.
That day, ere yet the bloody triumphs cease,
Return'd Atrides to the coast of Greece,
And safe to Argos' port his navy brought,
With gifts of price, and ponderous treasure fraught,
Hence warn'd, my son, beware! nor idly stand
Too long a stranger to thy native land;
Lost heedless absence wear thy wealth away,
While lawless feasters in thy palace sway;
Perhaps may seize thy realm, and share the spoil;
And thou return, with disappointed toil,
From thy vain journey to a rifled isle.
Howe'er, my friend, indulge one labour more,
And seek Atrides on the Spartan shore.
He, wandering long, a wider circle made,
And many languag'd nations has survey'd;
And measur'd tracts unknown to other ships
Amid the monstrous wonders of the deeps
(A length of ocean and unbounded sky,
Which scarce the sea-fowl in a year o'erfly.)
Go then; to Sparta take the watery way,
Thy ship and sailors but for orders stay;
Or, if by land thou choose thy course to bend,
My steeds, my chariote, and my sons, attend:
Thee to Atrides they shall safe convey,
Guides of thy road, companions of thy way.
Urge him with truth to frame his free replies,
And sure he will: for Menelaus is wise.

Thus while he speaks the ruddy sun descends,
And twilight grey her evening shade extends.
Then thus the blue-ey'd maid: O full of days!
Wise are thy words, and just are all thy ways.
Now immolate the tongues, and mix the wine,
Sacred to Neptune and the powers divine.
The lamp of day is quench'd beneath the deep,
And soft approach the balmy hours of sleep:
Nor fits it to prolong the heavenly feast,
Timeless, indecent, but retire to rest.

So spake Jove's daughter, the celestial maid.
The sober train attended and obey'd.
The sacred heralds on their hands around
Pour'd the full uras; the youths the goblets crown'd;
From bowl to bowl the holy beverage flows;
While to the final sacrifice they rose.
The tongues they cast upon the fragrant flame,
And pour, above, the consecrated stream.
And now, their thirst by copious draughts allay'd,
The youthful hero and th' Athenian maid
Propose departure from the finish'd rite,
And in their hollow bark to pass the night:
But this the hospitable sage deny'd.
Forbid it Jove! and all the gods! he cry'd,
Thus from my walls the much-lov'd son to send.
Of such a hero, and of such a friend!
Me, as some needy peasant, would ye leave,
Whom heaven denies the blessing to relieve?
Me would ye leave who boast imperial sway,
When beds of royal state invite your stay?
No—long as life this mortal shall inspire,
Or as my children imitate their sire.
Here shall the wandering stranger find his home,
And hospitable rites adorn the dome.
    Well hast thou spoke (the blue-ey'd maid replies.)
Belov'd old man! benevolent as wise.
Be the kind dictates of thy heart obey'd,
And let thy words Telemachus persuade;
He to thy palace shall thy steps pursue;
I to the ship to give the orders due,
Prescribe directions and confirm the crew.
For I alone sustain their naval cares,
Who boast experience from these silver hairs;
All youths the rest, whom to this journey move
Like years, like tempers, and their princes love.
There in the vessel shall I pass the night;
And soon as morning paints the fields of light,
I go to challenge from the Caucans bold,
A debt, contracted in the days of old.
But this thy guest, received with friendly care,
Let thy strong course swift to Sparta bear;
Prepare thy chariot at the dawn of day,
And be thy son companion of his way.
    Then turning with the word, Minerva flies,
And soars an eagle through the liquid skies.
Vision divine! the throng'd spectators gaze
In holy wonder fix'd, and still amaze.
But chief the reverend sage admir'd; he took
The hand of young Telemachus, and spoke.
Oh, happy youth! and favour'd of the skies,
Distinguish'd care of guardian deities!
Whose early years for future worth engage,
No vulgar manhood, no ignoble age.
For lo! none other of the court above
Than she, the daughter of almighty Jove,
Pallas herself, the war-triumphant maid,
Confest is thine, as once thy father's aid.
So guide me, goddess; so propitious shine
On me, my consort, and my royal line!
A yearling bullock to thy name shall smoke,
Untam'd, unconscious of the yoking yoke,
With ample forehead, and yet tender horns,
Whose budding honours ductile gold adorns.
Submissive thus the hoary sire preferr'd
His holy vow: the favouring goddess heard.
Then, slowly rising, o'er the sandy space
Precedes the father, fellow'd by his race,
(A long procession) timely marching home
In comely order to the regal dome.
There when arriv'd, on thrones around him plac'd,
His sons and grandsons the wide circle grac'd.
To these the hospitable sage, in sign
Of social welcome, mix'd the racy wine
(Late from the mellowing cask restor'd to light,
By ten long years refine'd, and rosy bright).
To Pallas high the foaming bowl he crown'd,
And sprinkled large libations on the ground.
Each drinks a full oblivion of his cares,
And to the gifts of balmy sleep repairs.
Deep in a rich alcove the prince was laid,
And slept beneath the pompous colonnade:
Fast by his side Pisistratus lay spread,
(In age his equal) on a splendid bed:
But in an inner court, securely clos'd,
The reverend Nestor and his queen repos'd.
BOOK III. THE ODYSSEY.

When now Aurora, daughter of the dawn,
With rosy lustre purpled o'er the lawn;
The old man early rose, walk'd forth, and sate
On polish'd stone before his palace gate:
With ungents smooth the lucid marble shone,
Where ancient Nausicaa sat, a rustic throne;
But he descending to th' infernal shade,
Sage Nestor fill'd it, and the sceptre sway'd.
His sons around him mild obeisance pay,
And duties take the orders of the day.

First Echephron and Stratius quit their bed:
Then Perseus, Arctus, and Thraseymed;
The last Pisistratus arose from rest:
They came, and near him plac'd the stranger-guest.
To these the senhor thus declar'd his will:
My sons! the dictates of your sire fulfil.
To Pallas, first of gods, prepare the feast,
Who grace'd our rites, a more than mortal guest.
Let one, dispatchful, bid some awain to lead
A well-fed bullock from the grassy mead;
One seek the harbour where the vessels moor,
And bring thy friends, Telismachus! ashore
Leave only two the galley to attend;
Another to Laercæus must we send,
Artist divine, whose skilful hands infold
The victims' horn with circumvallae gold.
The rest may here the piows duty share,
And bid the handmaids for the feast prepare,
The seats to range, the fragrant wood to bring,
And limpid waters from the living spring.

He said, and busy each his care bestow'd;
Already at the gates the bullock low'd:
Already came the Ithacanian crew,
The dextrous smith the tools already drew:
His ponderous hammer and his anvil sound,
And the strong tongs to turn the metal round.
Nor was Minerva absent from the rite,
She view'd her honours, and enjov'd the sight.
With reverence hand the king presents the gold,
Which round th' interted horns the gilder rol'd,
So wrought, as Pallas might with pride behold.
Young Aretus from forth his bridal bower
Brought the full laver, o'er their hands to pour,
And canisters of consecrated flour.
Stratius and Echephoron the victim led;
The ax was held by warlike Thrasymed,
In act to strike; before him Perseus stood,
The vase extending to receive the blood.
The king himself initiates to the power;
Scatters with quivering hand the sacred flour,
And the stream sprinkles: from the curling brow
The hair collected in the fire he throws.
Soon as due vows on every part were paid,
And sacred wheat upon the victim laid,
Strong Thrasymed discharg'd the speeding blow
Full on his neck, and cut the nerves in two.
Down sunk the heavy beast: the females round,
Maids, wives, and matrons, mix a shrilling sound.
Nor scorn'd the queen the holy choir to join
(The first-born she, of old Clymenus' line);
In youth by Nestor lov'd, of spotless fame,
And lov'd in age, Eurydice her name.)
From earth they rear him; struggling now with death;
And Nestor's youngest stops the vents of breath.
The soul for ever flies: on all sides round
Streams the black blood, and smokes upon the ground.
The beast they then divide, and disunite
The ribs and limbs, observant of the rite:
On these, in double cawis involv'd with art,
The choicest morsels lay from every part.
The sacred sage before his altar stands,
Turns the burnt-offering with his holy hands,
And pours the wine, and bids the flames aspire:
The youth with instruments surround the fire.
The thighs now sacrific'd, and entrails drest,
Th' assistants part, transfix, and broil the rest.
While these officious tend the rites divine,
The last fair branch of the Nestorean line,
Sweet Polycastè, took the pleasing toil
To bathe the prince, and pour the fragrant oil.
BOOK III. THE ODYSSEY.

O'er his fair limbs a flowery vest he threw,
And issued, like a god, to mortals' view.
His former seat beside the king he found
His people's father with his peers around;
All plac'd at ease the holy banquet join,
And in the dazzling goblet laughs the wine.

The rage of thirst and hunger now suppress,
The monarch turns him to his royal guest;
And for the promis'd journey bids prepare
The smooth-hair'd horses, and the rapid car.
Observant of his word; the word scarce spoke,
The sons obey, and join them to the yoke.
Then bread and wine a ready handmaid brings,
And presents, such as suit the state of kings.
The glittering seat Telemachus ascends;
His faithful guide Pisistratus attends;
With hasty hand the ruling reins he drew:
He lash'd the coursers, and the coursers flew,
Beneath the bounding yoke alike they held
Their equal pace, and smok'd along the field.
The towers of Pylos sink, its views decay,
Fields after fields fly back, till close of day:
Then sunk the sun and darken'd all the way.

To Phere: now, Diocleus' stately seat (Of Alpheus' race,) the weary youths retreat.
His house affords the hospitable site,
And pleas'd they sleep (the blessing of the night.)
But when Aurora, daughter of the dawn,
With rosy lustre purpled o'er the land;
Again they mount, their journey to renew,
And from the sounding portico they flew.
Along the waving fields their way they hold,
The fields receding as the chariot roll'd:
Then slowly sunk the ruddy globe of light,
And o'er the shaded landscape rush'd the night.
ARGUMENT.

The Conference with Menelaus.

Telemachus with Pseistratus arriving at Sparta, is hospitably received by Menelaus, to whom he relates the cause of his coming, and learns from him many particulars of what befell the Greeks since the destruction of Troy. He dwells more at large upon the prophecies of Proteus to him in his return; from which he acquaints Telemachus, that Ulysses is detained in the island of Calypso.

In the mean time the suitors consult to destroy Telemachus in his voyage home. Penelope is apprised of this; but comforted in a dream by Pallas, in the shape of her sister Iphthimæ.
BOOK IV.

And now proud Sparta with their wheels resounds, Sparta whose walls a range of hills surrounds: At the fair some the rapid labour ends; Where state Atrides ’midst his bridal friends, With double vows invoking Hymen’s power, To bless his son’s and daughter’s nuptial hour. That day, to great Achilles’ son resign’d, Hermione, the fairest of her kind, Was sent to crown the long-protracted joy, Espous’d before the final doom of Troy: With steeds and gilded cars, a gorgeous train Attend the nymph to Phthia’s distant reign. Meanwhile at home, to Megapenthes’ bed The virgin-choir Alecto’s daughter led. Brave Megapenthes, from a stol’n amour To great Atrides’ age his hand-maid bore: To Helen’s bed the gods alone assign Hermione, t’ extend the regal line; On whom a radiant pomp of Graces wait, Resembling Venus in attractive state. While this gay friendly troop the king surround, With festival and mirth the roofs resound: A bard amid the joyous circle sings High airs, attemper’d to the vocal strings; Whilst warbling to the varied strain, advance Two sprightly youths to form the bounding dance. ’Twas then, that, issuing through the palace gate, The splendid car roll’d slow in regal state: On the bright eminence young Nestor shone, And fast beside him great Ulysses’ son: Grave Eteocles saw the pomp appear, And speeding, thus address’d the royal ear. Two youths approach, whose semblant features prove Their blood devolving from the source of Jove. To due reception deign’d, or must they bend Their doubtful course to seek a distant friend?
THE ODYSSEY.

Book IV.

Insensate! (with a sigh the king replies,)
Too long, misjudging, have I thought thee wise;
But sure relentless folly steels thy breast,
Obdurate to reject the stranger-guest;
To those dear hospitable rights a foe,
Which in my wanderings oft reliev’d my woe:
Fed by the bounty of another’s board,
Till pitying Jove my native realm restor’d—
Straight be the coursers from the car releas’d,
Conduct the youths to grace the genial feast.

The seneschal rebuk’d in haste withdrew;
With equal haste a menial train pursue:
Part led the coursers, from the car enlarg’d,
Each to a crib with choicest grain surcharg’d,
Part in a portico, profusely grac’d
With rich magnificence, the chariot plac’d:
Then to the dome the friendly pair invite,
Who eye the dazzling roofs with vast delight;
Resplendent as the blaze of summer-noon,
Or the pale radiance of the midnight moon.
From room to room their eager view they bend;
Thence to the bath, a beauteous pile, descend;
Where a bright damsel-train attend the guests
With liquid odours, and embroider’d vests.
Refresh’d, they wait them to the bower of state,
Where circled with his peers Atrides sat:
Thron’d next the king, a fair attendant brings
The purest product of the crystal springs;
High on a massy vase of silver mould,
The burnish’d laver flames with solid gold;
In solid gold the purple vintage flows,
And on the board a second banquet rose;
When thus the king with hospitable port:
Accept this welcome to the Spartan court;
The waste of nature let the feast repair,
Then your high lineage and your names declare;
Sey from what scepter’d ancestry ye claim,
Recorded eminent in deathless fame?
For vulgar parents cannot stamp their race
With signatures of such majestic grace.
BOOK IV. THE ODYSSEY. 50

Ceasing, benevolent he straight assigns
The royal portion of the choicest chimes
To each accepted friend: with grateful haste
They share the honours of the rich repast;
Suffic'd, soft whispering thus to Nestor's son,
His head reclin'd, young Ithacus begun.

View'st thou unmov'd, O ever-honour'd most!
These prodigies of art, and wondrous cost!
Above, beneath, around the palace shines
The sumless treasure of exhausted mines:
The spoils of elephants the roofs inlay,
And studded amber darts a golden ray:
Such, and not nobler, in the realms above
My wonder dictates is the dome of Jove.

The monarch took the word, and grave reply'd,
Presumptuous are the vaunts, and vain the pride
Of man, who dares in pomp with Jove contest,
Unchang'd, immortal, and supremely blest!
With all my affluence when my woes are weigh'd, 95
Envy will own the purchase dearly paid.
For eight slow-circling years by tempests lost,
From Cyprus to the far Phoenician coast
(Sidon the capital,) I stretch'd my toil
Through regions fatten'd with the flows of Nile. 100
Next, Ethiopia's utmost bound explore,
And the parch'd borders of th' Arabian shore:
Then warp my voyage on the southern gales,
O'er the warm Lybian wave to spread my sails:
That happy clime! where each revolving year
The teeming ewes a triple offspring bear;
And two fair crescents of translucent horn
The brows of all their young increase adorn:
The shepherd swains, with sure abundance blest,
On the fat flock and rural dainties feast; 110
Nor want of herbage makes the dairy fail,
But every season fills the foaming pail.
Whilst, heaping unwish'd wealth, I distant roam;
The best of brothers at his natal home,
By the dire fury of a traitress wife,
ends the sad evening of a stormy life:
Whence with incessant grief my soul annum'd,
These riches are possessed, but not enjoy'd!
My wars, the copious theme of every tongue;
To you, your fathers have recorded long:
How favouring heaven repaid my glorious toils
With a sack'd palace, and barbaric spoils.
Oh! had the gods so large a boon deny'd.
And life, the just equivalent supply'd.
To those brave warriors, who, with glory fill'd;
Far from their country, in my cause expir'd!
Still in short intervals of pleasing war,
Regardful of the friendly dice I owe,
I to the glorious dead Sir-ever dear!
Indulge the tribute of a grateful tear.

But oh! Ulysses—deeper than the rest!
That sad idea wounds my anxious breast!
My heart bleeds fresh with agonizing pain;
The bowl and tasteless viands tempt in vain;
Nor sleep's soft power can close my streaming eyes,
When imag'd, to my soul his sorrows rise.
No peril in my cause: he cease'd to prove,
His labours equal'd only by my love;
And both alike to bitter fortune born.
For him to suffer, and for me to mourn!
Whether he wanders on some friendless coast,
Or glides in Stygian gloom a passing ghost,
No fame reveals, but doubtful of his doom.
His good old sire with sorrow to the tomb
Declines, his trembling steps; untimely care
Withers the blooming vigour of his hair;
And the choice partner of his bed and throne
Wastes all her widow'd hours in tender mourn.

While thus pathetic to the prince he spoke
From the brave youth the streaming passion breaks.
Studious to veil the grief, in vain represt.
His face he shrouded with his purple vest:
The conscious monarch pierc'd the coy disguise,
And view'd his fatal love with vast surprise:
Doubtless to press the tender theme, or wait
To bear the youth inquire his father's fate.
In this suspense bright Helen graced the room;
Before her breath’d a gale of rich perfume.
So moves, adorn’d with each attractive grace,
The silv’ry-shafted goddess of the chase;
The seat of majesty, Atrides brings,
With art illustrious, for the pomp of kings;
To spread the pall (beneath the regal chain)
Of softest wool, is bright Alcippa’s care,
A silver canister, divinely wrought,
In her soft hands the beauteousPay in brought;
To Sparta’s queen, of old, the nation gave
Alcandra gave a pledge of royal grace:
For Polybus her lord (whose sovereignty sway
The wealthy tribes of Phoensis-Thebes obey),
When to that court Atrides came, esteem
With vast magnificence th’ imperial guest:
Two layers from the richest ore refin’d,
With silver tripod the kind host assign’d;
And bounteous from the royal treasure told
Ten equal talents of resplendent gold.
Alcandra, consort of his high command,
A golden distaff gave to Helen’s hand;
And that rich vase, with living sculpture wrought,
Which heap’d with wool the beauteousPay in brought;
The silken fume impregnated for the house,
Rival’d the hyacinth inernal bloom.
The sovereign seat then Jove-born Helen press’d,
And pleasing thus her scepter’d lord address’d.
Who grace our palace now, that friendly pair,
Speak they their lineage, or their names declare?
Uncertain of the truth, yet unconstrued
Hear me, the bodings of my breast unfold,
With wonder wrapt, on yonder cheek I trace
The feature of the Ulyssian race;
Diffus’d o’er each resembling line appear,
In just similitude, the grace and air
Of young Telamone, the lovely boy,
Who bless’d Ulysses with a father’s joy,
What time the Greeks combin’d their social arms,
To avenge the stain of my ill-fated cause.
Just is thy thought, the king assenting cries,
Methinks Ulysses strikes my wondering eyes:
Full shines the father in the filial frame,
His port, his features, and his shape the same:
Such quick regards his sparkling eyes bestow;
Such wavy ringlets o'er his shoulders flow!
And when he heard the long disastrous store
Of cares, which in my cause Ulysses bore;
Dismay'd, heart-wounded with paternal woes,
Above restraint the tide of sorrow rose:
Cautious to let the gushing grief appear,
His purple garment veil'd the falling tear.

See there confest, Pisistratus replies,
The genuine worth of Ithacus the wise!
Of that heroic sire the youth is sprung,
But modest awe hath chain'd his timorous tongue:
Thy voice, O king! with pleas'd attention heard,
Is like the dictates of a god rever'd.
With him, at Nestor's high command I came,
Whose age I honour with a parent's name.
By adverse destiny constrain'd to see
For counsel and redress, he sue's to you.
Whatever ill the friendless orphan bears,
Bereav'd of parents in his infant years,
Still must the wrong'd Telemachus sustain,
If, hopeful of your aid, he hopes in vain:
Affianc'd in your friendly power alone,
The youth would vindicate the vacant throne.

In Sparta blest, and these desiring eyes
View my friend's son? (the king exulting cries;)
Son of my friend, by glorious toils approv'd,
Whose sword was sacred to the man he lov'd:
Mirror of constant faith, rever'd and mourn'd!
When Troy was ruin'd, had the chief return'd,
No Greek an equal space had e'er possess'd,
Of dear affection in my grateful breast.
I, to confirm the mutual joys we shar'd,
For his abode a capital prepar'd;
Argos the seat of sovereign rule I chose;
Fair in the plan the future palace rose.
BOOK IV.  THE ODYSSEY.

Where my Ulysses and his race might reign,
And portion to his tribes the wide domain.
To them my vessels had assign'd a soil,
With teeming plenty to reward their toil.

There with commutual seal we both had strow
In acts of dear benevolence and love:
Brothers in peace, not rivals in command,
And death alone dissolv'd the friendly band!

Some envious power the blissful scene destroys;
Vanish'd are all the visionary joys;
The soul of friendship to my hope is lost,
Fated to wander from his natal coast!

He cease'd; a gust of grief began to rise,
Past streams a tide from beauteous Helen's eyes;
Past for the air the filial arrows flew;

The weeping monarch swells the mighty wave;
Thy cheeks, Phœbus' seat, the tears below,
While picture'd to thy mind appear'd in view
Thy martial brother: on the Thrygian plain
Extended pale, by awry Mennon slain!

But silence soon the son of Nestor broke,
And melting with fraternal pity spoke:

Frequent, O king, was Nestor wont to raise
And charm attention with thy copious praise:
To crown thy various gifts, the sage assign'd
The glory of a firm capacious mind:
With that superior attribute contend
This unavailing importance of soul.

Let not your roof with echoing grief resound,
Now for the feast the friendly bowl is crown'd:
Sat when from dewy shade emerging bright,
Aurora streaks the sky with orient light,
Sat each deplore his doom; the rites of woe
Are all, alas! the living em'rbelow:
O'er the congenial dust saijoin'd to shear
The graceful curl, and drop the tender tear.
Then, mingling in the mournful pomp with you,
I'll pay my brother's ghost a warrior's due,
And mourn the brave Antilochus, a name
Not unrecorded in the rolls of fame:
With strength and speed superior form'd, in sight
To face the foe, or intercept his flight:
Too early snatch'd by fate ere known to me!
I boast a witness of his worth in thee.
Young and mature! the monarch thus rejoins,
In thee renew'd the soul of Nestor shines:
Form'd by the care of that consummate sage,
In early bloom an oracle of age.
Whene'er his influence Jove vouchsafes to shower,
To bless the natal, and the nuptial hour;
From the great sire transmissive to the race,
The boon devolving gives distinguish'd grace.
Such, happy Nestor! was thy glorious doom;
Around thee full of years, thy offspring bloom,
Expert of arms, and prudent in debate;
The gifts of heaven to guard thy hoary state.
But now let each becalm his troubled breast,
Wash, and partake serene the friendly feast.
To move thy suit, Telemachus, delay,
Till heaven's revolving lamp restores the day.
He said, Asphalion swift the laten brings;
Alternate all partake the grateful springs:
Then from the rites of purity repair,
And with keen gust the savoury viands share.
Meantime, with genial joy to warm the soul,
Bright Helen mix'd a mirth-inspiring bowl:
Temper'd with drugs of sovereign use, t' assuage
The boiling bosom of tumultuous rage;
To clear the cloudy front of wrinkled Care,
And dry the tearful sluices of Despair:
Charm'd with that virtuous draught, th' exalted mind
All sense of woe delivers to the wind.
Though on the blazing pile his parent lay,
Or a lov'd brother groan'd his life away,
Or darling son, oppress'd by ruffian-force,
Fell breathless at his feet, a mangled corpse;
From morn to eve, impassive and serene,
The man entranc'd would view the deathful scene.
BOOK IV. THE ODYSSEY.

These drugs, so friendly to the joys of life,
Bright Helen learn'd from Thone's imperial wife;
Who sway'd the sceptre, where prolific Nile
With various simples clothes the fatter'd soil.
With wholesome herbage mix'd, the direful bane
Of vegetable venom taints the plain;
From Paeon sprang, their patron-god imparts
To all his Pharian race his healing arts.
The beverage now prepar'd t' inspire the feast,
The circle thus the beauteous queen address:

Thron'd in omnipotence, supremest Jove
Tempers the fates of human race above;
By the firm sanction of his sovereign will,
Alternate are decreed our good and ill.
To festal mirth be this white hour assign'd,
And sweet discourse, the banquet of the mind.
Myself, assisting in the social joy,
Will tell Ulysses' bold exploit in Troy,
Sole witness of the deed I now declare:
Speak you, (who saw) his wonders in the war.

Seam'd o'er with wounds, which his own sabre gave,
In the vile habit of a village-slave,
The foe deceiv'd, he pass'd the tented plain,
In Troy to mingle with the hostile train.
In this attire, secure from searching eyes,
Till haply piercing through the dark disguise
The chief I chanc'd; he, whose practis'd wit
Knew all the serpent masses of deceit,
Bludes my search: but when his form I view'd
Fresh from the bath with fragrant oils renew'd,
His limbs in military purple dress'd;
Each brightening grace the genuine Greek confess'd.
A previous pledge of sacred faith obtain'd,
Till he the lines and Argive fleet regain'd,
To keep his stay conceal'd; the chief declar'd
The plans of war against the town prepar'd.
Exploring then the secrets of the state,
He learn'd what best might urge the Dardan fate!
And, safe returning to the Grecian host,
Sent many a shade to Pluto's dreary coast.
Loud grief resounded thro' the towers of Troy,
But my plans'd horrors glow'd with secret joy:
For then, with dire remorse and consciente shame,
I view'd th' effects of that disastrous flame,
Which, kindled by th' imperious queen of love,
Constrain'd me from my native realm to sve:
And oft in bitterness of soul despoil'd,
My absent daughter, and my dearer lord;
Admir'd among the first of human race,
For every gift of mind and manly grace.

Right well, reply'd the king, your speech displays
The matchless merit of the chief you praise:
Heroes in various climes myself have found,
For martial deeds and depth of thought renown'd;
But Ithacus, unrival'd in his claim,
May boast a title to the lowest fame:
In battle calm, he guided the rapid storm,
Wise to resolve, and patient to perform.

What wondrous conduct in the chief appear'd,
When the vast fabric of the steed we rear'd!
Some daemon, anxious for the Trojan doom,
Uspy'd you with great Deiphobus to come,
'T explors the fraud; with guile oppos'd to guile,
Slow-pacing thrice around th' insidious pile;
Each noted leader's name you thrice invoke,
Your accent varying as their spouts spoke:
The pleasing sounds each latent warrior warm'd,
But most Tydides' and my heart alarm'd:
To quell the steed, we both impatient press,
Threatening to answer from the dark recess.
Uamov'd the mind of Ithacus remain'd:
And the vain ardours of our love restrain'd;
But Anticlea, unable to control,
Spoke loud the language of his yearning soul:
Ulysses straight, with indignation fir'd
(For so the common care of Greece require'd,) Firm to his lips his forceful hands apply'd,
Till on his tongue the floating murmurs dy'd.
Meantime Minerva, from the fraudful horse,
Bock to the court of Priam beat your course.
BOOK IV, THE ODYSSEY.

Inclined fate! Telamonis replies;
Frail is the boasted attribute of wise;
The leader, mingling with the vulgar host,
Is in the common mass of matter lost!
But now let sleep the painful waste repair
Of sad reflection, and corroding care.

He cease'd; the menial fair that round her wait,
At Helen's back prepare the room of state;
Beneath an ample portico they spread
The downy fleece to form the sumptuous bed;
And o'er soft palms of purple grain, unfold
Rich tapestry, stiff with inwoven gold:
Then through th' illumin'd dome, to balmy rest
Th' obsequious herald guides each princely guest;
While to his regal bower the king ascends,
And beauteous Helen on her lord attends.

Soon as the morn, in orient purple drest,
Unbar'd the portal of the resplendent,
The monarch rose, magnificent to view,
Wh' imperial mantle o'er his vest he threw;
The glittering zone ashwart his shoulder cast,
A starry falchion low-depending grace'd;
Clasp'd on his feet th' embroider'd sandals shine;
And forth he moves, majestic and divine:
Instant to young Telamon he press'd,
And thus benevolent his speech address'd:

Say, royal youth, sincere of soul, report
What cause hath led you to the Spartan court?
Do public or domestic cares constrain
This toilsome voyage o'er the surgy main?

O highly-favoured delegate of Jove!
(Replies the prince;) inflam'd with filial love,
And anxious hopes, to hear my parent's doom,
A suppliant to your royal court I come.
Our sovereign sent-a lowd murmuring race
With lawless riot and misrule disgrace;
To pamper'd insolence devoted fall
Prime of the flock, and oldest of the stall;
For wild ambition wings their bold desire,
And all to mount th' imperial bed aspire.
But prostrate I implore; oh king! relate
The mournful series of my father's fate:
Each known disaster of the man disclose,
Born by his mother to a world of woes!
Recite them; nor in erring pity fear
To wound with storied grief the filial ear:
If e'er Ulysses, to reclaim your right,
Avow'd his zeal in council or in fight,
If Phrygian camps the friendly toils attest,
To the sire's merit give the son's request.
Deep from his inmost soul Atrides sigh'd,
And thus indignant to the prince reply'd:
Heavens! would a soft, inglorious dastard train
An absent hero's nuptial joys profane!
So with her young, amid the woodland shades,
A timorous hind the lion's court invades,
Leaves in that fatal lair the tender fawns,
Climbs the green cliff, or feeds the flowery lawns:
Meantime return'd; with dire remorseless sway
The monarch-savage rends the trembling prey.
With equal fury, and with equal fame,
Ulysses soon shall re-assert his claim.
O Jove, supreme, whom gods and men revere!
And thou to whom 'tis given to gild the sphere!
With power congenial join'd, propitious aid
The chief adopted by the martial maid!
Such to our wish the warrior soon restore,
As when contending on the Lesbian shore
His prowess Philomelides confess'd,
And loud-acclaiming Greeks the victor bless'd:
Then soon th' invaders of his bed and throne
Their love presumptuous shall with life atone.
With patient ear, O royal youth, attend
The storied labours of thy father's friend:
Fruitful of deeds, the copious tale is long,
But truth severe shall dictate to my tongue;
Learn what I heard the sea-born seer relate,
Whose eye can pierce the dark recess of fate.

* Apollo.
BOOK IV. THE ODYSSEY.

Long on th' Egyptian coast by calms coursed, Heaven to my fleet refus'd a prosperous wind; No vows had we preferr'd, nor victims slain! For this the gods each favouring gale restrain; Jealous, to see their high behests obey'd; Severe, if men th' eternal rights evade. High o'er a gulfy sea, the Pharian isle Fronts the deep roar of disemboguing Nile: Her distance from the shore, the course begun At dawn, and ending with the setting sun, A galley measures; when the stiffer gales Rise on the poop, and fully stretch the sails, There, anchor'd vessels safe in harbour lie, Whilst limpid springs the failing cask supply. And now the twentieth sun, descending, laves His glowing axle in the western waves; Still with expanded sails we court in vain Propitious winds to waft us o'er the main: And the pale mariner at once deplores His drooping vigour and exhausted stores, When lo! a bright cerulean form appears, The fair Eidothea! to dispel my fears; Proteus her sire divine. With pity press'd, Me sole the daughter of the deep address'd; What time, with hunger pin'd, my absent mates Roam the wild isle in search of rural cates, Bait the barb'd steel, and from the fishy flood Appease th' afflicting fierce desire of food. Whose'er thou art (the asure goddess cries) Thy conduct ill deserves the praise of wise: Is death thy choice, or misery thy boast, That here inglorious on a barren coast Thy brave associates droop, a meagre train With famine pale, and ask thy care in vain? Struck with the kind reproach, I straight reply; Whate'er thy title in thy native sky, A goddess sure! for more than mortal grace Speaks thee descendant of ethereal race: Deem not, that here of choice my fleet remains; Some heavenly power averse my stay constrains:
O, pieces of my fate, vouchsafe to show
(For what's sequester'd from celestial view?)
What power becalms the un navigable seas?
What guilt provokes him, and what vows appease?
I cease'd, when all the goddess said;
Observe, and in the truths I speak confide;
Th' oracular seer frequents the Phocian coast,
From whose high bed my birth divine I boast;
Proteus, a name tremendous o'er the main,
The delegate of Neptune's watery reign,
Watch with insidious care his known abode;
There fast in chains constrain the various god:
Who bound, obedient to superior force,
Unerring will prescribe your destin'd course.
If, studious of your realms, you then demand
Their state, since last you left your natal land;
Instant the god obsequious will disclose
Height wards of glory, or a cloud of woes.
She cease'd: and suppliant thus I made reply:
O goddess! on thy aid my hopes rely;
Dictate propitious to my destin'd ear,
What arts can captivate the changeful seer;
Her perilous th' assay, uneven'd the toil,
T' elude the presence of a god by guile.
Thus to the goddess mild my suit I end.
Then she, Obedient to my word, attend:
When thro' the zone of heaven the mounted sun
Hath journey'd half, and half remains to run;
The seer, while nepsyrs curl the swelling deep,
Busks on the breeze above, in grateful sleep,
His oozing limbs. Emerging from the wave,
The Phocæa swift surround his rocky cave,
Frequent and full; the consecrated train
Of her, whose sacred trident awes the main:
There wallowing warm, th' enormous herd exhales
An oily steam, and taints the noon-tide gales.
To that recess, commodious for surprise,
When purple light shall next diffuse the skies,

* Amphitrite.
BOOK IV.  THE ODYSSEY.

With me repair; and from thy warrior-band
Three chosen chiefs of dauntless soul command:
Let their auxiliar force befriend the toil;
For strong the god, and perfected in guile.
Stretch'd on the shelvy shore, he first surveys
The bounching herd ascending from the seas;
Their number sum'ld, repose'd in sleep profound
The scaly charge the guardian god surround:
So with his battening flocks the careful swain
Abides pavilion'd on the grassy plain.

With powers united, obstinately bold
Invade him, couch'd amid the scaly fold:
Instant he wears, elusive of the rape,
The mimic force of every savage shape;
Or glides with liquid lapse a murmuring stream.
Or, wrapt in flame, he glows at every limb.
Yet still retentive, with redoubled might,
Through each vain passive form constrain his flight.
But when, his native shape resum'd, he stands
Patient of conquest, and your cause demands;
The cause that urg'd the bold attempt declare,
And sooths the vanquish'd with a victor's prayer.
The bands relax'd, implore the seer to say
What godhead interdicts the watery way?
Who, straight propitious, in prophetic strain
Will teach you to repass th' unmeasur'd main.
She ceas'd, and bounding from the shelvy shore,
Round the descending nymph the waves redound-
ing roar.

High wrapt in wonder of the future deed,
With joy impetuous, to the port I speed:
The wants of nature with repast suffice,
Till night with grateful shade involv'd the skies,
And shed ambrosial dews. Fast by the deep,
Along the teated shore, in balmy sleep,
Our cares were lest. When o'er the eastern lawn,
In saffron robes, the daughter of the dawn
Advanc'd her rosy steps; before the bay,
Due ritual honours to the gods I pay;
Then seek the nymph the sea-born nymph assigned,
With three associates of undaunted mind.
Arriv’d, to form along the appointed strand
For each a bed, she scoops the hilly sand:
Then, from her assur’d car the finny spoils,
Of four vast Phoebus takes, to veil her limbs:
Beneath the finny spoils, extended prone.

Hard toil! the prophet’s piercing eye to shun;
New from the corse, the scaly hag, diffuse
Unsavoury stench of oil, and brackish oozes:
But the bright sea-maid’s gentle power implored,
With nectar’d drops the sickening sense restore’d.

Thus till the sun had travell’d half the skies,
Ambush’d we lie, and wait the bold espiaze:
When, thronging thick to bask in open air,
The flocks of Ocean to the strand repair:
Couch’d on the sunny sand, the monsters sleep.

Then Protesus, mounting from the hoary deep,
Surveys his charge, unknowing of deceit
(In order told, we make the sun complete.)
Please’d with the false review, secure he lies,
And leaden slumbers press his drooping eyes.

Rushing impetuous forth, we straight prepare
A furious on set with the sound of war,
And shouting seize the god: our force to evade:
His various arts he soon resum’d in aid:
A lion now he curl’d, a swarthy mane;
Sudden, our hands a spotted parr restrain;
Then, arm’d with tusks, and lightning in his eyes,

A boar’s obscurer shape the god beholds:
On spiry columns, there, a dragon rides;
Here, from our strict embrace the stream he glides:
And last, sublime, his stately growth he rears,
A tree, and well disassembled foliage wears.

Vain efforts; with superior power compress’d,
Me with reluctance thus the seer address’d:
Say, son of Atreus, say what god inspir’d
This daring fraud, and what the boon desir’d?
BOOK IV.

The Odyssey.

I thus: O thou, whose certain eye busies
The fix'd event of fate's remote decrees;
After long woes, and various toil endur'd,
Still on this desert isle my fleet is moor'd;
Unfriended of the gales, All-knowing! say,
What godhead interdicts the watery way?
What vows repentant will the power appease,
To speed a prosperous voyage o'er the seas?

To Jove (with stern regard the god replies)
And all th' offended syndrom of the skies,
Just hecatombs with due devotion slain,
Thy guilt absolv'd, a prosperous voyage gain.
To the firm sanction of thy fate attend!
An exile thou, nor cheering face of friend,
Nor sight of natal shore, nor regal dome,
Shalt yet enjoy, but still art doom'd to roam.
Once more the Nile, who from the secret source
Of Jove's high seat descends with sweepy force,
Must view his billows white beneath thy ear,
And altars blaze along his sanguine shore.
Then will the gods, with holy pomp ador'd,
To thy long vows a safe return accord.

He ceas'd: heart-wounded with afflictive pain
(Deom'd to repeat the perils of the main
A shelly track and long!) O see, I cry,
To the stern sanction of th' offended sky
My prompt obedience bows. But deign to say,
What fate propitious, or what dire dismay,
Sustain those peers, the reliques of our host,
Whom I with Nestor on the Phrygian coast
Embracing left? Must I the warrors weep,
Whelm'd in the bottom of the monstrous deep?
Or did the kind domestic friend deplore
The breathless heroes on their native shore?

Press not too far, reply'd the god: but cease
To know, what known will violate thy peace;
Too curious of their doom! with friendly woe
Thy breast will heave, and tears eternal flow.
Part live! the rest, a lamentable train!

Range the dark bounds of Pluto's dreary reign.
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK IV.

Two, foremost in the roll of Mars renown'd,
Whose arms with conquest in thy cause were crown'd,
Fell by disastrous fate; by tempests tost,
A third lives wretched on a distant coast.

By Neptune rescued from Minerva's hate,
On Gyre, safe Oilean Ajax sate,
His ship o'erwhelm'd; but, frowning on the floods,
Impious he roar'd defiance to the gods;
To his own prowess all the glory gave,
The power defrauding who vouchsaf'd to save.

This heard the raging ruler of the main;
His spear, indignant for such high disdain,
He launch'd; dividing with his forty mace
Th' aërial summit from the marble base:
The rock rush'd seaward with impetuous roar
Ingulf'd, and to th' abyss the boaster bore.

By June's guardian aid, the watery vast,
Secure of storms, your royal brother past:
Till coasting nigh the cape, where Mala shrunk,
Her spiry cliffs amid surrounding clouds;
A whirling gust tumultuous from the shore
Across the deep his labouring vessel bore.
In an ill-fated hour the coast he gain'd,
Where late in regal pomp Thyestes reign'd;
But, when his hoary honours bow'd to fate,
\( \times \)ygustus govern'd in paternal state,
The surges now subside, the tempest ends;
From his tall ship the king of men descends;
There fondly thinks the gods conclude his toil!

Far from his own domain salutes the soil:
With rapture oft the verge of Greece reviews,
And the dear turf with tears of joy bedews,
Him thus exulting on the distant strand,
A spy distinguish'd from his airy stand;
To bribe whose vigilance, \( \times \)ygustus told
A mighty sum of ill-persuading gold:
There watch'd this guardian of his guilty fear,
Till the twelfth moon had wheel'd her pale career;
And now, admonish'd by his eye, to court
With terror wing'd conveys the dread report.
BOOK IV. THE ODYSSEY.

Of deathful arts expert, his lord employs
The ministers of blood in dark surprise;
And twenty youths in radiant mail incas'd,
Close ambush'd nigh the spacious hall he plac'd. 710
Then bids prepare the hospitable treat:
Vain shows of love to veil his felen-bate!
To grace the victor's welcome from the wars,
A train of courser, and triumphal cars.
Magnificent he leads! the royal guest,
715
Thoughtless of ill, accepts the fraudulent feast.
The troop forth-issuing from the dark recess,
With homicidal rage the king oppresses!
So, whilst hefeeds luxurious in the stall,
The sovereign of the herd is doom'd to fall. 720
The partners of his fame and toils at Troy,
Around their lord, a mighty ruin! lie:
Mix'd with the brave, the base invaders bleed;
Ægysthus sole survives to boast the deed.

He said; chill! horrors shook my shivering soul,
Back'd with convulsive pangs in dust I roll; 726
And hate, in madness of extreme despair,
To view the sun, or breathe the vital air.
But when, superior to the rage of woe,
I stood restor'd, and tears had ceased to flow; 730
Lenient of grief, the pitying god began—
Forget the brother, and resume the man:
To Fate's supreme dispose the dead resign,
That care be Fate's, a speedy passage thine.
Still lives th' wretch who wrought the death deplor'd,
But lives a victim for thy vengeful sword; 736
Unless with filial rage Orestes glow,
And swift prevent the meditated blow;
You timely will return a welcome guest,
With him to share the sad funereal feast. 740

He said: new thoughts my beating heart employ,
My gloomy soul receives a gleam of joy,
Fair hope revives; and eager I address
The prescient godhead to reveal the rest.
The doom decreed of those disastrous two 745
I've heard with pain, but, oh! the tale pursue;
What third brave son of Mars the Poles sustains
To roam the bowling desert of the main;
Or, in eternal shade if cold to lie,
Bemoan new sorrow from those grateful eyes.

That chief (rejoin'd the god) his race derives
From Ithaca, and wondrous wise survives;
Laertes' son, girt with circumambient tides,
He still calamitous constraint abides.

Him in Calypso's cave of late I view'd,
When surmounting grief his faded cheek bewail'd,
But vain his prayer; his arts are vain, to move
Th' enamour'd goddess, or elude her love:
His vessel wait, and dear companions lost,
She lives reluctant on a foreign coast.

But oh, beloved by heaven! reserv'd to these
A happier lot the smiling Fates decree:
Free, from that law, beneath whose mortal sway
Matter is chang'd, and varying forms decay;
Elysium shall be thine; the blissful plains
Of utmost earth, where Rhadamanths reign.
Joys ever young, unmix'd with pain or fear,
Fill the wide circle of th' eternal year:
Stern winter smiles, on that auspicious clime:
The fields are florid, with unfading prime;

From the bleak pole no winds inclement blow,
Mould the round hail, or flake the sable snow;
But from the breezy deep the blest inhale
The fragrant murmurs of the western gale.
This grace peculiar will the gods afford
To thee the son of Jove, and beauteous Helen's lord.

He ceased, and plunging in the vast profound,
Beneath the god the whirling billows bound.
Then speeding back, involv'd in various thought,
My friends attending at the shore I sought.

Arriv'd, the rage of hunger we controul,
Till night with silent shade invests the pole;
Then lose the cares of life in pleasing rest.—
Soon as the morn reveals the roseat-east,
With sails we wing the masts, our anchors weigh,
Unmoor the fount, and rush into the sea.
Rang'd on the banks, beneath our equal oars
White curl the waves, and the vex'd ocean roars.
Then, steering backward from the Pharian isle,
We gain the stream of Jove-descended Nile:
There quit the ships, and on the destin'd shore
With ritual hecatombs the gods adore:
Their wrath aton'd, to Agamemnon's name
A cantaph I raise of deathless fame.
These rites to piety and grief discharg'd,
The friendly gods a springing gall-exchang'd:
The fleet swift tilting o'er the surges flew,
Till Grecian cliffs appear'd, a blissful view!
Thy patient ear hath heard me long relate
A story, fruitful of disastrous fate:
And now, young prince, indulge my fond request:
Be Sparta honour'd with his royal guest,
Till, from his eastern grove, the joyous stream
His twelfth diurnal race begins to run.
Meantime my train the friendly gifts prepare,
Three sprightly couriers, and a polish'd car:
With these, a goblet of capacious mould,
Figur'd with art to dignify the gold
(Form'd for libation to the gods,) shall prove
A pledge and monument of sacred love.
My quick return, young Ithaca rejoin'd,
Damps the warm wishes of my raptur'd mind:
Did not my fate my needful haste constrain,
Charm'd by your speech so graceful and humane,
Lost in delight the circling year would roll,
While deep attention fix'd my listening soul.
But now to Pyle permit my destin'd way,
My lov'd associates chide my long delay:
In dear remembrance of your royal grace,
I take the present of the promis'd vase;
The couriers, for the champaign sports, retain;
That gift our barren rocks will render vain:
Horrid with cliffs, our meagre land allows
Thin herbage for the mountain goat to browse,
But neither mead nor plain supplies, to feed
The sprightly courser, or indulge his speed:
To sea-surrounded realms the gods assign
Small tract of fertile lawn, the least to mine.

His hand the king with tender passion press'd;
And, smiling, thus the royal youth address'd:
O early worth! a soul so wise, and young,
Proclaims you from the sage Ulysses sprung.
Selected from my stores, of matchless price
An urn shall recompence your prudent choice;
Not mean the massy mould of silver, grac'd
By Vulcan's art, the verge with gold enchas'd;
A pledge the scepter'd power of Sidon gave,
When to his realm I plough'd the orient wave.

Thus they alternate; while with artful care
The menial train the regal feast prepare:
The firstlings of the flock are doom'd to die;
The rich fragrant wines the cheering bowl supply;
A female band the gift of Ceres bring;
And the gilt roofs with genial triumph ring.

Meanwhile, in Ithaca, the suitor-powers
In active games divide their jovial hours:
In areas vary'd with mosaic art
Some whirl the disk, and some the javelin dart.
Aside, sequester'd from the vast resort,
Antinous sate spectator of the sport;
With great Eurymachus, of worth confess,
And high descent, superior to the rest;
Whom young Noëmon lowly thus address.

My ship, equipp'd within the neighbouring port,
The prince, departing for the Pylian court,
Requested for his speed; but, courteous, say
When steers he home, or why this long delay?
For Ellis I should sail with utmost speed,
'T import twelve mares with their luxurious feed,
And twelve young mules, a strong laborious race,
New to the plough, unpractis'd in the trace.

Unknowing of the course to Pyle design'd,
A sudden horror seiz'd on either mind:
The prince in rural bower they fouldy thought,
Numbering his flocks and herds, not far remote.
BOOK IV.  THE ODYSSEY.

Relate, Antinous cries, devoid of guile,
When spread the princes, his sail for distant Pylos?
Did chosen chiefs across the gulf, main
Attend his voyage, or domestic train?
Spontaneous did you speed his secret course,
Or was the vessel saizd by fraud or force?

With willing duty, not reluctant mind
(Noémom cry'd,) the vessel was resign'd.
Who, in the balance, with the great affairs
Of courts, presume to weigh their private cares?
With him, the peerage next in power to you;
And Mentor, captain of the lordly crew,
Or some celestial in its rev'rend form,
Safe from the secret rock and adverse storm,
Pilots their course: for when the glimmering ray
Of yester dawn disclos'd the tender day.
Mentor himself I saw, and much admir'd.—
Then ceas'd the youth, and from the court retir'd.

Confounded and appal'd, th' unfinish'd game
The suitors quit, and all to council came.
Antinous first th' assembled peers address,
Rage sparkling in his eyes, and burning in his breast.

O shame to manhood! shall one daring boy
The scheme of all our happiness destroy?
Fly unperceiv'd, seducing half the flower
Of nobles, and invite a foreign power?
The ponderous engine rais'd to crush us all,
Recoiling, on his head is sure to fall.
Instant prepare me, on the neighbouring strand,
With twenty chosen mates a vessel man'd;
For ambush'd close beneath the Samian shore
His ship returning shall my spies explore;
He soon his rashness shall with life atone,
Seek for his father's fate, but find his own.

With vast applause the sentence all approve;
Then rise, and to the feastful hall remove:
Swift to the queen the herald Medon ran,
Who heard the consult of the dire divan:
Refore her dome the royal matron stands,
And thus the message of his haste demands:
What will the suitors? must my servant-train
Th' allotted labours of the day refrain,
For them to form some exquisite repast?
Heaven grant this festival may prove their last!
Or, if they still must live, from me remove
The double plague of luxury and love!
Forbear, ye sons of insolence! forbear,
In riot to consume a wretched heir.
In the young soul illustrious thought to raise,
Were ye not tutor'd with Ulysses' praise.
Have not your fathers oft my lord defin'd,
Gentle of speech, beneficent of mind?
Some kings with arbitrary rage devour,
Or in their tyrant-minion's vest the power:
Ulysses let no partial favours fall,
The people's parent, he protected all:
But absent now, perfidious and ingratitude.
His stores ye ravage, and usurp his state.

He thus: O were the woes you speak the worst!
They form a deed more odious and accurs'd;
More dreadful than your boding soul divines:
But pitying Jove avert the dire designs!
The darling object of your royal care
Is mark'd to perish in a deathful snare;
Before he anchors in his native port,
From Pyle re-sailing and the Spartan court;
Horrid to speak! in ambush is decreed
The hope and heir of Ithaca to bleed!

Sudden she sunk beneath the weighty woes,
The vital streams a chilling horror froze;
The big round tear stands trembling in her eye,
And on her tongue imperfect accents die.
At length, in tender language interwove
With sighs, she thus express'd her anxious love:
Why rashly would my son his fate explore,
Ride the wild waves, and quit the safer shore?
Did he, with all the greatly wretched, crave
A blank oblivion, and untimely grave?
'Tis not, reply'd the sage, to Medon given
To know, if some inhabitant of heaven
BOOK IV.  THE ODYSSEY.  78

In his young breast the daring thought inspir’d;
Or if, alone with filial duty sir’d,
The winds and waves he tempts in early bloom,
Studious to learn his absent father’s doom.

The sage retir’d: unable to control.
The mighty griefs that swell her labouring soul,
Rolling convulsive on the floor, is seen
The piteous object of a prostrate queen.
Words to her dumb complaint a pause supplies,
And breath, to waste in unavailing cries.

Around their sovereign wept the menial fair,
To whom she thus address her deep despair.

Behold a wretch whom all the gods consign
To woe! Did ever sorrows equal mine?
Long to my joys my dearest lord is lost;
His country’s buckler, and the Grecian boast:
Now from my fond embrace, by tempests torn,
Our other column of the state is borne;
Nor took a kind adieu, nor sought consent!—
Unkind confederates in his dire intent!

Ill suits it with your shows of duteous zeal,
From me the purpos’d voyage to conceal:
Though at the solemn midnight hour he rose,
Why did you fear to trouble my repose?
He either had obey’d my fond desire,
Or seen his mother pierc’d with grief expire.
Bid Dolius quick attend, the faithful slave
Whom to my nuptial train Icarius gave,
To tend the fruit-groves: with incessant speed
He shall this violence of death decreed

To good Laërtes tell. Experience d age
May timely intercept their ruffian rage.

Convene the tribes, the murderous plot reveal,
And to their power to save his race appeal.

Then Euryclea thus. My dearest dread!

Though to the sword I bow this hoary head,
Or if a dungeon be the pain decreed,
I own me conscious of th’ unpleasing deed:
Auxiliar to his flight, my aid implor’d,
With wine and viands I the vessel stor’d:
A solemn oath, impos'd, the secret seal'd,
Till the twelfth dawn the light of heaven reveal'd.
Dreading th' effect of a fond mother's fear,
He dar'd not violate your royal ear.
But bathe, and, in imperial robes array'd,
Pay due devotions to the martial maid,
And rest affianç'd in her guardian aid.
Send not to good Laërtes, nor engage
In toils of state the miseries of age:
'Tis impious to surmise, the powers divine
to rhin doom the Jove-descended line:
Long shall the race of just Arcesius reign,
And isles remote enlarge his whole domain.

The queen her speech with calm attention hears,
Her eyes restrain the silver-streaming tears:
She bathes, and, rob'd, the sacred dome ascends;
Her pious speed a female train attends:
The salted cakes in cannisters are laid,
And thus the queen invokes Minerva's aid.

Daughter divine of Jove, whose arm can wield
Th' avenging bolt, and shake the dreadful shield!
If e'er Ulysses to thy fane preferr'd
The best and choicest of his flock and herd;
Hear, goddess, hear, by those oblations won;
And for the pious sire preserve the son:
His wish'd return with happy power befriend,
And on the suitors let thy wrath descend.
She cess'd; shrill ecstacies of joy declare
The favouring goddess present to the prayer:
The suitors heard, and deem'd the mirthful voice
A signal of her hymeneal choice:

Whilst one most jovial thus accosts the board:
"Too late the queen selects a second lord;
"In evil hour the nuptial rite intends,
"When o'er her son disastrous death impends."
Thus be unskill'd of what the fates provide!
But with severe rebuke Antinous cry'd.

These empty vaunts will make the voyage vain;
Alarm not with discourse the menial train:

* Minerva.
The great event with silent hope attend;
Our deeds alone our counsel must command.
His speech thus ended short, he frowning rose,
And twenty chiefs renown'd for valour chose:
Down to the strand he speeds with haughty strides,
Where anchor'd in the bay the vessel rides,
Replete with mail and military store,
In all her tackle trim to quit the shore.
The desperate crew ascend, unfurl the sails
(The seaward prow invites the tardy gales)
Then take repast, till Hesperus display'd
His golden circllet in the western shade.

Meantime the queen, without refection due,
Heart-wounded to the bed of state withdrew:
In her sad breast the prince's fortunes roll,
And hope and doubt alternate seize her soul.
So when the woodman's toil her cave surrounds,
And with the hunter's cry the grove resounds;
With grief and rage the mother-lion stung,
Fearless herself, yet trembles for her young.

While pensive in the silent slumberous shade,
Sleep's gentle powers her drooping eyes invade;
Minerva, life-like, on embodied air
Impress'd the form of Iphthima the fair
—(Icarus' daughter she, whose blooming charms
Allur'd Eumelesus to her virgin arms;
A scepter'd lord, who o'er the fruitful plain
Of Thessaly, wide stretch'd his ample reign:)
As Pallas will'd, along the sable skies,
To calm the queen, the phantom-sister flies.

-Swift on the regal dome, descending right,
The bolted valves are pervious to her flight.
Close to her head the pleasing vision stands,
And thus performs Minerva's high commands.

O why, Penelope, this causeless fear,
To render sleep's soft blessing unsincere?
Alike devote to sorrow's dire extreme
The day-reflection, and the midnight-dream!
Thy son the gods propitious will restore,
And bid thee cease his absence to deplore.

To whom the queen (whilst yet her pensive mind
Was in the silent gates of sleep confin'd:)
O sister, to my soul for ever dear,
Why this first visit to reprove my fear?
How in a realm so distant should you know
From what deep source my deathless sorrows flow?
To all my hope my royal lord is lost,
His country's buckler, and the Grecian boast:
And, with consummate woe to weigh me down,
The heir of all his honours and his crown,
My darling son is fled! an easy prey
To the fierce storms, or men more fierce than they;
Who, in a league of blood associates sworn,
Will intercept th' unwary youth's return.

Courage resume, the shadowy form reply'd,
In the protecting care of heaven confide:
On him attends the blue-ey'd martial maid;
What earthly can implore a surer aid?
Me now the guardian goddess deigns to send,
To bid thee patient his return attend.

The queen replies: If in the blest abodes,
A goddess, thou hast commerce with the gods;
Say, breathes my lord the blissful realm of light,
Or, lies he wrapt in ever-during night?
Inquire not of his doom, the phantom cries,
I speak not all the counsel of the skies:
Nor must indulge with vain discourse, or long,
The windy satisfaction of the tongue.

Swift through the valves the visionary fair
Repass'd, and viewless mix'd with common air.
The queen awakes, deliver'd of her woes:
With florid joy her heart dilating glows:
The vision, manifest of future fate,
Makes her with hope her son's arrival wait.

Meantime the suitors plow the watery plain,
Telemachus in thought already slain!
When sight of lessening Ithaca was lost,
Their sail directed for the Samian coast,
A small but verdant isle appear'd in view,
And Asteris the advancing pilot knew:
An ample port the rocks projected form,
To break the rolling waves and ruffling storm:
That safe recess they gain with happy speed,
And in close ambush wait the murderous deed.
THE

ODYSSEY.

BOOK V.

ARGUMENT.

The Departure of Ulysses from Calypso.

Pallas in a council of the gods complains of the detention of Ulysses in the island of Calypso; whereupon Mercury is sent to command his removal. The seat of Calypso described. She consents with much difficulty; and Ulysses builds a vessel with his own hands, on which he embarks. Neptune overtakes him with a terrible tempest, in which he is shipwrecked, and in the last danger of death; till Leucothea, a sea-goddess, assists him, and after innumerable perils, he gets ashore on Phæacia.
BOOK V.

THE saffron morn, with early blushes spread,
Now rose refulgent from Tithonus' bed;
With new-born day to gladden mortal sight,
And gild the courts of heaven with sacred light.
Then met th' eternal synod of the sky,
Before the god, who thunders from on high,
Supreme in might, sublime in majesty.
Pallas, to these, deplores th' unequal fates
Of wise Ulysses, and his toils relates:
Her hero's danger touch'd the pitying power,
The nymph's seductions, and the magic bower.
Thus she began her plaint: Immortal Jove!
And you who fill the blissful seats above!
Let kings no more with gentle mercy sway,
Or bless a people willing to obey,
But crush the nations with an iron rod,
And every monarch be the scourge of God;
If from your thoughts Ulysses you remove,
Who rule his subjects with a father's love.
Sole in an isle, encircled by the main,
Abandon'd, banish'd from his native reign,
Unbless'd he sighs, detain'd by lawless charms,
And press'd unwilling in Calypso's arms.
Nor friends are there, nor vessels to convey,
Nor oars to cut th' immeasurable way.
And now fierce traitors, studious to destroy
His only son, their ambush'd fraud employ;
Who, pious, following his great father's fame,
To sacred Pylos and to Sparta came.

What words are these? (reply'd the power who forms
The clouds of night, and darkens heaven with storms ;)
Is not already in thy soul decreed,
The chief's return shall make the guilty bleed?
What cannot Wisdom do? Thou may'st restore
The son in safety to his native shore.
BOOK V. THE ODYSSEY.

While the fell foes, who late in ambush lay,
With fraud defeated measure back their way.
Then thus to Hermes the command was given.
Hermes, thou chosen messenger of heaven!
Go, to the nymph be these our orders borne:
’Tis Jove’s decree, Ulysses shall return:
The patient man shall view his old abodes,
Nor help’d by mortal hand, nor guiding gods:
In twice ten days shall fertile Scheria find,
Alone, and floating to the wave and wind.
The bold Phæacians there, whose haughty line
Is mixt with gods, half human, half divine,
The chief shall honour as some heavenly guest,
And swift transport him to his place of rest.
His vessels loaded with a plenteous store.
Of brass, of vestures, and resplendent ore
(A richer prize than if his joyful isle
Receiv’d him charg’d with Ilion’s noble spoil,)
His friends, his country, he shall see, though late;
Such is our sovereign will, and such is fate.

He spoke. The god who mounts the winged wind,
Fast to his feet the golden pinions binds,
That high through fields of air his flight sustain
O’er the wide earth, and o’er the boundless main.
He grasps the wand that causes sleep to fly,
Or in soft slumber seals the wakeful eye:
Then shoots from heaven to high Piteria’s steep,
And stoops incumbent on the rolling deep.
So watery fowl, that seek their fishy food,
With wings expanded o’er the foaming flood,
Now sailing smooth the level surface sweep,
Now dip their pinions in the briny deep.
Thus o’er the world of waters Hermes flew,
Till now the distant island rose in view:
Then, swift ascending from the azure wave,
He took the path that winded to the cave.
Large was the grot, in which the nymph he found
(The fair-hair’d nymph with every beauty crown’d.)
She sate and sung; the rocks resound her lays:
The cave was brighten’d with a rising blaze;

D 2
Cedar and frankincense, an odorous pile,
Flam’d on the hearth, and wide perfum’d the isle
While she with work and song the time divides,
And through the loom the golden shuttle guides.
Without the grot a various sylvan scene
Appear’d around, and groves of living green;
Poplars and alders ever quivering play’d,
And nodding cypress form’d a fragrant shade;
On whose high branches, waving with the storm,
The birds of broadest wing their mansion form,
The chough, the sea-mew, the loquacious crow,
And scream aloft, and skim the deeps below.
Depending vines the shelving cavern screen,
With purple clusters blushing through the green.
Pour limpid fountains from the clefts distil;
And every fountain pours a several rill,
In many windings wandering down the hill:
Where bloomy meads with vivid greens were crown’d,
And glowing violets threw odours round.
A scene, where if a god should cast his sight,
A god might gaze, and wander with delight!
Joy touch’d the messenger of heaven: he stay’d
Entranc’d, and all the blissful haunts survey’d.
Him, entering in the cave, Calypso knew;
For powers celestial to each other’s view
Stand still confess, though distant far they lie
To habitants of earth, or sea, or sky.
But sad Ulysses, by himself apart,
Pour’d the big sorrows of his swelling heart;
All on the lonely shore he sate to weep,
And roll’d his eyes around the restless deep;
Tow’rd his lov’d coast he roll’d his eyes in vain,
Till, dimm’d with rising grief, they stream’d again.
Now graceful seated on her shining throne,
To Hermes thus the nymph divine begun:

God of the golden wand! on what behest
Arriv’st thou here, an unexpected guest?
Lov’d as thou art, thy free injunctions lay;
’Tis mine, with joy and duty to obey.
Till now a stranger; in a happy hour
Approach, and taste the dainties of my bower.
Thus having spoke, the nymph the table spread
(Ambrosial cates, with nectar rosy-red ;)
Hermes the hospitable right partook,
Divine refection! then, recruited, spoke:
What mov'd this journey from my native sky,
A goddess asks, nor can a god deny:
Hear then the truth. By mighty Jove's command
Unwilling have I trod this pleasing land;
For who, self-mov'd with weary wing would sweep
Such length of ocean and unmeasur'd deep?
A world of waters! far from all the ways
Where men frequent, or sacred altars blaze,
But to Jove's will submission we must pay;
What power so great, to dare to disobey?
A man, he says, a man resides with thee,
Of all his kind most worn with misery;
The Greeks, (whose arms for nine long years employ'd
Their force on Ilion, in the tenth destroy'd)
At length embarking in a luckless hour,
With conquest proud, incens'd Minerva's power:
Hence on the guilty race her vengeance hurl'd
With storms pursued them through the liquid world.
These all his vessels sunk beneath the wave!
There all his dear companions found their grave!
Sav'd from the jaws of death by heaven's decree,
The tempest drove him to these shores and thee.
Him, Jove now orders to his native lands
Straight to dismiss; so destiny commands;
Impatient fate his near return attends,
And calls him to his country, and his friends.
Ev'n to her inmost soul the goddess shook;
Then thus her anguish and her passion broke.
Ungracious gods! with spite and envy curst!
Still to your own ethereal race the wret!
Ye envy mortal and immortal joy,
And love, the only sweet of life, destroy.
Did ever goddess by her charms engage
A favour'd mortal, and not feel your rage?
THE ODYSSEY.

BOOK V.

So when Aurora sought Orion's love,
Her joys disturb'd your blissful hours above,
Till, in Ortygia, Dian's winged dart
Had pierc'd the hapless hunter to the heart.
So when the covert of the thrice-ear'd field
Saw stately Ceres to her passion yield,
Scarce couldasion taste her heavenly charms,
But Jove's swift lightning scorch'd him in her arms.
And is it now my turn, ye mighty powers!
Am I the envy of your blissful bowers?
A man, an outcast to the storm and wave,
It was my crime to pity, and to save;
When he who thunders rent his bark in twain,
And suck his brave companions in the main,
Alone, abandon'd, in mid-ocean lost,
The sport of winds and driven from every coast,
Hither this man of miseries I led,
Receiv'd the friendless, and the hungry fed;
Nay promis'd (vainly promis'd !) to bestow
Immortal life, exempt from age and woe.
'Tis past—and Jove decrees he shall remove;
Gods as we are, we are but slaves to Jove.
Go then he may (he must, if He ordain,
Try all those dangers, all those deeps again :)
But never, never shall Calypso send
To toils like these, her husband and her friend.
What ships have I, what sailors to convey,
What oars to cut the long laborious way?
Yet, I'll direct the safest means to go;
That last advice is all I can bestow.
To her, the power who bears the charming rod:
Dismiss the man, nor irritate the god;
Prevent the rage of him who reigns above,
For what so dreadful as the wrath of Jove?
Thus having said, he cut the cleaving sky,
And in a moment vanish'd from her eye.
The nymph, obedient to divina command,
To seek Ulysses, pac'd along the sand.
Him pensive on the lonely beach she found,
With streaming eyes in briny torrents drawn'd,
And inly pining for his native shore:
For now the soft enchantress pleas'd no more:
For now, reluctant, and constrain'd by charms,
Absent he lay in her desiring arms,
In slumber wore the heavy night away,
On rocks and shores consum'd the tedious day; 209
There sat all desolate, and sigh'd alone,
With echoing sorrows made the mountains groan,
And roll'd his eyes o'er all the restless main,
Till, dimm'd with rising grief, they stream'd again,

Here, on his musing mood the goddess prest; 203
Approaching soft; and thus the chief addrest.
Unhappy man! to wasting woes a prey,
No more in sorrows languish life away:
Free as the winds I give thee now to rove—
Go, fell the timber of thy lofty grove,
And form a raft, and build the rising ship,
Sublime to bear thee o'er the gloomy deep.
To store the vessel, let the care be mine,
With water from the rock, and rosy wine,
And life-sustaining bread, and fair array,
And prosperous gales to waft thee on the way.
These, if the gods with my desires comply,
(The gods, alas, more mighty far than I,
And better skill'd in dark events to come,) 215
In peace shall land thee at thy native home.

With sighs Ulysses heard the words she spoke,
Then thus his melancholy silence broke.
Some other motive, goddess! sways thy mind
(Some close design, or turn of womankind,)
Nor my return the end, nor this the way,

On a slight raft to pass the swelling sea,
Huge, horrid, vast! where scarce in safety sails
The best-built ship, though Jove inspire the gales.
The bold proposal how shall I fulfill,
Dark as I am, unconscious of thy will? 220
Swear then thou mean'st not what my soul forbodes;
Swear by the solemn oath that binds the gods.

Him, while he spoke, with smiles Calypso ey'd,
And gently grasp'd his hand, and thus reply'd:
This shows thee, friend, by old experience taught,
And learn'd in all the wiles of human thought. 236
How prone to doubt, how cautious are the wise!
But hear, oh earth, and hear, ye sacred skies!
And thou, oh Styx! whose formidable floods
Glide thro' the shades, and bind th' attesting gods?
No form'd design, no meditated end,
Lurks in the counsel of thy faithful friend;
Kind the persuasion, and sincere my aim;
The same my practice were my fate the same.
Heaven has not curst me with a heart of steel,
But given the sense, to pity, and to feel.
Thus having said, the goddess march'd before:
He trod her footsteps in the sandy shore.
At the cool cave arriv'd, they took their seats;
He fill'd the throne where Mercury had sat.
For him, the nymph a rich repast ordains,
Such as the mortal life of man sustains;
Before herself were placed the cates divine,
Ambrosial banquet, and celestial wine.
Their hunger satiate, and their thirst repress,
Thus spoke Calypso to her god-like guest:
Ulysses! (with a sigh she thus began;)
0 sprung from gods! in wisdom more than man!
Is then thy home the passion of thy heart?
Thus wilt thou leave me, are we thus to part?
Farewell! and ever joyful may'st thou be,
Nor break the transport with one thought of me.
But, ah, Ulysses! wert thou given to know
What Fate yet dooms thee yet to undergo;
Thy heart might settle in the scene of ease,
And ev'n these slighted charms might learn to please.
A willing goddess, and immortal life,
Might banish from thy mind an absent wife.
Am I inferior to a mortal dame?
Less soft my feature, less august my frame?
Or shall the daughters of mankind compare
Their earth-born beauties with the heavenly fair?
Alas! for this (the prudent man replies)
Against Ulysses shall thy anger rise?
LOV'd and ador'd, oh goddess, as thou art,
Forgive the weakness of a human heart.
Though well I see thy graces far above
The dear, though mortal, object of my love,
Of youth eternal well the difference know,
And the short date of fading charms below;
Yet every day, while absent thus I roam,
I languish to return and die at home.
What'er the gods shall destine me to bear
In the black ocean, or the watery war,
'Tis mine to master with a constant mind;
Inured to perils, to the worst resign'd.
By seas, by wars, so many dangers run;
Still I can suffer: their high will be done!

Thus while he spoke, the beamy sun descends,
And rising night her friendly shade extends.
To the close grot the lonely pair remove,
And slept delighted with the gifts of love.
When rosy morning call'd them from their rest,
Ulysses roll'd him in the cloak and vest.
The nymph's fair head a veil transparent grac'd,
Her swelling loins a radiant zone embrac'd
With flowers of gold: an under robe, unbound,
In snowy waves flow'd glittering on the ground.
Forth issuing thus, she gave him first to wield
A weighty ax with truest temper steel'd,
And double-edg'd; the handle smooth and plain,
Wrought of the clouded olive's easy grain;
And next, a wedge to drive with sweepy sway:
Then to the neighbouring forest led the way.
On the lone island's utmost verge there stood
Of poplars, pines, and firs, a lofty wood,
Whose leafless summits to the skies aspire,
Scorch'd by the sun, or sear'd by heavenly fire
(Already dry'd.) These pointing out to view,
The nymph just show'd him, and with tears withdrew.

Now toils the hero: trees on trees o'erthrown
Fall crackling round, and the forests groan:
Sudden, full twenty on the plain are strow'd,
And lopp'd and lighten'd of their branchy load.
At equal angles these dispos’d to join,
He smooth’d and squar’d them by the rule and line.
(The wimbles for the work Calypso found)
With those he pierc’d them, and with clinchers bound,
Long and capacious as a shipwright forms
Some bark’s broad bottom to out-ride the storms,
So large he built the raft: then ribb’d it strong
From space to space, and nail’d the planks along:
These form’d the sides: the deck he fashion’d last;
Then o’er the vessel rais’d the taper mast,
With crossing sail-yards dancing in the wind:
And to the helm the guiding rudder join’d
(With yielding osiers fence’d, to break the force
Of surging waves, and steer the steady course).
Thy loom, Calypso; for the future sails
Supply’d the cloth, capacious of the gales.
With stays and cordage last he rigg’d the ship,
And, roll’d on levers, launch’d her in the deep.

Four days were past, and now the work complete,
Shone the fifth morn, when from her sacred seat
The nymph dismiss’d him (odorous garments given),
And bath’d in fragrant oils that breath’d of heaven:
Then fill’d two goat-skins with her hands divine,
With water one, and one with sable wine:
Of every kind, provisions heav’d aboard;
And the full decks with copious viands stor’d.
The goddess, last, a gentle breeze supplies,
To curl old Ocean, and to warm the skies.

And, now, rejoicing in the prosperous gales,
With beating heart Ulysses spreads his sails:
Plac’d at the helm he sat, and mark’d the skies,
Nor clos’d in sleep his ever-watchful eyes,
There view’d the Pleiads, and the Northern Team,
And great Orion’s more refulgent beam,
To which, around the axle of the sky
The Bear, revolving, points his golden eye:
Who shines exalted on th’ ethereal plain,
Nor bathes his blazing forehead in the main.
Far on the left those radiant fires to keep
The nymph directed, as they sail’d the deep.
BOOK V.

THE ODYSSEY.

Full seventeen nights he cut the foamy way: 355
The distant land appear'd the following day; 356
Then swell'd to sight Phaeacia's dusky coast,
And woody mountains, half in vapours lost;
That lay before him, indistinct and vast,
Like a broad shield amid the watery waste.

But him, thus voyaging the deeps below,
From far, on Solymos's aerial brow,
The king of ocean saw, and seeing barn'd
(From Ethiopis's happy climes return'd);
The raging monarch shook his asure head,
And thus in secret to his soul he said.

Heavens! how uncertain are the powers on high!
Is then revers'd the sentence of the sky,
In one man's favour; while a distant guest
I shal secure the Ethiopian feast?
Behold how near Phaeacia's land he draws!
The land, affix'd by Fate's eternal laws
To end his toils. Is then our anger vain?
No; if this sceptre yet commands the main.

He spoke, and high the forky trident hurl'd
Rolls clouds on clouds, and stirs the watery world,
At once the face of earth and sea deforms,
Swells all the winds, and rouses all the storms.
Down rush'd the night: east, west, together roar;
And south and north roll'd mountains to the shore;
Then shook the hero, to despair resign'd,
And question'd thus his yet-unconquer'd mind.

Wretch that I am! what farther fates attend
This life of toils, and what my destin'd end?
Too well, alas, the island goddess knew,
On the black sea what perils should ensue.
New horrors now this destin'd head inclose;
Unfill'd is yet the measure of my woes;
With what a cloud the brows of heaven are crown'd!
What raging winds! what roaring waters round! 370
'Tis Jove himself the swelling tempest roars;
Death, present death, on every side appears.
Happy! thrice happy! who, in battle slain,
Frest, in Atrides' cause, the Trojan plain!
Oh! had I dy’d before that well-fought wall! 395
Had some distinguish’d day renown’d my fall
(Such as was that when showers of javelins fled
From conquering Troy around Achilles dead);
All Greece had paid me solemn funerals then,
And spread my glory with the sons of men.
A shameful fate now hides my hapless head,
Unwept, unnoted, and for ever dead!

A mighty wave rush’d o’er him as he spoke,
The raft it cover’d, and the mast it broke;
Swept from the deck, and from the rudder torn,
Far on the swelling surge the chief was borne;
While by the howling tempest rent in twain
Flew sail and sail-yards rattling o’er the main.
Long press’d, he heav’d beneath the weighty wave,
Clogg’d by the cumb’rous vest Calypso gave:

At length emerging, from his nostrils wide
And gushing mouth, effus’d the briny tide,
Ev’n then not mindless of his last retreat,
He seizes the raft, and leap’d into his seat,
Strong with the fear of death. The rolling flood
Now here, now there, impell’d the floating wood.
As when a heap of gather’d thorns is cast
Now to, now fro, before th’ autumnal blast;
Together clung, it rolls around the field;
So roll’d the float, and so its texture held:
And now the south, and now the north, bear sway,
And now the east the foamy floods obey,
And now the west-wind whirls it o’er the sea.
The wandering chief with toils on toils opprest,
Leucothea saw, and pity touch’d her breast
(Herself a mortal once, of Cadmus’ strain,
But now an azure sister of the main).
Swift as a sea-ewolf, springing from the flood,
All radiant on the raft the goddess stood;
And thus address him: Thou, whom heaven decrees
To Neptune’s wrath, stern tyrant of the seas!
(Unequal contest!) not his rage and power,
Great as he is, such virtue shall devour.
What I suggest, thy wisdom will perform;
Forsake thy float, and leave it to the storm:
Strip off thy garments; Neptune's fury brave
With naked strength, and plunge into the wave.
To reach Phaeacia all thy nerves extend,
There Fate decrees thy miseries shall end.
This heavenly scarf beneath thy bosom bind,
And live; give all thy terrors to the wind.
Soon as thy arms the happy shore shall gain,
Return the gift, and cast it in the main;
Observe my orders, and with heed obey,
Cast it far off and turn thy eyes away.

With that, her hand the sacred veil bestows,
Then down the deeps she div'd from whence she rose;
A moment snatch'd the shining form away,
And all was cover'd with the curling sea.

Struck with amaze, yet still to doubt inclin'd,
He stands suspended, and explores his mind.
What shall I do? unhappy me! who knows
But other gods intend me other woes?
Whoe'er thou art, I shall not blindly join
Thy pleaded reason, but consult with mine:
For scarce in ken appears that distant isle
Thy voice foretells me shall conclude my toil.
Thus then I judge; while yet the planks sustain
The wild waves' fury, here I fix'd remain;
But when their texture to the tempest yields,
I launch adventurous on the liquid fields,
Join to the help of gods the strength of man,
And take this method, since the best I can.

While thus his thoughts an anxious council hold,
The raging god a watery mountain roll'd;
Like a black sheet the whelming billows spread,
Burst o'er the float, and thunder'd on his head.
Planks, beams, disparted fly; the scatter'd wood
Rolls diverse, and in fragments strews the flood.
So the rude Boreas, o'er the field new-shorn,
Tosses and drives the scatter'd heaps of corn.
And now a single beam the chief bestrides;
There pois'd awhile above the bounding tides,
His limbs discumbers of the clinging vest,
And binds the sacred circiture round his breast:
Then prone on ocean in a moment flung,
Stretch'd wide his eager arms, and shot the seas along.
All naked now, on heaving billows laid,
Stern Neptune ey'd him, and contemptuous said:
Go, learn'd in woes, and other foes essay!

Go, wander helpless on the watery way:
Thus, thus find out the destin'd shore, and then
(If Jove ordains it) mix with happier men.
Whate'er thy fate, the ills on wrath could raise
Shall last remember'd in thy best of days.

This said, his sea-green steeds divide the foam,
And reach high Εγξε and the towery dome.
Now, scarce withdrawn, the fierce earth-shaking power,
Jove's daughter Pallas watch'd the favouring hour.
Back to their caves she bade the winds to fly,
And hush'd the blustering brethren of the sky.
The drier blasts alone of Boreas away,
And bear him soft on broken waves away;
With gentle force impelling to that shore,
Where Fate has destin'd he shall toil no more.
And now two nights, and now two days were past,
Since wide he wander'd on the watery waste;
Heav'd on the surge with intermitting breath,
And hourly panting in the arms of death.
The third fair morn now blaz'd upon the main;
Then glassy smooth lay all the liquid plain;
The winds were hush'd, the billows scarcely curl'd,
And a dead silence still'd the watery world.
When lifted on a ridgy wave he spies
The land at distance, and with sharpen'd eyes
As pious children joy with vast delight
When a lov'd sire revives before their sight
(Who, lingering long, has call'd on death in vain,
Fix'd by some demon to his bed of pain,
Till Heaven by miracle his life restore);
So joys Ulysses at th' appearing shore;
And sees (and labours onward as he sees)
The rising forests, and the tufted trees.
And now, as near approaching as the sound
Of human voice the listening ear may wound,
Amidst the rocks he heard a hollow roar
Of murmuring surges breaking on the shore;
Nor peaceful port was there, nor winding bay,
To shield the vessel from the rolling sea,
But cliffs, and shaggy shores, a dreadful sight!
All rough with rocks, with foamy billows white.
Fear seiz'd his slacken'd limbs and beating heart;
As thus he commun'd with his soul apart.

Ah me! when o'er a length of waters tost,
These eyes at last behold th' unhop'd-for coast,
No port receives me from the angry main,
But the loud deeps demand me back again.
Above sharp rocks forbid access; around
Roar the wide waves; beneath is sea profound!
No footing sure affords the faithless saul,
To stem too rapid, and too deep to stand.
If here I enter, my efforts are vain,
Dash'd on the cliffs, or heav'd into the main;
Or round the island if my course I bend,
Where the ports open, or the shores descend,
Back to the seas the rolling surge may sweep,
And bury all my hopes beneath the deep.
Or some enormous whale the god may send
(For many such on Amphitrite attend),
Too well the turns of mortal chance I know,
And hate relentless of my heavenly foe.
While thus he thought, a monstrous wave upbore
The chief, and dash'd him on the craggy shore;
Torn was his skin, nor had the ribs been whole,
But instant Pallas enter'd in his soul,
Close to the cliff with both his hands he clung,
And stick adherent, and suspended hung;
Till the huge surge roll'd off; then, backward sweep
The refluent tides, and plunge him in the deep.
As when the polypus, from forth his cave
Torn with full force, reluctant beats the wave;
His ragged claws are stuck with stones and sand:
So the rough rock had shagg'd Ulysses' hands,
And now had perish'd, whelm'd beneath the main,
Th' unhappy man: ev'n fate had been in vain.
But all-subduing Pallas lent her power,
And prudence sav'd him in the needful hour.
Beyond the beating surge his course he bore
(A wider circle, but in sight of shore),
With longing eyes, observing, to survey
Some smooth ascent, or safe sequester'd bay.
Between the parting rocks at length he spy'd
A falling stream with gentler waters glide;
Where to the seas the shelving shore declin'd,
And form'd a bay impervious to the wind.
To this calm port the glad Ulysses prest,
And hail'd the river, and its god adrest:
Whose'er thou art, before whose stream unknown
I bend, a suppliant at thy watery throne,
Hear, asure king! nor let me fly in vain
To thee from Neptune and the raging main.
Heaven hears and pities hapless men like me,
For sacred ev'n to gods is misery:
Let then thy waters give the weary rest,
And save a suppliant, and a man distrest.
He pray'd, and straight the gentle stream subsides,
Detains the rushing current of his tides,
Before the wanderer smooths the watery way,
And soft receives him from the rolling sea,
That moment, fainting as he touch'd the shore,
He dropt his sinewy arms: his knees no more
Perform'd their office, or his weight upheld:
His swoln heart heav'd; his bloated body swell'd:
From mouth and nose the briny torrent ran;
And lost in lassitude lay all the man.
Depriv'd of voice, of motion, and of breath;
The soul scarce waking in the arms of death.
Soon as warm life its wonted office found,
The mindful chief Leucothea's scarf unbound;
Observant of her word, he turn'd aside
His head, and cast it on the rolling tide.
Behind him far, upon the purple waves
The waters waft it, and the nymph receives.
Now parting from the stream, Ulysses found
A mossy bank with pliant rushes crown'd!
The bank he press'd, and gently kiss'd the ground;
Where on the flowery herb as soft he lay,
Thus to his soul the sage began to say:
What will ye next ordain, ye powers on high?
And yet, ah yet, what fates are we to try?
Here by the stream, if I the night out-wear,
Thus spent already, how shall nature bear
The dews descending, and nocturnal air;
Or chilly vapours breathing from the flood
When morning rises?—If I take the wood,
And in thick shelter of innumerous boughs
Enjoy the comfort gentle sleep allows;
Tho' fenc'd from cold, and tho' my toil be past,
What savage beasts may wander in the waste!
Perhaps I yet may fall a bloody prey
To prowling bears, or lions in the way.
Thus long debating in himself he stood:
At length he took the passage to the wood,
Whose shady horrors on a rising brow
Wav'd high, and frown'd upon the stream below.
There grew two olives, closest of the grove,
With roots entwin'd, and branches interwove;
Alike their leaves, but not alike they smil'd
With sister-fruits; one, fertile, one was wild.
Nor here the sun's meridian ray had power,
Nor wind sharp-piercing, nor the rushing shower;
The verdant arch so close its texture kept:
Beneath this covert great Ulysses crept.
Of gather'd leaves an ample bed he made
(Thick strewn by tempest thro' the bowery shade);
Where three at least might winter's cold defy,
Though Boreas rag'd along th' inclement sky.
This store, with joy the patient hero found,
And, sunk amidst them, heap'd the leaves around.
As some poor peasant, fated to reside
Remote from neighbours in a forest wide,
Studious to save what human wants require,
In embers heap'd, preserves the seeds of fire:
Hid in dry foliage thus Ulysses lies,
Till Pallas pour'd soft slumbers on his eyes;
And golden dreams (the gift of sweet repose)
Lull'd all his cares, and banish'd all his woes.
ARGUMENT.

Pallas appearing in a dream to Nausicaa (the daughter of Alcinous, king of Phaeacida), commands her to descend to the river, and wash the robes of state, in preparation to her nuptials. Nausicaa goes with her handmaids to the river; where, while the garments are spread on the bank, they divert themselves in sports. Their voices awake Ulysses, who, addressing himself to the princess, is by her relieved and clothed, and receives directions in what manner to apply to the king and queen of the island.
BOOK VI.

WHILE thus the weary wanderer sunk to rest,
And peaceful slumbers calm'd his anxious breast;
The martial maid from heaven's aerial height
Swift to Phæacia wing'd her rapid flight.
In elder times the soft Phæacian train
In ease possest the wide Hyperian plain;
Till the Cyclopean race in arms arose,
A lawless nation of gigantic foes:
Then great Nausithous from Hyperia far,
Through seas retreating from the sound of war,
The recreant nation to fair Scheria led,
Where never science rear'd her laurel'd head:
There round his tribes a strength of wall he rais'd;
To heav'n the glittering domes and temples blaz'd;
Just to his realms, he parted grounds from grounds,
And shar'd the lands, and gave the lands their bounds.
Now in the silent grave the monarch lay,
And wise Alcinoüs held the regal sway.

To his high palace through the fields of air
The goddess shot; Ulysses was her care.
There as the night in silence roll'd away,
A heaven of charms divine Nausicaa lay:
Through the thick gloom the shining portals blaze;
Two nymphs the portals guard, each nymph a Grace.
Light as the viewless air, the warrior-maid
Glides through the valves, and hovers round her head;
A favourite virgin's blooming form she took,
From Dymas sprung, and thus the vision spoke:
Oh indolent! to waste thy hours away!
And sleep'st thou careless of the bridal day?
Thy spousal ornament neglected lies;
Arise, prepare the bridal train, arise!
A just applause the cares of dress impart,
And give soft transport to a parent's heart.
THE ODYSSEY.  BOOK VI.

Haste, to the limpid stream direct thy way,
When the gay morn unveils her smiling ray:
Haste to the stream! companion of thy care,
Lo, I thy steps attend, thy labours share.
Virgin, awake! the marriage-hour is nigh.
See! from their thrones thy kindred monarchs sigh!
The royal car at early dawn obtain,
And order mules obedient to the reign;
For rough the way, and distant rolls the wave,
Where their fair vests Phæacian virgins lave.
In pomp ride forth; for pomp becomes the great,
And majesty derives a grace from state.
Then to the palaces of heaven she sails,
Incumbent on the wings of wafting gales;
The seat of gods; the regions mild of peace,
Full joy, and calm eternity of ease.
There no rude winds presume to shake the skies,
No rains descend, no snowy vapours rise;
But on immortal thrones the blest repose;
The firmament with living splendors glows.
Fither the goddess wing'd th' aerial way,
Through heaven's eternal gates that blaz'd with day.

Now from her rosy car Aurora shed
The dawn, and all the orient flam'd with red.
Up rose the virgin with the morning light;
Obedient to the vision of the night.
The queen she sought, the queen her hours bestow'd
In curious works; the whirling spindle glow'd
With crimson threads, while busy damsels cull
The snowy fleece, or twist the purpled wool.
Meanwhile Phæacia's peers in council sate;
From his high dome the king descends in state,
Then with a fillial awe the royal maid
Approach'd him passing, and submissive said:
Will my dread sire his ear regardful deign,
And may his child the royal car obtain?
Say, with thy garments shall I bend my way,
Where through the vales the mazy waters stray?
A dignity of dress adorns the great,
And kings draw lustro from the robe of state.
BOOK VI. THE ODYSSEY.

Five sons thou hast; three wait the bridal day,
And spotless robes become the young and gay:
So when with praise amid the dance they shine,
By these my cares adorn'd, that praise is mine.

Thus she: but blushes ill-restrained, betray
Her thoughts intentive on the bridal day:
The conscious sire the dawning blush survey'd,
And smiling, thus bespoke the blooming maid.
My child, my darling joy, the car receive;
That, and whate'er our daughter asks we give.

Swift at the royal nod th' attending train
The car prepare, the mules incessant rein.
The blooming virgin with dispatchful cares
Tunics, and stoles, and robes imperial, bears.
The queen, assiduous, to her train assigns
The sumptuous viands, and the flavourous wines.

The train prepare a cruise of curious mould,
A cruise of fragrance, form'd of burnish'd gold;
Odour divine! whose soft refreshing streams
Sleck the smooth skin, and scent the snowy limbs,

Now mounting the gay seat, the silken reins
Shine in her hand; along the sounding plains
Swift fly the mules: nor rode the nymph alone;
Around, a bevy of bright damsels shone.
They seek the cisterns where Phrasian dames
Wash their fair garments in the limpid streams;
Where, gathering into depth from falling rills,
The lucid wave a spacious bason fills.

The mules unharness'd range beside the main,
Or crop the verdant herbage of the plain.

Then emulous the royal robes they clave,
And plunge the vestures in the cleansing wave
(The vestures cleans'd o'erspread the shelly sand,
Their snowy lustre whitens all the strand);
Then with a short repast relieve their toil,
And o'er their limbs diffuse ambrosial oil;
And while the roces imbibe the solar ray,
O'er the green mead the sporting virgins play
(Their shining veils unbound). Along the skies
Tost, and retoast, the ball incessant flies.
They sport, they feast; Nausicaa lifts her voice, 115
And, warbling sweet, makes earth and heaven rejoice.

As when o'er Erymanth Diana roves,
Or wide Taygetus' resounding groves;
A sylvan train the huntress queen surrounds,
Her rattling quiver from her shoulder sounds: 120
Fierce in the sport, along the mountain's brow
They bay the boar, of chase the bounding roe;
High o'er the lawn, with more majestic pace,
Above the nymphs she treads with stately grace;
Distinguish'd excellence the goddess proves;
Exults Latona as the virgin moves.
With equal grace Nausicaa trod the plain,
And shone transcendent o'er the beauteous train.

Meantime (the care and favourite of the skies)
Wrapped in embowering shade, Ulysses lies, 130
Hia woes forgot! but Pallas now address
To break the bands of all-composing rest.
Forth from her snowy hand Nausicaa threw
The various ball; the ball erroneous flew,
And swam the stream; loud shrieks the virgin train,
And the loud shriek redoubles from the main. 135
Wak'd by the shrilling sound, Ulysses rose,
And, to the deaf woods waiting, breath'd his woes.

Ah me! on what inhospitable coast,
On what new region, is Ulysses tossed; 140
Possess by wild barbarians fierce in arms;
Or men, whose bosom tender pity warms?
What sounds are these that gather from the shores?
The voice of nymphs that haunt the sylvan bowers,
The fair-hair'd Dryads of the shady wood; 145
Or azure daughters of the silver flood;
Or human voice? but, issuing from the shades,
Why cease I straight to learn what sound invades?
Then, where the grove with leaves umbrageous bends
With forceful strength a branch the hero rends; 150
Around his loins the verdant cincture spreads
A wret.thy foliage and concealing shades.
As when a lion in the midnight hours,
Beat by rude blasts, and wet with wintery showers,
BOOK VI.   THE ODYSSEY.  101

Descends terrific from the mountain's brow;  155
With living flames his rolling eye-balls glow;
With conscious strength elate, he bends his way,
Majestically fierce to seize his prey
(The steer or stag); or, with keen hunger bold,
Springs o'er the fence, and dissipates the fold.  160
No less a terror, from the neighbouring groves
(Rough from the tossing surge) Ulysses moves;
Urg'd on by want, and recent from the storms;
The brackish ooze his manly grace deforms.
Wide o'er the shore with many a piercing cry  165
To rocks, to caves, the fright'd virgins fly;
All but the nymph: the nymph stood fix'd alone,
By Pallas arm'd with boldness not her own.
Meantime in dubious thought the king awaits,
And, self-considering, as he stands, debates;
Distant his mournful story to declare,
Or prostrate at her knee address the prayer.
But fearful to offend, by wisdom sway'd,
At awful distance he accosts the maid.

If from the skies a goddess, or if earth  175
(Imperial virgin) boast thy glorious birth,
To thee I bend! If in that bright disguise
Thou visit earth, a daughter of the skies,
Hail, Dian, hail! the huntress of the groves
So shines majestic, and so stately moves,
So breathes an air divine! But if thy race
Be mortal, and this earth thy native place,
Blest is the father from whose loins you sprung,
Blest is the mother at whose breast you hung,
Blest are the brethren who thy blood divide,  185
To such a miracle of charms ally'd:
Joyful they see applauding princes gaze,
When stately in the dance you swim th' harmonious mace.

But blest o'er all, the youth with heavenly charms,
Who clasps the bright perfection in his arms!  190
Never, I never view'd till this blest hour
Such finish'd grace! I gaze, and I adore!
Thus seems the palm, with stately honours crown'd
By Phoebus' altars, thus o'erlooks the ground;
The pride of Delos. (By the Delian coast,
I voyag'd, leader of a warrior-host.
But ah, how chang'd! from thence my sorrow flows;
O fatal voyage, source of all my woes!)
Raptur'd I stood, and as this hour amaz'd,
With reverence at the lofty wonder gaz'd:
Raptur'd I stand! for earth ne'er knew to bear
A plant so stately, or a nymph so fair.
Aw'd from access, I lift my suppliant hands;
For misery, oh queen, before thee stands!
Twice ten tempestuous nights I roll'd, resign'd
To roaring billows, and the warring wind;
Heaven bade the deep to spare! but Heaven, my foe,
Spares only to inflict some mightier woe!
Inur'd to cares, to death in all its forms;
Outcast I rove, familiar with the storms!
Once more I view the face of human kind:
Oh let soft pity touch thy generous mind!
Unconscious of what air I breathe, I stand
Naked, defenceless on a foreign land.
Propititious to my wants, a vest supply
To guard the wretched from th' inclement sky:
So may the gods, who heaven and earth controul,
Crown the cha'nte wishes of thy virtuous soul,
On thy soft hours their choicest blessings shed;
Blest with a husband be thy bridal bed;
Blest be thy husband with a blooming race,
And lasting union crown your blissful days.
The gods, when they supremely bless, bestow
Firm union on their favourites below;
Then envy grieves, with inly-pining hate;
The good exult, and heaven is in our state.
To whom the nymph—O stranger, cease thy care;
Wise is thy soul, but man is born to bear:
Jove weighs affairs of earth in dubious scales,
And the good suffers, while the bad prevails.
Bear, with a soul resign'd, the will of Jove;
Who breathes, must mourn: thy woes are from above.
But since thou tread'st our hospitable shore,
'Tis mine to bid the wretched grieve no more.
BOOK VI. THE ODYSSEY.

To clothe the naked, and thy way to guide—
Know, the Phæacian tribes this land divide;
From great Alcinous' royal toils I spring,
A happy nation, and a happy king.

Then to her maids—Why, why, ye coward train,
These fears, this flight; ye fear, and fly in vain.

Dread ye a foe? dismiss that idle dread,
'Tis death with hostile steps these shores to tread:
Safe in the love of heaven, an ocean flows
Around our realm, a barrier from the foes,
'Tis ours this som of sorrow to relieve,
Cheer the sad heart, nor let affliction grieve.

By Jove the stranger and the poor are sent;
And what to those we give, to Jove is lent.

Then food supply, and bathe his failing limbs
Where waving shades obscure the many streams.

Obedient to the call, the chief they guide
To the calm current of the secret tide;
Close by the stream a royal dress they lay,
A vest and robe, with rich embroidery gay:
Then unguents in a vase of gold supply,
That breath'd a fragrance through the balmy sky.

To them the king. No longer I detain
Your friendly care: retire, ye virgin train!
Retire, while from my weary limbs I take
The foul pollution of the briny wave.

Ye gods! since this worn frame refection knew,
What scenes have I survey'd of dreadful view!
But, nympha, recede! sage chastity denies
To raise the blush, or pain the modest eyes.

The nympha withdrawn, at once into the tide
Active he bounds; the flashing waves divide:
O'er all his limbs his hands the wave diffuse,
And from his locks compress the weedy ooze;
The balmy oil, a fragrant shower, he sheds;
Then, drest, in pomp magnificently treads.

The warrior-goddess gives his frame to shine
With majesty enlarg'd, and air divine:
Back from his brows a length of hair uncurls,
His hyacinthine locks descend in wavy curls.
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK VI.

As by some artist to whom Vulcan gives
His skill divine, a breathing statue lives;
By Pallas taught, he frames the wondrous mould,
And o'er the silver pours the fusile gold.
So Pallas his heroic frame improves
With heavenly bloom, and like a god he moves.
A fragrance breathes around; majestic grace
Attends his steps: th' astonish'd virgins gaze.
Soft he reclines along the murmuring seas,
Inhaling freshness from the fanning breeze.

The wondering nymph his glorious port survey'd,
And to her damsels, with amusement, said.

Not without care divine the stranger treads
This land of joy; his steps some godhead leads:
Would Jove destroy him, sure he had been driven
Far from this realm, the favourite isle of heaven.

Late a sad spectacle of woe, he trod
The desert sands, and now he looks a god.
Oh heaven! in my connubial hour decree
This man my spouse, or such a spouse as he!
But haste, the viands and the bowl provide—
The maids, the viands and the bowl supply'd;
Eager he fed, for keen his hunger rag'd,
And with the generous vintage thirst assuag'd.

Now on return her care. Nausicaa bends,
The robes resumes, the glittering car ascends,
Far blooming o'er the field; and as she press'd
The splendid seat, the listening chief address'd.

Stranger, arise! the sun rolls down the day,
Lo, to the palace I direct the way;
Where in high state the nobles of the land
Attend my royal sire, a radiant band.
But hear; though wisdom in thy soul presides,
Speaks from thy tongue, and every action guides:
Advance at distance, while I pass the plain
Where o'er the furrows waves the golden grain.

Alone I re-ascent—With airy mounds
A strength of wall the guarded city bounds:
The jutting land two ample bays divides:
Fall through the narrow mouths descend the tides:
BOOK VI.  THE ODYSSEY.  405

The spacious basins arching rocks inclose,  315
A sure defence from every storm that blows.
Close to the bay great Neptune's fane adjoins;
And near, a forum flank'd with marble shines,
Where the bold youth, the numorous fleets to store,
Shape the broad sail, or smooth the taper oar:  320
For not the bow they bend, nor boast the skill
To give the feather'd arrow wings to kill;
But the tall mast above the vessel rear,
Or teach the fluttering sail to float in air.
They rush into the deep with eager joy,  325
Climb the steep surge, and through the tempest fly;
A proud, unpolish'd race—To me belongs
The care to shun the blast of slanderous tongues;
Lest malice, prone the virtuous to defame,
Thus with vile censure taint my spotless name:  330

"What stranger this whom thus Nausicaa leads?
"Heavens, with what graceful majesty he treads!
"Perhaps a native of some distant shore,
"The future consort of her bridal hour;
"Or rather some descendant of the skies!
"Won by her prayer, th' aërial bridegroom flies.
"Heaven on that hour its choicest influence shed,
"That gave a foreign spouse to crown her bed!
"All, all the godlike worthies that adorn
"This realm, she flies: Phæacia is her scorn."

And just the blame; for female innocence
Not only flies the guilt, but shuns th' offence:
Th' unguarded virgin, as unchast, I blame;
And the least freedom with the sex is shame,
Till our consenting sires a spouse provide,

And public nuptials justify the bride.

But wouldst thou soon review thy native plain?
Attend, and speedy thou shalt pass the main:
Nigh where a grove with verdant poplars crown'd,
To Pallas sacred, shades the holy ground,
We bend our way: a bubbling fount distills
A lucid lake, and thence descends in rills;
Around the grove, a mead with lively green
Falls by degrees, and forms a beauteous scene;
Here a rich juice the royal vineyard pours; 355
And there the garden yields a waste of flowers,
Hence lies the town, as far as to the ear
Floats a strong shout along the waves of air:
There wait embower'd, while I ascend alone
To great Alcinoüs on his royal throne. 360

Arriv'd, advance, impatient of delay,
And to the lofty palace bend thy way:
The lofty palace overlooks the town,
From every dome by pomp superior known;
A child may point the way. With earnest gait 365
Seek thou the queen along the rooms of state;
Her royal hand a wondrous work designs,
Around a circle of bright damsels shines,
Part twist the threads, and part the wool dispose,
While with the purple orb the spindle glows. 370
High on a throne, amid the Sherian powers,
My royal father shares the genial hours;
But to the queen thy mournful tale disclose,
With the prevailing eloquence of woes:
So shalt thou view with joy thy natal shore, 375
Though mountains rise between, and oceans roar.

She added pot, but waving as she wheel'd
The silver scourge, it glitter'd o'er the field;
With skill the virgin guides th' embower'd rein,
Slow rolls the car before th' attending train. 380
Now whirling down the heavens, the golden day
Shot through the western clouds a dewy ray;
The grove they reach, where from the sacred shade
To Pallas thus the pensive hero pray'd. 384

Daughter of Jove! whose arms in thunder wield
Th' avenging bolt, and shake the dreadful shield;
Forsook by thee, in vain I sought thy aid
When booming billows clos'd above my head;
Attend, unconquer'd maid! accord my vows,
Bid the Great hear, and pitying heal my woes. 390

This heard Minerva, but forbore to fly
(By Neptune aw'd) apparent from the sky;
Stern god! who rag'd with vengeance unrestrain'd,
Till great Ulysses hail'd his native land.
ARGUMENT.

The Court of Alcinous.

The princess Nausicaa returns to the city, and Ulysses soon after follows thither. He is met by Pallas in the form of a young virgin, who guides him to the palace, and directs him in what manner to address the queen Arete. She then involves him in a mist, which causes him to pass invisible. The palace and gardens of Alcinous described. Ulysses falling at the feet of the queen, the mist disperses, the Phaeacians admire, and receive him with respect. The queen inquiring by what means he had the garments he then wore, he relates to her and Alcinous his departure from Calypso, and his arrival on their dominions.

The same day continues, and the book ends with the night.
BOOK VII.

THE patient heavenly man thus suppliant pray'd; 5
While the slow mules draw on th' imperial maid,
Thro' the proud street she moves, the public gaze;
The turning wheel before the palace stays.
With ready love her brothers gathering round,
Receiv'd the vesture, and the mules unbound.
She seeks the bridal bower: a matron there
The rising fire supplies with busy care,
Whose charms in youth her father's heart inflam'd,
Now worr with age, Eurymedusa nam'd: 10
The captive dame Phaeacian rovers bore,
Snatch'd from Epirus, her sweet native shore
(A grateful prize), and in her bloom bestow'd
On good Alcinous, honour'd as a god;
Nurse of Nausicaa from her infant years,
And tender second to a mother's cares.

Now from the sacred thicket where he lay,
To town Ulysses took the winding way,
Propitious Pallas, to secure her care,
'Round him spread a veil of thicken'd air;
To shun th' encounter of the vulgar crowd,
Insulting still inquisitive and loud.
When near the fam'd Phaeacian walls he drew,
The beauteous city opening to his view,
His step a virgin met, and stood before: 20
A polish'd urn the seeming virgin bore,
And youthful smil'd; but in the low disguise
Lay hid the goddess with the azure eyes.

Show me, fair daughter (thus the chief demands),
The house of him who rules these happy lands.
Through many woes and wanderings, lo! I come
To good Alcinous' hospitable dome.
Far from my native coast, I rove alone,
A wretched stranger, and of all unknown!

The goddess answer'd, Father, I obey, 30
And point the wandering traveller his way:
Well known to me the palace you inquire,
For fast beside it dwells my honour'd sire:
BOOK VII.  THE ODYSSEY.

But silent march, nor greet the common train
With question needless, or inquiry vain:
A race of rugged mariners are these;
Unpolish'd men, and boisterous as their seas;
The native islanders alone their care,
And hateful he who breathes a foreign air.
These did the ruler of the deep ordain
To build proud navies, and command the main;
On canvas wings to cut the watery way;
No bird so light, no thought so swift as they.
Thus having spoke, th' unknown celestial leads:
The footstep of the deity he treads,
And secret moves along the crowded space,
Unseen of all the rude Phæacian race
(So Pallas ordered. Pallas to their eyes
The mist'objected, and condens'd the skies).
The chief with wonder sees th' extended streets,
The spreading harbours, and the riding fleets;
He next their princes lofty domes admires,
In separate islands, crown'd with rising spires;
And deep intrenchments, and high walls of stone,
That gird the city like a marble zone.
At length the kingly palace gates he view'd;
There stopp'd the goddess, and her speech renew'd.
My task is done; the mansion you inquire
Appears before you: enter, and admire.
High-thron'd, and feasting, there thou shalt behold
The scepter'd rulers. Fear not, but be bold:
A decent boldness ever meets with friends,
Succeeds, and ev'n a stranger recommends.
First to the queen prefer a suppliant's claim,
Alcinoüs' queen, Areth is her name.
The same her parents, and her power the same.
For know, from ocean's god Naúsithoüs sprung,
And Peribæa, beautiful and young
(Euryomedon's last hope, who rul'd of old
The race of giants, impious, proud, and bold;
Perish'd the nation in unrighteous war,
Perish'd the prince, and left this only heir)
Who now, by Neptune’s amorous power compræst,
Produc’d a monarch that his people blest,
Father and prince of the Phæacian name;
From him Rheuenor and Alcinoüs came.
The first by Phæbus’ burning arrows fir’d,
New from his nuptials, hapless youth! expir’d.
No son surviv’d: Areté heir’d his state,
And her, Alcinoüs chose his royal mate.
With honours yet to womankind unknown.
This queen he graces, and divides the throne:
In equal tenderness her sons conspire,
And all the children emulate their sire.
When thro’ the street she gracious deigns to move
(The public wonder and the public love)
The tongues of all with transport sound her praise,
The eyes of all, as on a goddess, gaze.
She feels the triumph of a generous breast;
To heal divisions, to relieve th’ opprest,
In virtue rich; in blessing others, blest.
Go then secure, thy humble suit prefer,
And owe thy country and thy friends to her.
With that the goddess deign’d no longer stay,
But o'er the world of waters wing’d her way:
Forsaking Scheria’s ever-pleasing shore,
The winds to Marathon the virgin bore;
Thence, where proud Athens rears her towery head,
With opening streets and shining structures spread,
She past, delighted with the well-known seats:
And to Erectheus’ sacred dome retreats.
Meanwhile Ulysses at the palace waits,
There stops, and anxious with his soul debates,
Fix’d in amaze before the royal gates.
The front appeared with radiant splendors gay,
Bright as the lamp of night, or orb of day.
The walls were massy brass; the cornice high
Blue metals crown’d, in colours of the sky:
Rich plates of gold the folding doors incase;
The pillars silver, on a brazen base;
Silver, the lintels deep-projecting o’er,
And gold, the finglets that command the door,
Two rows of stately dogs on either hand,
In sculptur'd gold and labour'd silver stand.
These Vulcan form'd with art divine, to wait
Immortal guardians at Alcinoüs' gate;
Alive each animated frame appears,
And still to live beyond the power of years.
Fair thrones within from space to space were rais'd,
Where various carpets with embroidery blaz'd,
The work of matrons: these the princes prest,
Day following day, a long continued feast.
Refulgent pedestals the walls surround,
Which boys of gold with flaming torches crown'd;
The polish'd ore, reflecting every ray,
Blaz'd on the banquets with a double ray.
Full fifty handmaids form the household train;
Some turn the mill, or sift the golden grain;
Some ply the loom; their busy fingers move
Like poplar-leaves when Zephyr fans the grove.
Not more renown'd the men of Scheria's isle,
For sailing arts and all the naval toil,
Than works of female skill their women's pride,
The flying shuttle through the threads to guide:
Pallas to these her double gifts imparts,
Inventive genius, and industrious arts.

Close to the gates a spacious garden lies,
From storms defended and inclement skies.
Four acres was th' allotted space of ground,
Penc'd with a green inclosure all around.
Tall thriving trees confess'd the fruitful mould;
The reddening apple ripens here to gold.
Here the blue fig with luscious juice o'erflows,
With deeper red the full pomegranate glows.
The branch here bends beneath the weighty pear,
And verdant olives flourish round the year.
The balmy spirit of the western gale
Eternal breathes on fruits, untaught to fail:
Each dropping pear a following pear supplies,
On apples apples, figs on figs arise:
The same mild season gives the blooms to blow,
The buds to harden, and the fruits to grow.
Here order'd vines in equal ranks appear,
With all th' united labours of the year;
Some to unload the fertile branches run,
Some dry the blackening clusters in the sun,
Others to tread the liquid harvest join,
The groaning presses foam with floods of wine.
Here are the vines in early flower descri'd,
Here grapes discoloured on the sunny side,
And there in autumn's richest purple dy'd.
Beds of all various herbs, for ever green,
In beauteous order terminate the scene.

Two plenteous fountains the whole prospect crown'd:
This thro' the gardens loads its streams around,
Visits each plant, and waters all the ground;
While that in pipes beneath the palace flows,
And thence its current on the town bestows:
To various use their various streams they bring,
The people one, and one supplies the king.

Such were the glories which the gods ordain'd,
To grace Alcinous, and his happy land.
Ev'n from the chief whom men and nations knew,
Th' unwonted scene surprise and rapture drew;
In pleasing thought he ran the prospect o'er,
Then hasty enter'd at the lofty door.
Night now approaching, in the palace stand,
With goblets crown'd, the rulers of the land;
Prepar'd for rest, and offering to the god
Who bears the virtue of the sleepy rod.
Unseen he glided through the jocous crowd,
With darkness circled, and an ambient cloud.
Direct to great Alcinous' throne he came,
And prostrate fell before th' imperial dame.
Then from around him dropt the veil of night;
Sudden he shines, and manifest to sight.
The nobles gaze, with awful fear opprest;
Silent they gaze, and eye the godlike guest.

Daughters of great Rhexenor! (thus began,
Low at her knees, the much-enduring man)

* Mercury.
BOOK VII. THE ODYSSEY. 113

To thee, thy consort: and this royal train,
To all that share the blessings of your reign,
A suppliant bends: oh pity human woe!
'Tis what the happy to th' unhappy owe.
A wretched exile to his country send,
Long worn with griefs, and long without a friend.
So may the gods your better days increase,
And all your joys descend on all your race,
So reign for ever on your country's breast,
Your people blessing, by your people blest!

Then to the genial hearth he bow'd his face,
And humbled in the ashes took his place.
Silence ensued. The eldest first began,
Echeneus sage, a venerable man!
Whose well- taught mind the present age surpasse,
And join'd to that th' experience of the last.
Fit words attended on his weighty sense,
And mild persuasion flow'd in eloquence.

Oh sight (he cry'd) dishonest and unjust!
A guest, a stranger, seated in the dust!
To raise the lowly suppliant from the ground
Befits a monarch. Lo! the peers around
But wait thy word, the gentle guest to grace,
And seat him fair in some distinguish'd place.
Let first the herald due libation pay
To Jove who guides the wanderer on his way;
Then set the genial banquet in his view,
And give the stranger-guest a stranger's due.

His sage advice the listening king obeys,
He stretch'd his hand the prudent chief to raise,
And from his seat Láodamas remov'd
(The monarch's offspring, and his best-belov'd);
There next his side the godlike hero sate;
With stars of silver shone the bed of state.
The golden ever a beauteous handmaid brings,
Replenish'd from the cool translucent springs,
Whose polish'd vase with copious streams supplies
A silver laver of capacious size.
The table next in regal order spread,
The glittering cannisters are heap'd with bread:
Viands of various kinds invite the taste,
Of choicest sort and savour, rich repast!
Thus feasting high, Alcinoüs gave the sign,
And bade the herald pour the rosy wine.
Let all around the due libation pay
To Jove, who guides the wanderer on his way.
He said. Pontomous heard the king's command;
The circling goblet moves from hand to hand;
Each drinks the juice that glads the heart of man.
Alcinoüs then, with aspect mild, began.

Princes and peers, attend; while we impart
To you, the thoughts of no inhuman heart.
Now pleas'd and satiate from the social rite
Repair we to the blessings of the aegis;
But with the rising day, assembled here,
Let all the elders of the land appear;
Pious observe our hospitable laws,
And Heaven propitiate in the stranger's cause;
Then join'd in council, proper means explore
Safe to transport him to the with'for shore
(How distant that, imports not us to know,
Nor weigh the labour, but relieve the woes).
Meantime, nor harm nor anguish let him bear:
This interval, Heaven trusts him to our care;
But to his native land our charge resign'd,
Heaven's is his life to come, and all the woes behind.
Then must he suffer what the Fates ordain;
For Fate has wove the thread of life with pain!
And twins ev'n from the birth are misery and man!

But if, descended from th' Olympian bower,
Gracious approach us some immortal power;
If in that form thou com'st a guest divine;
Some high event the conscious gods desig-n.
As yet, unbid they never grace'd our feast,
The solemn sacrifice called down the guest;
Then manifest of heaven the vision stood,
And to our eyes familiar was the god.
Oft with some favour'd traveller they stray,
And shine before him all the desert way;
With social intercourse, and face to face,
The friends and guardians of our pious race.
BOOK VII. THE ODYSSEY.

So near approach we their celestial kind,
By justice, truth, and probity of mind;
As our dear neighbours of Cyclopean birth
Match'd in fierce wrong the giant-sons of earth. 290

Let no such thought (with modest grace rejoind'ld
The prudent Greek) possess the royal mind.
Alas! a mortal, like thyself, am I;
No glorious native of yon azure sky:
In form, ah how unlike their heavenly kind! 285
How more inferior in the gifts of mind!
Alas, a mortal! most opprest of those
Whom Fate has loaded with a weight of woes;
By a sad train of miseries alone
Distinguish'd long, and second how to wone! 290
By heaven's high will compet'ld from shore to shore;
With heaven's high will prepar'd to suffer more.
What histories of toil could I declare!
But still long-weary'd nature wants repair;
Spent with fatigue, and shrunk with pining lust, thy
My craving bowels still require repast.
H owe'er the noble, suffering mind, may grieve
Its load of anguish, and disdain to live,
Necessity demands our daily bread;
Hunger is insistent, and will be fed: 306
But finish, oh ye peers! what you propose,
And let the morrow's dawn conclude my woes.
Plead'd will I suffer till the gods ordain,
To see my toil, my son, my friends, again.
That view vouchsaf'd let instant death surprise 305
With ever-dwelling shade these happy eyes!

Th' assembled peers with general praise approv'd
His pleaded reason, and the suit he mov'd.
Each drinks a full oblivion of his cares,
And to the gifts of balmy sleep repairs. 310

Ulysses in the rear calls alone
Remain'd: beside him, on a splendid throne,
Divine Areté and Alcinoüs shone.
The queen, on nearer view, the guest survey'd,
Rob'd in the garments her own hands had made;
Not without wonder seen. Then thus began, 315
Her words addressing to the godlike man.
Cam'st thou not hither, wondrous stranger! say,
From lands remote, and o'er a length of sea?
Tell then whence art thou? whence that princely air?
And robes like these, so recent and so fair?

Hard is the task, oh princess! you impose
(Thus sighing spoke the man of many woes),
The long, the mournful series to relate
Of all my sorrows sent by Heaven and Fate!

Yet what you ask, attend. An island lies
Beyond these tracts, and under other skies,

Ogygia nam'd, in Ocean's watery arms;
Where dwells Calypso, dreadful in her charms!
Remote from gods or men she holds her reign,

Amid the terrors of the rolling main.

Me, only me, the hand of fortune bore,
Unblest! to tread that interdicted shore:
When Jove tremendous in the sable deeps
Launch'd his red lightning at our scatter'd ships;

Then, all my fleet, and all my followers lost,

Sole on a plank, on boiling surges tossed,
Heaven drove my wreck th' Ogygian isle to find,

Full nine days floating to the wave and wind.

Met by the goddess there with open arms,
She brib'd my stay with more than human charms;

Nay, promis'd, vainly promis'd, to bestow
Immortal life, exempt from age and woe;

But all her blandishments successless prove,
To banish from my breast my country's love.

I stay reluctant seven continued years,
And water her ambrosial couch with tears.
The eighth she voluntary moves to part,
Or urg'd by Jove, or her own changeful heart.

A raft was form'd to cross the surging sea;
Herself supply'd the stores and rich array,
And gave the gales to waft me on the way.

In seventeen days appear'd your pleasing coast,
And woody mountains half in vapours lost.

Joy touch'd my soul: my soul was joy'd in vain,
For angry Neptune rous'd the raging main;
The wild winds whistle, and the billows roar;
The splitting raft the furious tempest tore;
And storms vindictive intercept the shore.

Soon as their rage subsides, the seas I brave
With naked force, and shoot along the wave,
To reach this isle; but there my hopes were lost,
The surge impall’d me on a craggy coast.

I chose the safer sea, and chanc’d to find
A river’s mouth impervious to the wind,
And clear of rocks. I fainted by the flood;
Then took the shelter of the neighbouring wood.

’Twas night, and cover’d in the foliage deep,
Jove plung’d my senses in the death of sleep.

All night I slept, oblivious of my pain;
Aurora dawn’d and Phœbus shin’d in vain,
Nor, till oblique he slop’d his evening ray,
Had Somnus dry’d the balmy dews away.

Then female voices from the shore I heard:
A maid amidst them, goddess-like appear’d;
To her I sw’d, she pity’d my distress;
Like thee in beauty, nor in virtue less.

Who from such youth could hope considerate care?

In youth and beauty wisdom is but rare!
She gave me life, reliev’d with just supplies
My wants, and lent these robes that strike your eyes.
This is the truth: and oh, ye powers on high!

Forbid that want should sink me to a lie.

To this the king: Our daughter but exprest
Her cares imperfect to our godlike guest.

Suppliant to her, since first he chose to pray,
Why not herself did she conduct the way,
And with her handmaids to our court convey?

Here and king! (Ulysses thus reply’d)

Nor blame her faultless, nor suspect of pride:
She bade me follow in th’ attendant train;
But fear and reverence did my steps detain,
Lest rash suspicion might alarm thy mind:

Far from my soul (he cry’d) the gods efface
All wrath ill-grounded, and suspicion base!
What's'er is honest, stranger, I approve,
And would to Phœbus, Pallas, and to Jove,
Such as thou art, thy thought and mine were one,
Nor thou unwilling to be called my son.

In such alliance could'st thou wish to join,
A palace stor'd with treasures should he thine.
But, if reluctant, who shall force thy stay?
Jove bids to set the stranger on his way,
And ships shall wait thee with the morning ray.
Till then, let slumber close thy careful eyes;
The wakeful mariners shall watch the skies,
And seize the moment when the breezes rise:
Then gently waft thee to the pleasing shore,
Where thy soul rests, and labour is no more.

Far as Euboea though thy country lay,
Our ships with ease transport thee in a day,
Thither of old, earth's giant son* to view,
On wings of winds with Rhadamanth they flew;
This land, from whence their morning course began,
Saw them returning with the setting sun.

Your eyes shall witness and confirm my tale,
Our youth how dextrous and how fleet our sail,
When justly tim'd with equal sweep they row.
And ocean whitens in long tracts below.

Thus he. No word th' experience'd man replies,
But thus to heaven (and heavenward lifts his eyes),
Oh Jove! oh father! what the king accords
Do thou, make perfect! sacred be his words!
Wide o'er the world Alcinous' glory-shine!

Let fame be his, and ah! my country mine!

Meantime Areth, for the hour of rest,
Ordains the fleecy couch, and covering vest;
Bids her fair train the purple quilts prepare,
And the thick carpets spread with busy care.
With torches blazing in their hands they past,
And finish'd all their queen's command with haste;
Then gave the signal to the willing guest;
He rose with pleasure, and retir'd to rest.
There, soft-extended, to the murmuring sound
Of the high porch, Ulysses sleeps profound!
Within, releas'd from cares Alcinous lies;
And fast beside were clos'd Areth's eyes.

*Tityus.
THE

ODYSSEY.

BOOK VIII.

ARGUMENT.

Alcinous calls a council, in which it is resolved to transport Ulysses into his country. After which, splendid entertainments are made, where the celebrated musician and poet Demodocus plays and sings to the guests. They next proceed to the games, the race, the wrestling, discus, &c. where Ulysses casts a prodigious length, to the admiration of all the spectators. They return again to the banquet, and Demodocus sings the loves of Mars and Venus. Ulysses, after a compliment to the poet, desires him to sing the introduction of the wooden horse into Troy; which subject provoking his tears, Alcinous inquires of his guest his name, parentage, and fortunes.
BOOK VIII.

NOW fair Aurora lifts her golden ray,
And all the ruddy orient flames with day:
Alcinoüs, and the chief, with dawning light,
Rose instant from the slumbers of the night;
Then to the council-seat they bend their way,
And fill the shining thrones along the bay.

Meanwhile Minerva, in her guardian care,
Shoots from the starry vault through fields of air;
In form, a herald of the king she flies
From peer to peer, and thus incessant cries.

Nobles and chiefs who rule Phæacia's states,
The king in council your attendance waits;
A prince of grace divine your aid implores,
O'er unknown seas arriv'd from unknown shores.

She spoke, and sudden with tumultuous sounds
Of thronging multitudes the shore rebounds;
At once the seats they fill; and every eye
Gaz'd, as before some brother of the sky.
Pallas with grace divine his form improves,
More high he treads, and more enlarg'd he moves:
She sheds celestial bloom, regard to draw;
And gives a dignity of mien, to awe;
With strength, the future prize of fame to play,
And gather all the honours of the day.

Then from his glittering throne Alcinoüs rose:
Attend, he cry'd, while we our will disclose.
Your present aid this godlike stranger craves,
Tost by rude tempest through a war of waves;
Perhaps from realms that view the rising day,
Or nations subject to the western ray.

Then grant, what hers all sons of woe obtain
(For here affliction never pleads in vain):
Be chosen youths prepar'd, expert to try.
The vast profound, and bid the vessel fly;
Launch the tall bark, and order every oar;
Then in our court indulge the genial hour.
BOOK VIII.

THE ODYSSEY.

Instant, you sailors, to this task attend;
Swift to the palace, all ye peers, ascend;
Let none to strangers honours due disclaim;
Be there Demodocus, the bard of fame,
Taught by the gods to please, when high he sings
The vocal lay, responsive to the strings.

Thus spoke the prince; th' attending peers obey;
In state they move; Alcinoüs leads the way.
Swift to Demodocus the herald flies,
At once the sailors to their charge arise:
They launch the vessel, and unfurl the sails,
And stretch the swelling canvas to the gales;
Then to the palace move: a gathering throng,
Youth, and white age, tumultuous pour along.

Now all accesses to the dome are fill'd;
Eight boars, the choicest of the herd, are kill'd;
Two beeves, twelve fatlings, from the flock they bring
To crown the feast; so wills the bounteous king.
The herald now arrives, and guides along
The sacred master of celestial song;
Dear to the Muse! who gave his days to flow
With mighty blessings, mix'd with mighty woe;
With clouds of darkness quench'd his visual ray,
But gave him skill to raise the lofty lay.

High on a radiant throne sublime in state,
Encircled by huge multitudes he sate;
With silver shone the throne: his lyre well strung
To rapturous sounds, at hand Pontonus hung:
Before his seat a polish'd table shines,
And a full goblet foams with generous wines;
His food a herald bore: and now they fed;
And now the rage of craving hunger fled.

Then, fir'd by all the Muse, aloud he sings
The mighty deeds of demigods and kings:
From that fierce wrath the noble song arise,
That made Ulysses and Achilles foes;
How o'er the feast they doom the fall of Troy;
The stern debate Atrides hears with joy:
For heaven foretold the contest, when he trod
The marble threshold of the Delphic god.
Curious to learn the counsels of the sky,
E'er yet he knew'd the rage of war on Troy.

Touch'd at the song, Ulysses straight resign'd
To soft affliction all his manly mind;
Before his eyes the purple vest he drew,
Industrious to conceal the falling dew.
But when the music paus'd, he ceased to shed
The glowing tear, and rais'd his drooping head;
And, lifting to the gods a goblet crown'd,
He pour'd a pure libation to the ground.

Transported with the song, the listening tramp
Again with loud applause demand the strain;
Again Ulysses veil'd his pensive head,
Again unnam'd, a shower of sorrow shed;
Conceal'd he wept! the king observ'd alone
The silent tear, and heard the secret groan;
Then to the bard aloud—O cease to sing,
Dumb be thy voice, and mute th' harmonious string;
Enough the feast has pleas'd, enough the power
Of heavenly song has crown'd the genial hour!
Incessant in the games your strength display,
Content, ye brave, the honours of the day;
That pleas'd th' admiring Stranger may proclaim
In distant regions the Phæacian fame:
None wield the gauntlet with so dire a sway,
Or swifter in the race devour the way;
None in the leap spring with so strong a bound,
Or firmer, in the wrestling, press the ground.

Thus spoke the king; th' attending peers obey;
In state they move, Alcineus leads the way:
His golden lyre Demodocus unstrung,
High on a column in the palace hung;
And, guided by a herald's guardian cares,
Majestic to the lists of fame repairs.

Now swarms the populace: a countless throng,
Youth and hoar age; and man drives man along.
The games begin: ambitious of the prize,
Acroneus, Thoos, and Eretreus rise;
The prize Ocyalus and Prymus claim,
Auchialus and Pontois, chiefs of fame.
BOOK VIII. THE ODYSSEY.

There Proetus, Nausus, Eustros, appear,
And fair'd Amphialus, Polyneus' hair;
Euryalus, like Mars terrific, rose,
When clad in wrath he withers host of foes;
Naubolides with grace unequal'd shone,
Or equal'd by Laomedon alone.
With these came forth Ambassadors the strong;
And three brave sons, from great Alcinous sprung.
. Rang'd in a line the ready races stand,
Start from the goal, and vanish o'er the strand:
Swift as on wings of winds, upborne they fly,
And drifts of rising dust involve the sky.
Before the rest, what space the hind's allow
Between the mule and ox, from plough to plough;
Clytonous sprung: he wing'd the rapid way,
And bore th' unmatch'd honours of the day.
With force embrace the brawny wrestlers join;
The conquest, great Euryalus, is thine.
Amphialus sprung forward with a bound,
Superior in the leap, a length of ground.
From Elatros' strong arm the discus flies,
And sings with unmatch'd force along the skies.
And Laodem whirs high, with dreadful sway,
The gloves of death, victorious in the fray.

While thus the peerage in the games contends,
In act to speak, Laomedon ascends.

O friends, he cries, the stranger seems well skill'd
To try th' illustrious labours of the field:
I deem him brave: then grant the brave men's claim,
Ignite the hero to his shore of fame.
What nervous arms he beautes! how firm his trend!
His limbs how turn'd! how broad his shoulders spread!
By age unbroke!—but all-conquering care
Destroys perhaps the strength that time would spare:
Dire is the ocean, dread in all its forms!
Man must decay, when man contends with storms.

Well hast thou spoke (Euryalus replies):
Thine is the guest, invite him thou to rise,
Swift at the word advancing from the crowd
He made obeisance, and thus spoke aloud:
Vouchsafes the reverend stranger to display
His manly worth, and share the glorious day?
Father, arise! for thee thy port proclaims
Expert to conquer in the solemn games.
To fame arise! for what more fame can yield
Than the swift race, or conflict of the field?
Steal from corroding care one transient day,
To glory give the space thou hast to stay;
Short is the time, and lo! even now the gales
Call thee aboard, and stretch the swelling sails.

To whom with sighs Ulysses gave reply:
Ah why th' ill-suited pastime must I try?
To gloomy care my thoughts alone are free;
Ill the gay sports with troubled hearts agree:
Sad from my natal hour my days have ran,
A much-afflicted, much-enduring man!
Who suppliant to the king and peers implores
A speedy voyage to his native shores.

Wide wanders, Laodam, thy erring tongue,
The sports of glory to the brave belong (Retorts Euryalus): he boasts no claim
Among the great, unlike the sons of Fame,
A wandering merchant he frequents the main;
Some mean sea-farer in pursuit of gain;
Studious of freight, in naval trade well skill'd,
But dreads th' athletic labours of the field.

Incens'd Ulysses with a frown replies—
O forward to proclaim thy soul unwise!
With partial hands the gods their gifts dispense;
Some greatly think, some speak with manly sense;
Where Heaven an elegance of form denies,
But wisdom the defect of form supplies:
This man with energy of thought controuls,
And steals with modest violence our souls;
He speaks reserv'dly, but he speaks with force,
Nor can one word be chang'd but for a worse;
In public more than mortal he appears,
And, as he moves, the gazing crowd reveres.
While others, beauteous as th' ethereal kind,
The nobler portion want, a knowing mind.
BOOK VIII. THE ODYSSEY.

In outward show heaven gives thee to excel,
But heaven denies the praise of thinking well.
I'll bear the brave a rude unguided tongue,
And, youth, my generous soul resents the wrong:
Skill'd in heroic exercise, I claim
A post of honour with the sons of Fame.
Such was my boast while vigour crown'd my days,
Now care surrounds me, and my force decays;
Isarel'd a melancholy part to bear,
In scenes of death, by tempest and by war.
Yet, thus by woes impair'd, no more I wave
To prove the hero—slander stings the brave.

Then striding forward with a furious bound,
He wrench'd a rocky fragment from the ground, 310
By far more ponderous, and—more huge by far,
Than what Phæacia's sons discharg'd in air.
Fierce from his arm th' enormous load he flings,
Sonorous through the shaded air it sings;
Couch'd to th' earth, tempestuous as it flies, 315
The crowd gase upward while it cleaves the skies.
Beyond all marks, with many a giddy round
Down-rushing, it up-turns a hill of ground.
That instant Pallas, bursting from a cloud,
Fix'd a distinguishing mark, and cry'd aloud:
Ev'n he who sightless wants his visual ray
May by his touch alone award the day:
Thy signal throw transcends the utmost bound
Of every champion by a length of ground:
Securely bid the strongest of the train 325
Arise to throw; the strongest throws in vain.
She spoke; and momentary mounts the sky:
The friendly voice Ulysses hears with joy;
Then thus aloud, (slate with decent pride),
Rise, ye Phœacians, try your force, he cry'd;
If with this throw the strongest caster vie,
Still, further still, I bid the discus fly.
Stand forth, ye champions, who the gauntlet wield,
Or ye, the swiftest racers of the field!
Stand forth, ye wrestlers, who these pastimes grace!
I wield the gauntlet, and I run the race!
In such heroic games I yield to none,
Or yield to brave Laonoma alone:
Shall I, with brave Laonoma contend?
A friend is sacred; and I style him friend:
Ungenerous were the man, and base of heart,
Who takes the kind, and pays th' ungrateful part;
Chiefly the man, in foreign realms confined,
Base to his friend; to his own interest blind:
All, all your heroes I this day defy;
Give me a man that we our might may try.
Expert in every art, I boast the skill
To give the feather'd arrow wings to fly;
Should a whole host at once discharge the bow,
My well-aim'd shaft with death prevents the foe;
Alone, superior in the field of Troy,
Great Philoctetes taught the shaft to fly.
From all the sons of earth unrival'd praise
I justly claim; but yield to better days;
To those fam'd days when great Alcides rose,
And Eurytus, who bade the gods be foes
(Vain Eurytus, whose art became his crime;
Swept from the earth, he perish'd in his prime;
Sudden th' irrecoverable way he trod,
Who boldly durst defy the burden god).
In fighting fields as far the spear I throw
As flies an arrow from the well-drawn bow.
Sole in the race the contest I decline;
Stiff are my weary joints, and I resign;
By storms and hunger worn: age well may fail;
When storms and hunger both at once assail.
Abash'd, the numbers bear the godlike man,
Till great Alcinoüs mildly that began.
Well hast thou spoke, and well thy generous tongue
With decent pride refutes a public wrong:
Warm are thy words, but warm without offence;
Fear only fools, secure in men of sense;
Thy worth is known. Then hear our country's claim;
And bear to heroes our heroic fame:
In distant realms our glorious deeds display,
Repeat their frequent in the genial day;
BOOK VIII. THE ODYSSEY.

When blest with ease thy woes and wanderings end,
Teach them thy cream, bid thy sons attend!
How lov'd of love, he crown'd our sires with praise,
How we their offspring dignify our race.

Let other realms the deathful gauntlet yield,
Or boast the glories of th' athletic field;
We in the course unrival'd speed display,
Or through carulcan billows plough the way;
To dress, to dance, to sing, our sole delight;
The feast or bath by day, and love by night:
Rise then, ye skill'd in measures; let him bear
Your fame to men that breathe a distant air;
And faithful say, to you the powers belong
To race, to sail, to dance, to chant the song.

But, herald, to the palace swift repair,
And the soft lyre to grace our pastimes bear.

Swift at the word, obedient to the king,
The herald flies the tuneful lyre to bring,
Up rose mine seniors, chosen to survey
The future games, the judges of the day.
With instant ears they mark a spacious round,
And level for the dance th' allotted ground;
The herald bears the lyre: intent to play,
The bard advancing meditates the lay.

Skill'd in the dance, tall youths, a blooming band,
Graceful before the heavenly minstrel stand:
Light-bounding from the earth, at once they rise,
Their feet half-viewless quiver in the skies:
Ulysses gaz'd, astonish'd to survey
The glancing splendors as their sandals play.

Meantime the bard, alternate to the strings,
The loves of Mars and Cytherea sings;
How the stern god, enamour'd with her charms,
Chaep'd the gay panting goddess in his arms,
By bribes seduce'd; and how the sun, whose eye
Views the broad heavens, disclos'd the lawless joy.
Stung to the soul, indignant through the skies
To his black forge vindictive Vulcan flies:
Arriv'd, his sinewy arms incessant pace
To his eternal anvil on the mousy base.
A wondrous net he labours, to betray
The wanton lovers, as entwin'd they lay,
Indissolubly strong! Then instant bears
To his immortal dome the finish'd snares.

Above, below, around, with art disspread,
The sure inclosure folds the genial bed;
Whose texture ev'n the search of gods deceives,
Thin as the filmy threads the spider weaves.
Then, as withdrawing from the starry bowers,
He feigns a journey to the Lemnian shores,

His favourite isle: observant Mars descries
His wish'd recess, and to the goddess flies;
He glows, he burns, the fair-hair'd queen of love
Descends smooth gliding from the courts of Jove,
Gay blooming in full charms: her hand he prest
With eager joy, and with a sigh address'd.
Come, my belov'd; and taste the soft delights;
Come, to repose the genial bed invites:
Thy absent spouse, neglectful of thy charms,
Prefers his barbarous Sintians to thy arms!
Then, nothing loth, th' enamour'd fair he led,
And sunk transported on the conscious bed.
Down rush'd the toils, inwrapping as they lay;
The careless lovers in their wanton play:

In vain they strive; th' entangling snares deny
(Inextricably firm) the power to fly.
Warn'd by the god who sheds the golden day,
Stern Vulcan homeward treads the starry way:
Arriv'd, he sees, he grieves, with rage he burns:
Full horribly he roars, his voice all heaven returns.

O Jove, he cry'd, oh all ye powers above,
See the lewd dalliance of the queen of love!
Me, awkward me, she scorns; and yields her charms
To that fair lecher, the strong god of arms.
If I am lame, that stain my natal hour
By Fate impos'd; such me my parent bore.
Why was I born? See how the wanton lies!
O sight tormenting to an husband's eyes!

But yet I trust, this once ev'n Mars would fly
His fair-one's arms—he thinks her, once; too nigh.
BOOK VII. THE ODYSSEY. 359

But there remain, ye guilty, in my power,
Till Jove refunds his shameless daughter’s dower.
Too dear I priz’d a fair enchanting face;
Beauty unchast is beauty in disgrace. 360

Meanwhile the gods the dome of Vulcan throng;
Apollo comes, and Neptune comes along;
With these gay Hermes trod the starry plain;
But modesty withheld the goddess train.
All heaven beholds imprison’d as they lie. 365
And unextinguish’d laughter shakes the sky.
Then mutual, thus they spoke: Behold on wrong
Swift vengeance waits: and art subdues the strong!
Dwells there a god on all th’ Olympian brow
More swift than Mars, and more than Vulcan slow?
Yet Vulcan conquers, and the god of arms 371
Must pay the penalty for lawless charms.

Thus serious they: but he who gilds the skies,
The gay Apollo, thus to Hermes cries. 374
Would’st thou enchain’d like Mars, oh Hermes lie,
And bear the shame like Mars, to share the joy?
O envy’d shame! (the smiling youth rejoyn’d);
Add thrice the chains, and thrice more firmly bind;
Gaze all ye gods, and every goddess gaze,
Yet eager would I bless the sweet disgrace. 380

Lo! loud laugh the rest, ev’n Neptune laughs aloud,
Yet sues importunate to loose the god:
And free, he cries, oh Vulcan! free from shame
Thy captives; I ensure the penal claim.

Will Neptune (Vulcan then) the faithless trust?
He suffers who gives security for th’ unjust: 386
But say, if that lewd scandal of the sky,
To liberty restor’d, perfidious fly;
Say, wilt thou bear the mulct? He instant cries,
The mulct I bear, if Mars perfidious flies. 390

To whom appeas’d: No more I urge delay;
When Neptune sues, my part is to obey.
Then to the snares his force the god applies;
They burst; and Mars to Thrace indignant flies:
To the soft Cyprian shores the goddess moves, 392
To visit Paphos and her blooming groves,
Where to the Power an hundred altars rise,
And breathing odours scent the balmey skies;
Conceal'd she bathes in consecrated bowers,
The Graces unguent shed, ambrosial showers,
Unguents that charm the gods! she last assumes
Her wondrous robes: and full the goddess blooms.
Thus sung the bard; Ulysses hears with joy,
And loud applauses rend the vaulted sky.

Then to the sports his sons the king commands,
Each blooming youth before the monarch stands,
In dance unmatch'd! A wondrous ball is brought
(The work of Polypus, divinely wrought);
This youth with strength enormous bids it fly,
And bending backward whirls it to the sky;
His brother, springing with an active bound,
At distance intercepts it from the ground.
The ball dismiss'd, in dance they skim the strand,
Turn and return, and scarce imprint the sand.
Th' assembly gazes with astonished eyes,
And sends in shouts applauses to the skies.

Then thus Ulysses: Happy king, whose name
The brightest shines in all the rolls of fame!
In subjects happy! with surprise I gaze;
Thy praise was just; their skill transcends thy praise.

Pleas'd with his people's fame, the monarch hears,
And thus benevolent accosts the peers.
Since wisdom's sacred guidance he pursues,
Give to the stranger-guest a stranger's dues:
Twelve princes in our realm dominion share,
O'er whom supreme, imperial power I bear:
Bring gold, a pledge of love: a talent bring,
A vest, a robe, and imitate your king:
Be swift to give; that he this night may share
The social feast of joy, with joy sincere.
And thou, Euryalus, redeem thy wrong;
A generous heart repair: a slanderous tongue.

Th' assenting peers, obedient to the king,
In haste their heralds send the gifts to bring.
Then thus Euryalus: O prince, whose sway
Rules this blest realm, repentant I obey!
BOOK VIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Be his this sword, whose blade of brass displays
A ruddy gleam; whose hilt a silver blaze;
Whose ivory sheath, inwrought with curious pride,
Adds graceful terror to the wearer's side. 449

He said, and to his hand the sword consign'd;
And if, he cry'd, my words affect thy mind,
Far from thy mind these words, ye whirlwinds, bear,
And scatter them, ye storms, in empty air: 453
Crown, oh ye heavens, with joy his peaceful hours,
And grant him to his spouse, and native shores!

And blest be thou, my friend, Ulysses cries:
Crown him with every joy, ye favouring skies!
To thy calm hours continued peace afford,
And never, never may'st thou want this sword! 450

He said, and o'er his shoulder flung the blade.
Now o'er the earth ascends the evening shade:
The precious gifts th' illustrious heralds bear,
And to the court th' embodied peers repair.
Before the queen Alcinoüs' sons unfold 455
The vestes, the robes, and heaps of shining gold;
Then to the radiant thrones they move in state:
Aloft, the king in pomp imperial sate.

Thence to the queen. O partner of our reign,
O sole belov'd! command thy menial train 460
A polisht chest and stately robes to bear,
And healing waters for the bath prepare;
That, bath'd, our guest may bid his sorrows cease,
Hear the sweet song, and taste the feast in peace.
A bowl that flames with gold, of wondrous frame,
Ourself we give, memorial of our name;
To raise in offerings to almighty Jove,
And every god that treads the courts above.

Instant the queen, observant of the king,
Commands her train a spacious vase to bring, 470
The spacious vase with ample streams suffice,
Heap high the wood, and bid the flames arise.
The flames climb round it with a fierce embrace,
The fuming waters bubble o'er the blaze.
Herself the chest prepares: in order roll'd 475
The robes, the vestes are rang'd, and heaps of gold:
And adding a rich dress—inwrought with art,
A gift expressive of her bounteous heart;
Thus spoke to Ithacus: To guard with bands
Insolvable these gifts, thy care demands;
Lest, in thy slumbers on the watery main,
The hand of rapine make our bounty vain.

Then bending with full force, around he roll’d
A labyrinth of bands in fold on fold,
Clos’d with Circean art. A train attends
Around the bath: the bath the king ascends
(Untasted joy, since that disastrous hour,
Ye sail’d ill-fate’d from Calypso’s bower);
Where, happy as the gods that range the sky,
He feasted every sense, with every joy.

He bathes; the damsels, with officious toil,
Shed sweets, shed unguents, in a shower of oil:
Then o’er his limbs a gorgeous robe he spreads,
And to the feast magnificently treads.

Full where the dome its shining valves expands, Nausicaa blooming as a goddess stands,
With wondering eyes the hero she survey’d,
And graceful thus began the royal maid.

Hall, godlike stranger! and when heaven restores
To thy fond wish thy long-expected shores,
This ever grateful in remembrance bear,
To me thou ow’st; to me, the vital air.

O royal maid, Ulysses straight returns,
Whose worth the splendid of thy race adorns.

So may dread Jove (whose arm in vengeance forks
The writhe’st bolt, and blackens heaven with storms);
Restore me safe, through weary wanderings vast,
To my dearest country’s ever-pleasing coast,
As, while the spirit in this bosom glows,
To thee, my goddess; I address my vow.

My life! thy gift I boast! He said, and seat
Fast by Alcinous on a throne of state.

Now each partakes the feast; the wine prepared,
Portions the food, and each his portion shares.
The bard and herald guide; the jangling string
Pay low obedience as he moves along;
BOOK VIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Beneath a sculptured arch he sits enthroned;
The peerless encircling form an awful fold;
Then, from the chieft, Ulysses carves with art
Delicious food, an honorary part;
This, let the master of the lyre receive,
A pledge of love! this ill a wretch can give.
Lives there a man beneath the spacious skies,
Who sacred honours to the bard denies?
The Muse the bard inspires, exults his mind;
The Muse indulgent loves thy harmonious kind.
The herald to his hand the charge conveys;
Not fond of flattery, nor.unpleas’d with praise.

When now the rage of hunger was allay’d;
Thus to the Lyrist, wise Ulysses said:
U more than man! thy soul the Muse inspires,
Or Phoebus animates with all his fires;
For who, by Phoebus unform’d, could know
The woe of Greece; and sing so well the woe?
Just to the tale, as present at the fray;
Or taught the labours of the dreadful day!
The song recalls past terrors to thy eyes;
And bids proud Ilion from her ashes rise.
Once more harmonious strike the sounding string,
The Epean fabric, fram’d by Pallas, sing:
How stern Ulysses, furious to destroy;
With stout heroes back’d imperial Troy.
If faithful thou record the tale of fame,
The god himself inspires thy breast with spirits;
And mine shall be the tale henceforth to raise
In every land thy monument of praise.

Fell of the god, he rais’d his lofty strain,
How the Greeks rush’d tumultuous to the math;
How baying terrors Hidminus’d half the skies,
While from the shores the winged navy fled;
How, ev’n in Ilion’s walls, in deathful bands;
Came the stern Greeks by Troy’s assisting hands:
All Troy up-ho’d the steed; of differing mind;
Various the Trojan counsell’d; part consign’d
The monster to the sword, part sentence gave
To plunge it headlong in the whirling wave;
The unwise award to lodge it in the towers,
An offering sacred to th' immortal powers:
The unwise prevail, they lodge it in the walls,
And by the god's decree proud Ilium falls:
Destruction enters in the treacherous wood,
And vengeful slaughter, fierce for human blood.

He sung the Greeks stern-issuing from the stead,
How Ilium burns, how all her father's bleed;
How to thy dome, Deiphobus! ascends
The Spartan king; how Ithacus attends
(Horrid as Mars), and how with dire alarms
He fights, subdues; for Pallas strings his arms.

Thus while he sung, Ulysses griefs renew,
Tears bathe his cheeks, and tears the ground bedew:
As some fond matron views in mortal fight
Her husband falling in his country's right:
Frantic through clashing swords she runs, she flies,
As ghastly pale he groans, and faints, and dies;
Close to his breast she grovels on the ground,
And bathes with floods of tears the gaping wound:
She cries, she shrieks; the fierce insulting foe
Relentless mocks her violence of woe:
To chains condemn'd, as wildly she deplores;
A widow, and a slave on foreign shores.

So from the sluices of Ulysses' eyes
Fast fell the tears, and sighs succeeded sighs:
Conceal'd he griev'd: the king observ'd alone
The silent tear, and heard the secret groan;
Then to the bard aloud: O cease to sing,
Dumb be thy voice, and mute the tuneful string;
To every note his tears responsive flow,
And his great heart heaves with tumultuous woe;
Thy lay too deeply moves: then cease the lay,
And o'er the banquet every heart be gay:
This social right demands: for him the sails,
Floating in air, invite th' impelling gales:
His are the gifts of love: the wise and good
Receive the stranger as a brother's blood.

But, friend, discover faithful what I crave,
Artful concealment ill becomes the brave;
Book VIII.  The Odyssey.

Say what thy birth, and what the name you bore,
Impos'd by parents in the natal hour?
(For from the natal hour distinctive names, one common right, the great and lowly claims); 609
Say from what city, from what regions tost,
And what inhabitants those regions boast?
So shalt thou instant reach the realm assign'd,
In wond'rous ships, self-mov'd, instinct with mind;
No helm secures their course, no pilot guides; 605
Like man intelligent, they plough the tides,
Conscious of every coast, and every bay,
That lies beneath, the sun's all-seeing ray;
Though clouds and darkness veil th' encumber'd sky,
Fearless thro' darkness and thro' clouds they fly;
Though tempests rage, though rolls the swelling main,
The seas may roll, the tempests rage in vain;
Ev'n the stern god that o'er the waves presides,
Safe as they pass, and safe repass the tides,
With fury burns; while careless they convey 615
Promiscuous every guest to every bay,
These ears have heard my royal sire disclose
A dreadful story big with future woes,
How Neptune rag'd, and how, by his command,
Firm rooted in the surge a ship should stand 620
A monument of wrath; how mound on mound
Should bury these proud towers beneath the ground.
But this the gods may frustrate or fulfill,
As suits the purpose of th' eternal will.
624
But say thro' what waste regions hast thou stray'd,
What customs noted, and what coasts survey'd;
Pessest by wild barbarians fierce in arms,
Or men, whose bosom tender pity warms?
Say why the fate of Troy awak'd thy cares, 629
Why heav'd thy bosom, and why low'd thy tears?
Just are the ways of Heaven: from Heaven proceed
The woes of man; Heaven doom'd the Greeks to bleed,
A theme of future song! Say then if slain
Some dear-lov'd brother press'd the Phrygian plain?
Or bled some friend, who bore a brother's part, 635
And claim'd by merit, not by blood, the heart?
The adventures of the Cicones, Lotophagi, and Cyclops.

Ulysses begins the relation of his adventures; how, after the destruction of Troy, he with his companions made an incursion on the Cicones, by whom they were repulsed; and meeting with a storm were driven to the coast of the Lotophagi. From thence they sailed to the land of the Cyclops, whose manners and situation are particularly characterised. The giant Polyphemus and his cave described; thenage Ulysses and his companions meet with there; and lastly, the method and artifice by which he escaped.
BOOK IX.

THEN thus Ulysses. Thou whom first in sway,
As first in virtue, these thy realms obey;
How sweet the products of a peaceful reign!
The heaven-taught poet, and enchanting strain;
The well-fill'd palace, the perpetual feast,
A land rejoicing, and a people blest!
How goodly seems it ever to employ
Man's social days in union and in joy;
The plenteous board high-heap'd with cates divine,
And o'er the foaming bowl the laughing wine!

'Amid these joys, why seeks thy mind to know
Th' unhappy series of a wanderer's woe?
Remembrance sad, whose image to review,
Alas! must open all my wounds anew!
And oh, what first, what last shall I relate,
Of woes unnumber'd sent by Heaven and Fate?
Know first the man (tho' now a wretch distrest)
Who hopes thee monarch, for his future guest.
Behold Ulysses! no ignoble name,
Earth sounds my wisdom, and high heaven my fame.

My native soil is Ithaca the fair,
Where high Neritus waves his woods in air;
Dulichium, Samé, and Zacynthus crown'd
With shady mountains, spread their isles around
(These to the north and night's dark regions run,
Those to Aurora and the rising sun).

Low lies our isle, yet blest in fruitful stores;
Strong are her sons, though rocky are her shores;
And none, ah none so lovely to my sight,
Of all the lands that heaven o'erspreads with light!
In vain Calypso long constrain'd my stay,
With sweet, reluctant, amorous, delay;
With all her charms as vainly Circe strove,
And added magic to secure my love.
In pomps or joys, the palace or the grot,
My country's image never was forgot.
My absent parents rose before my sight,
And distant lay contentment and delight.
Hear then the woes which mighty Jove ordain'd
to wait my passage from the Trojan land.
The winds from Ilion to the Cicon's shore,
Beneath cold Ithuriel our vessels bore.
We boldly landed on the hostile place,
And sack'd the city, and destroy'd the race,
Their wives inside captive, their possessions shar'd,
And every soldier found a like reward.
I then advis'd to fly; hot so the rest,
Who stay'd to revel, and prolong the feast:
The fatted sheep and sable bulls they slay,
And bowls flow round, and riot wastes the day.
Meantime the Cicon's to theirholds retir'd,
Call on the Cicon's with new fury fir'd;
With early morn the gather'd country swarms,
And all the continent is bright with arms;
Thick as the budding leaves or rising flowers
O'erspread th' land, when spring descends in showers:
All expert soldi'ers, skill'd on foot to dare,
Or from the bounding courser urge the war.
Now fortune changes (so the Fates ordain);
Our hour was come to taste our share of pain.
Close at the ships the bloody fight begin'd,
Wounded they wound, and man expiès on man.
Long as the morning sun increasing bright
O'er heaven's pure azure spread the growing light,
Promiscuous death the form of war confounds,
Each adverse battle got'd with equal wounds;
But when his evening wheels o'erhung the main,
Then conquest crown'd the fierce Ciconian train.
Six brave companions from each ship we lost,
The rest escape in haste, and quit the coast.
With sails outspread we fly th' unequal strife,
Sad for their loss, but joyful of our life.
Yet as we fled, our fellow's rites we paid,
And thrice we call'd on each unhappy shade.
Meanwhile the god whose hand the thunder forms,
Drives clouds on clouds, and blackens heaven with storms!
Wide o'er the waste the rage of Boreas sweeps,
And night roath'd headlong on the shaded deeps.
Now here, now there, the giddy ships are borne,
And all the rattling shrouds in fragments torn.

60 We furl'd the sail, we ply'd the labouting oar,
Took down our masts, and row'd our ships to shore.
Two tedious days and two long nights we lay,
O'erwatch'd and batter'd in the naked bay.

65 But the third morning when Aurora wings,
We rear the masts, we spread the canvas wings;
Refresh'd, and careless on the deck reclin'd,
We sit, and trust the pilot and the wind.
Then to my native country had I sail'd;
But the cape doubled, adverse winds prevail'd.

90 Strong was the tide, which, by the northern blast
Impell'd, our vessels on Cythera cast.

Nine days our fleet th' uncertain tempest bore
Far in wide ocean, and from sight of shore:
The tenth we touch'd, by various errors lost,

95 The land of Lotus and the flowery coast.
We climb'd the beach, and springs of water found,
Then spread our hasty banquet on the ground.
Three men were sent, deputed from the crew
(An herald one), the dubious coast to view,

100 And learn what habitants possess the place:
They went, and found a hospitable race:
Not prone to ill, nor strange to foreign guest,
They eat, they drink, and nature gives the feast;
The trees around them all their food produce;
Lotus, the name; divine, nectarous juice!
(Thence call'd Lotophagi); which whose taste,
Insatiate riots in the sweet repasts,
Nor other home, nor other care intends,

109 But quits his house, his country, and his friends.
The three we sent, from off th' enchanting ground
We dragg'd reluctant, and by force we bound:
The rest in haste forsook the pleasing shore,
Or, the charm tasted, had return'd no more.
New plac'd in order; on their banks, they sweep

115 The sea's smooth face, and strike the briny deep;
With heavy hearts we labour through the tide,
To coasts unknown and oceans yet untry'd.
The land of Cyclops first, a savage kind,
Nor tam'd by manners, nor by laws confin'd:
Untaught to plant, to turn the glebe and sow;
They all their products to free nature owe.
The soil until'd a ready harvest yields,
With wheat and barley wave the golden fields,
Spontaneous wines from weighty clusters pour,
And Jove descends in each prolific shower.
By these no statutes and no rights are known,
No council held, no monarch sits the throne,
But high on hills, or airy cliffs, they dwell,
Or deep in caves whose entrance leads to hell.
Each rules his race, his neighbour not his care,
Heedless of others, to his own severe.
Oppos'd to the Cyclopean coasts, there lay
An isle, whose hills their subject fields survey;
Its name Lachæa, crown'd with many a grove,
Where savage goats through pathless thickets rove:
No needy mortals here, with hunger bold,
Or wretched hunters through the wintery cold
Pursue their flight: but leave them safe to bound
From hill to hill, o'er all the desert ground.
Nor knows the soil to feed the fleecy care,
Or feels the labours of the crooked share;
But uninhabited, until'd, unsown
It lies, and breeds the bleating goat alone.
For there no vessel with vermilion prore,
Or bark of traffic, glides from shore to shore;
The rugged race of savages, unskill'd
The seas to traverse, or the ships to build,
Gase on the coast, nor cultivate the soil;
Unlearn'd in all the industrious arts of toil,
Yet here all products and all plants abound,
Sprung from the fruitful genius of the ground;
Fields waving high with heavy crops are seen,
And vines that flourish in eternal green,
Refreshing meads along the murmuring main,
And fountains streaming down the fruitful plain,
BOOK IX.  THE ODYSSEY.

A port there is, inclos'd on either side,
Where ships may rest, unanchor'd, and unt'y'd;
Till the glad mariners incline to sail,
And the sea whitens with the rising gale.

High at its head, from out the cavern'd rock
In living fills a gushing fountain broke;
Around it, and above, for ever green
The bushing alders form'd a shady scene.

Hither some favouring god, beyond our thought,
Through all-surrounding shade our navy brought;
For gloomy night descended on the main,
Nor glimmer'd Phoebe in th' ethereal plain:
But all unseen the clouded island lay,
And all unseen the surge and rolling sea,
Till safe we anchor'd in the shelter'd bay:
Our sails we gather'd, cast our cables o'er,
And slept secure along the sandy shore.

Soon as again the rosy morning shone,
Reveal'd the landscape and the scene unknown,
With wonder seis'd, we view the pleasing ground,
And walk delighted, and expatiate round.

Rous'd by the woodland nymphs at early dawn,
The mountain goats came bounding o'er the lawn:
In haste our fellows to the ships repair,
For arms and weapons of the sylvan war;
Straight in three squadrons all our crew we part,
And bend the bow, or wing the missile dart;
The bounteous gods afford a copious prey,
And nine fat goats each vessel bears away:
The royal bark had ten. Our ships complete
We thus supply'd (for twelve were all the fleet).

Here, till the setting sun roll'd down the light,
We sat indulging in the genial rite:
Nor wines were wanting; those from ample jars
We drain'd, the prize of our Cicilian wars.
The land of Cyclops lay in prospect near;
The voice of goats and bleating flocks we hear,
And from their mountains rising smokes appear.
Now sunk the sun, and darkness cover'd o'er
The face of things; along the sea-beat shore
Satiate we slept; but when the sacred dawn
Arising glitter'd o'er the dewy lawn,
I call'd my fellows, and these words addrest.

My dear associates, here indulge your rest:
While, with my single ship, adventurous I
Go forth, the manners of you men to try;
Whether a race unjust, of barbarous might,
Rude, and unconscious of a stranger's right;
Or such who harbour pity in their breast,
Revere the gods, and succour the distressed.

This said, I climb'd my vessel's lofty side;
My train obey'd me, and the ship unty'd.
In order seated on their benches; they sweep
Neptune's smooth face, and cleave the yielding deep,
When to the nearest verge of land we draw,
Fast by the sea a lonely cave we view,
High, and with darkening laurels cover'd o'er;
Where sheep and goats lay slumbering round the shore.

Near this, a fence of marble from the rock,
Brown with o'ershranking pine and spreading oak.
A giant shepherd here his flock maintains
Far from the rest, and solitary reigns,
In shelter thick of horded shade reclin'd;
And gloomy mischiefs labour in his mind.

A form enormous! far unlike the race
Of human birth, in stature, or in face;
As some lone mountain's monstrous growth he stood,
Crown'd with rough thickets and a nodding wood.
I left my vessel at the point of land,
And close to guard it, gave our crew command:
With only twelve, the boldest and the best,
I seek th' adventure, and forsake the rest.

Then took a goatskin fill'd with precious wine,
The gift of Maron of Evantheus' line
(The priest of Phoebus at th' Ithamarian shrine).
In sacred shade his honour'd mansion stood
Amidst Apollo's consecrated wood;
Here, and his house, Heaven mov'd my mind to save,
And costly presents in return he gave.
Seven golden talents to perfection wrought,
A silver bowl that held a copious draught,
And twelve large vessels of unmingled wine,
Mellifluous, undecaying, and divine!
Which now, some ages from his race conceal'd,
The hoary sire in gratitude conceal'd;
Such was the wine: to quench whose fervent steam
Scarce twenty measures from the living stream
To cool one cup suffic'd: the goblet crown'd
Breath'd aromatic fragrances around.

Of this an ample vase we hear'd aboard,
And brought another with provisions ster'd.
My soul foreboded I should find the tower
Of some fell monster, fierce with barbarous power,
Some rustic wretch, who liv'd in Heaven's despite,
Contemning laws, and trampling on the right.
The cave we found, but vacant all within (His flock the giant tended on the green):
But round the grot we gazed; and all we view,
In order rang'd, our admiration grew:
The bending shelves with loads of cheeses prest,
The folded flocks each separate from the rest
(The larger here, and there the lesser lambs,
The new-fall'n young here bleating for their dams;
The kid distinguish'd from the lambkin lies):
The cavern echoes with responsive cries.
Capacious chargers all around were laid,
Full pails, and vessels of the milking trade.
With fresh provisions hence our fleet to store
My friends advise me, and to quit the shore;
Or drive a flock of sheep and goats away,
Consult our safety and put off to sea.
Their wholesome counsel rashly I declin'd,
Curious to view the man of monstrous kind,
And try what social rites a savage lends:
Dire rites, alas! and fatal to my friends!

Then first a fire we kindle, and prepare
For his return with sacrifice and prayer.
The loaded shelves afford us full repast;
We sit expecting. Lo! he comes at last.
Near half a forest on his back he bore,
And cast the ponderous burden at the door.
It thunder'd as it fell. We trembled then,
And sought the deep recesses of the den.

Now driv'n before him through the arching rock,
Came tumbling, heaps on heaps, th' annumber'd flock:
Big-udder'd ewes, and goats of female kind
(The males were penn'd in outward courts behind); Then heav'd on high, a rock's enormous weight 294
To the cave's mouth he roli'd, and clos'd the gate (Scarce twenty four-wheel'd cars, compact and strong,
The massy load could bear, or roll along).
He next betakes him to his evening cares,
And, sitting down, to milk his flocks prepares;
Of half their udders eases first the dams,
Then to the mother's teat submits the lambs.
Half the white stream to hardening cheese he prest,
And high in wicker-baskets heap'd: the rest
Reserv'd in bowls, supply'd his nightly feast.
His labour done, he fir'd the pile, that gave 295
A sudden blaze, and lighted all the cave.
We stand discover'd by the rising fires;
Askance the giant glares, and thus inquires:
What are ye, guests: on what adventure, say,
Thus far ye wander through the watery way? 300
Pirates perhaps, who seek through seas unknown
The lives of others, and expose your own?
His voice like thunder through the cavern sounds:
My bold companions thrilling fear confounds,
Appall'd at sight of more than mortal man!
At length, with heart recover'd, I began:
From Troy's fam'd fields, sad wanderers o'er the main,
Behold the relics of the Grecian train!
Through various seas, by various perils tost,
And forc'd by storms, unwilling, on your coast; 310
Far from our destin'd course and native land,
Such was our fate, and such high Jove's command!
Nor what we are befits us to disclaim,
Atrides' friends (in arms a mighty name),
BOOK IX. THE ODYSSEY. 145

Who taught proud Troy and all her sons to bow;
Victors of late, but humble suppliants now!
Low at thy knee thy succour we implore;
Respect us, human, and relieve us, poor.
At least some hospitable gift bestow;
'Tis what the happy to th' unhappy owe:
'Tis what the gods require: those gods revere,
The poor and stranger are their constant care;
To Jove their cause, and their revenge belongs,
He wanders with them, and he feels their wrongs.

Pools that ye are! (the savage thus replies,
His inward fury blazing at his eyes)
Or strangers, distant far from our abodes,
To bid me reverence or regard the gods.
Know then, we Cyclopes are a race, above
Those air-bred people, and their goat-nurs'd Jove;
And learn, our power proceeds with thee and thine,
Not as he wills, but as ourselves incline.
But answer, the good ship that brought ye o'er,
Where lies she anchor'd? near or off the shore?

Thus he. His meditated fraud I find (Vers'd in the turns of various human-kind);
And, cautious, thus. Against a dreadful rock,
Fast by your shore the gallant vessel broke.
Scarce with these few I 'scap'd; of all my train,
Whom angry Neptune whelm'd beneath the main:
The scatter'd wreck the winds blew back again.

He answer'd with his deed, his bloody hand
Snatch'd two, unhappy! of my martial band;
And dash'd like dogs against the stony floor:
The pavement swims with brains and mingled gore.
Torn limb from limb, he spreads his horrid feast,

And fierce devours it like a mountain beast:
He sucks the marrow, and the blood he drains,
Nor entrails, flesh, nor solid bone remain's.
We see the death from which we cannot move,
And humbled groan beneath the hand of Jove.
His ample maw with human carnage fill'd,
A milky deluge next the giant swill'd.
Then stretch'd in length o'er half the cavern'd rock,
Lay senseless, and supine, amidst the flock.

To seize the time, and with a sudden wound
To fix the slumbering monster to the ground,
My soul impels me; and in act I stand
To draw the sword; but wisdom held my hand.

A deed so rash had finish'd all our fate,
No mortal forces from the lofty gate
Could roll the rock. In hopeless grief we lay,
And sigh, expecting the return of day.

Now did the rosy-finger'd morn arise;
And shed her sacred light along the skies.

He wakes, he lights the fire, he milks the dams,
And to the mothers' teats submits the lambs.
The task thus finish'd of his morning hours,
Two more he snatches, murders, and devours.

Then pleas'd, and whistling, drives his flock before;
Removes the rocky mountain from the door,
And shuts again: with equal ease dispos'd,
As a light quiver's lid is ope'd and clos'd.

His giant voice the echoing region fills;
His flocks, obedient, spread o'er all the hills.

Thus left behind, ev'n in the last despair
I thought, devis'd, and Pallas heard my prayer.
Revenge, and doubt, and caution, work'd my breast;
But this of many counsels seem'd the best:
The monster's club within the cave I spy'd,
A tree of stateliest growth, and yet undry'd,
Green from the wood; of height and bulk so vast,
The largest ship might claim it for a mast.
This shortenu'd of its top, I gave my train
A fathom's length, to shape it and to plane;
The narrower end I sharpen'd to a spire;
Whose point we harden'd with the force of fire,
And hid it in the dust that strew'd the cave.

Then to my few companions, bold and brave,
Propos'd, who first the venturous deed should try,
In the broad orbit of his monstrous eye
To plunge the brand, and twirl the pointed wood,
When slumber next should tame the man of blood.

Just as I wish'd, the lots were cast on four:
Myself the fifth. We stand and wait the hour,
He comes with evening: all his sleeky flock
Before him march, and pour into the rock:
Not one, or male or female, staid behind
(So fortune chanc'd, or so some god design'd);
Then heaving high the stone's unwieldy weight, 400
He roll'd it on the cave, and clos'd the gate.
First down he sits, to milk the woolly dams,
And then permits their udder to the lambs.
Next seiz'd two wretches more, and headlong cast,
Brain'd on the rock; his second dire repast. 405
I then approach'd him reeking with their gore,
And held the brimming goblet foaming o'er;
Cyclop! since human flesh has been thy feast,
Now drain this goblet, potent to digest;
Know hence what treasures in our ship we lost, 410
And what rich liquors other climates boast.
We to thy shore the precious freight shall bear,
If home thou send us, and vouchsafe to spare.
But oh! thus furious, thus thirsting after gore,
The sons of men shall ne'er approach thy shore, 415
And never shalt thou taste this nectar more.
He heard, he took, and pouring down his throat,
Delighted, swill'd the large luxurious draught.
More! give me more; he cry'd: the boon be thine,
Whoe'er thou art that bear'st celestial wine! 420
Declare thy name; not mortal is this juice,
Such as th' nublest Cyclopean climes produce
(Though sure our vine the largest cluster yields,
And Jove's scorn'd thunder serves to drench our fields);
But this descended from the blest abodes,
A rill of nectar, streaming from the gods.
He said, and greedy grasp'd the heady bowl,
Thrice drain'd, and pour'd the deluge on his soul.
His sense lay cover'd with the dozy fume;
While thus my fraudulent speech I re-assume. 430
Thy promis'd boon, O Cyclop! now I claim,
And plead my title; Nomán is my name,
By that distinguish'd from my tender years,
'Tis what my parents call me, and my peers.
The giant then: Our promis'd grace receive;
The hospitable boon we mean to give:
When all thy wretched crew have felt my power,
None shall be the last I will devour.

He said: then nodding with the fumes of wine
Dropt his huge head, and snoring lay supine.
His neck obliquely o'er his shoulders hung,
Prest with the weight of sleep that tames the strong I
There belch the mingled streams of wine and blood,
And human flesh, his indigested food.
Sudden I stir the embers, and inspire
With animating breath the seeds of fire;
Each drooping spirit with bold words repair,
And urge my train the dreadful deed to dare.
The stake now glow'd beneath the burning bed
(Green as it was) and sparkled fiery red,
Then forth the vengeful instrument I bring;
With beating hearts my fellows form a ring.
Urg'd by some present god, they swift let fall
The pointed torment on his visual ball.
Myself above them from a rising ground
Guide the sharp stake, and twirl it round and round.
As when a shipwright stands his workmen o'er,
Who ply the whimble, some huge beam to bore;
Urg'd on all hands, it nimbly spins about,
The grain deep-piercing till it scoops it out:
In his broad eye so whirls the fiery wood;
From the pierc'd pupil spouts the boiling blood;
Sing'd are his brows: the scorching lids grow black;
The jelly bubbles, and the fibres crack.
And as when armourers temper in the ford
The keen-edg'd pole-ax, or the shining sword,
The red-hot metal hisses in the lake,
Thus in his eye-ball hiss'd the plunging stake.
He sends a dreadful groan, the rocks around
Through all their utmost winding caves resound.
Scar'd we receded. Forth with frantic hand,
He tore, and dash'd on earth the goary brand:
Then calls the Cyclops, all that round him dwell,
With voice like thunder, and a direful yell.
BOOK IX.  THE ODYSSEY.

From all their dens the one-ey'd race repair,
From rifted rocks, and mountains bleak in air,
All haste assembled, at his well-known roar,
Inquire the cause, and crowd the cavern door.

What hurts thee Polyphemus? what strange affright
Thus breaks our slumbers, and disturbs the night?
Does any mortal, in th' unguarded hour
Of sleep, oppress thee, or by fraud or power?
Or thieves insidious thy fair flock surprise?
Thus they: the Cyclop from his den replies:

"Friends, no man kills me; no man, in the hour
Of sleep, oppresses me with fraudulent power.
"If no man hurt thee, but the hand divine
"Inflict disease, it fits thee to resign:
"To Jove or to thy father Neptune pray,"
The brethren cried, and instant strode away.

Joy touch'd my secret soul and conscious heart,
Pleas'd with th' effect of conduct and of art.
Meantime the Cyclop, raging with his wound,
Spreads his wide arms, and searches round and round:
At last, the stone removing from the gate,
With hands extended in the midst he sate:
And search'd each passing sheep, and felt it o'er,
Secure to seize us ere we reach'd the door
(Such as his shallow wit he deem'd was mine);
But secret I revolv'd the deep design;
'Twas for our lives my labouring bosom wrought;
Each scheme I turn'd and sharpen'd every thought;
This way and that I cast to save my friends,
Till one resolve my varying counsel ends.

Strong were the rams, with native purple fair,
Well fed, and largest of the fleecy care.
These three and three, with osier bands we ty'd
(The twining bands the Cyclop's bed supply'd);
The midmost bore a man, the outward two
Secur'd each side: so bound we all the crew.
One ram remain'd, the leader of the flock;
In his deep fleece my grasping hands I lock,
And fast beneath, in woolly curls inwove,
I cling implicit, and confide in Jove.
When rosy morning glimmer'd o'er the dales,
He drove to pasture all the lusty males:
The ewes still folded, with distended thighs
Unmilk'd, lay bleating in distressful cries.
But heedless of those cares, with anguish stung,
He felt their fleeces as they past along
(Fool that he was) and let them safely go,
All unsuspecting of their freight below.

The master ram at last approach'd the gate,
Charg'd with his wool, and with Ulysses' fate,
Him while he past, the monster blind bespake:
What makes my ram the lag of all the flock?
First thou wert wont to crop the flowery mead,
First to the field and river's bank to lead,
And first with stately step at evening hour
Thy fleecy fellows usher to theirbower.

Now far the last, with pensive pace and slow
Thou mov'st, as conscious of thy master's woe!
Seest thou these lads that now unfold in vain?
(The deed of Noman and his wicked train!)
Oh! didst thou feel for thy afflicted lord,
And wouldst but Fate the power of speech afford,
Soon might'st thou tell me, where in secret here
The dastard lurks, all trembling with his fear:
Swung round and round, and dash'd from rock to rock,
His batter'd brains should on the pavement smoke.
No ease, no pleasure my sad heart receives,
While such a monster as vile Noman lives.

The giant spoke, and through the hollow rock
Dismiss'd the ram, the father of the flock.
No sooner freed, and through th'insclosure past,
First I release myself, my fellows last:
Fat sheep and goats in thongs we drive before,
And reach our vessel on the winding shore.
With joy the sailors view their friends return'd
And hail us living, whom as dead they mourn'd.
Big tears of transport stand in every eye;
I check their fondness, and command to fly.
Aboard in haste they heave the wealthy sheep,
And snatch their oars, and rush into the deep,
BOOK IX. THE ODYSSEY.

Now off at sea, and from the shallows clear, As far as human voice could reach the ear, With taunts the distant giant I accost. Hear me, O Cyclop! hear, ungracious host! 'Twas on no coward, no ignoble slave, Thou meditat'st thy meal in yonder cave; But one, the vengeance fated from above Doom'd to inflict; the instrument of Jove. Thy barbarous breach of hospitable bands, The god, the god revenges by my hands,

These words the Cyclop's burning rage provoke; From the tall hill he rends a pointed rock, High o'er the billows flew the massy load, And near the ship came thundering on the flood. It almost brush'd the helm, and fall before: The whole sea shook, and tumult beat the shore. The strong concussion on the heaving tide Roll'd back the vessel to the island's side:

Again I shov'd her off, our fate to fly,
Each nerve we stretch, and every oar we ply,
Just 'scap'd impending death, when now again
We twice as far had furrow'd back the main,
Once more I raise my voice; my friends afraid
With mild entreaties my design dissuade,
What boots the godless giant to provoke,
Whose arm may sink us at a single stroke?
Already, when the dreadful rock he throw, Old Ocean shook, and back his surges flew. Thy sounding voice directs his aim again;
The rock o'erwhelms us, and we scap'd in vain.

But I, of mind elate, and scorning fear,
Thus with new taunts insult the monster's ear.
Cyclop! if any, pitying thy disgrace,
Ask who disfigur'd thus that eyeless face?
Say, 'twas Ulysses, 'twas his deed, declare,
Laërtes' son, of Ithaca the fair;
Ulysses, far in fighting fields renown'd,
Before whose arm Troy tumbled to the ground.
Th' astonish'd savage with a roar replies:
Oh heavens! oh faith of ancient prophecies!
This, Telemus Eurymedes foretold
(The mighty seer who on these hills grew old;
Skill'd the dark fates of mortals to declare,
And learnt in all wing'd omens of the air);
Long since he menac'd, such was Fate's command:
And nam'd Ulysses as the destin'd hand.
I deem'd some godlike giant to behold,
Or lofty hero, haughty, brave, and bold;
Not this weak pigmy-wretch, of mean design,
Who not by strength subdued me, but by wine.
But come, accept our gifts, and join to pray
Great Neptune's blessing on the watery way;
For his I am, and I the lineage own;
Th' immortal father no less boasts the son.
His power can heal me, and re-light my eye;
And only his, of all the gods on high.

Oh! could his arm, (I thus aloud rejoind)
From that vast bulk dislodge thy bloody mind,
And send thee howling to the realms of night!
As sure, as Neptune cannot give thee sight.
Thus I; while raging he repeats his cries,
With hands uplifted to the starry skies.
Hear me, O Neptune! thou whose arms are hurl'd
From shore to shore, and gird the solid world,
If thine I am, nor thou my birth disown,
And if th' unhappy Cyclop be thy son;
Let not Ulysses breathe his native air,
Laërtes' son, of Ithaca the fair.
If to review his country be his fate,
Be it through toils and sufferings long and late;
His lost companions let him first deplore;
Some vessel, not his own, transport him o'er;
And when at home from foreign sufferings freed,
More near and deep, domestic woes succeed!
With imprecations thus he fill'd the air,
And angry Neptune heard th' unrighteous prayer.
A larger rock then heaving from the plain,
He whirl'd it round; it sung across the main;
It fell, and brush'd the stern: the billows roar,
Shake at the weight, and refract beat the shore.
With all our force we kept aloof to sea,
And gain’d the island where our vessels lay.
Our sight the whole collected navy cheer’d,
Who, waiting long, by turns had hop’d and fear’d.
There disembarking on the green sea-side,
We land our cattle, and the spoil divide:
Of these due shares to every sailor fall;
The master ram was voted mine by all:
And him (the guardian of Ulysses’ fate)
With pious mind to heaven I consecrate.
But the great god, whose thunder rends the skies,
Averse, behold the smoking sacrifice;
And sees me wandering still from coast to coast;
And all my vessels, all my people, lost!
While thoughtless we indulge the genial site,
As plenteous cats and flowing bowls invite;
Till evening Phæbus call’d away the light:
Stretch’d on the shore in careless ease we rest,
Till ruddy morning purpled o’er the east,
Then from their anchors all our ships unbind,
And mount the decks, and call the willing wind.
Now, rang’d in order on our banks, we sweep
With hasty strokes the hoarse-resounding deep;
Blind to the future, pensive with our fears,
Glad for the living, for the dead in tears.
THE ODISSEY.

BOOK X.

ARGUMENT.

Adventures with Eolus, the Lestrigons, and Circe. Ulysses arrives at the island of Eolus, who gives him prosperous winds, and incloses the adverse ones in a bag, which his companions untying, they are driven back again, and rejected. Then they sail to the Lestrigons, where they lose eleven ships, and, with one only remaining; proceed to the island of Circe. Eurylochus is sent first with some companions, all which, except Eurylochus, are transformed into swine. Ulysses then undertakes the adventure, and, by the help of Mercury, who gives him the herb Moly, overcomes the enchantress, and procures the restoration of his men. After a year's stay with her, he prepares at her instigation for his voyage to the infernal shades.
BOOK X.

At length we reach'd Æolia's sea-girt shore,
Where great Hippotasdes the sceptre bore,
A floating isle! High-rais'd by toil divine,
Stroeg walls of brass the rocky coast confine.

Six blooming youths, in private grandeur bred,
And six fair daughters, grac'd the royal bed:
These sons their sisters wed, and all remain
Their parent's pride, and pleasure of their reign.

All day they feast, all day the bowls flow round,
And joy and music through the isle resound:
At night each pair on splendid carpets lay,
And crown'd with love the pleasures of the day.

This happy port affords our wandering fleet
A month's reception, and a safe retreat.
Full oft the monarch urg'd me to relate
The fall of Ilion, and the Grecian fate;

Full oft I told; at length for parting mov'd:
The king with mighty gifts my suit approv'd.
The adverse winds in leathern'd bags he brac'd,
Compress'd their force, and lock'd each struggling blast:

For him the mighty sire of gods assign'd
The tempest's lord, and tyrant of the wind:
His word alone the listening storms obey,
To smooth the deep, or swell the foamy sea.

These in my hollow ship the monarch hung,
Securely settler'd by a silver throng;
But Zephyrus exempt, with friendly gales
He charg'd to fill, and guide the swelling sails:

Rare gift! but oh, what gift to fools avails!
Nine prosperous days we ply'd the labouring oar;
The tenth presents our welcome native shore:
The hills display the beacon's friendly light,

And rising mountains gain upon our sight.
Then first my eyes, by watchful toils opprest,
Comply'd to take the balmy gifts of rest;
Then first my hands did from the rudder part
(So much the love of home possess'd my heart);
When lo! on board a fond debate arose;
What rare device those vessels might inclose?
What sum, what prize from Æolus I brought?
Whilst to his neighbour each express'd his thought.

Say, whence, ye gods, contending nations strive
Who most shall please, who most our hero give?
Long have his coffers groan'd with Trojan spoils;
Whilst we, the wretched partners of his toils,
Reproach'd by want, our fruitless labours mourn,
And only rich in barren fame return.
Now Æolus, ye see, augments his store:
But come, my friends, these mystic gifts explore.
They said; and (oh curst fate) the thongs unbound!
The gushing tempest sweeps the ocean round;
Snatch'd in the whirl, the hurriss navy flew,
The ocean widen'd, and the shores withdrew.
Rous'd from my fatal sleep, I long debate
If still to live, or desperate plunge to Fate;
Thus doubting, prostrate on the deck I lay,
Till all the coward thoughts of death gave way.

Meanwhile our vessels plough the liquid plain,
And soon the known Æolian coast regain,
Our groans the rocks remurmur'd to the main.
We leap'd on shore, and with a scanty feast
Our thirst and hunger hastily repress'd;
That done, two chosen heralds straight attend
Our second progress to my royal friend:
And him amidst his jovial sons we found;
The banquet steaming, and the goblets crown'd:
There humbly stopp'd with conscious shame and awe,
Nor nearer than the gate presum'd to draw.
But soon his sons their well-known guest describ'd,
And starting from their couches loudly cry'd.
Ulysses here! what daemon couldst thou meet
To thwart thy passage, and repel thy fleet?
Wast thou not furnish'd by our chiepest care
For Greece, for home, and all thy soul held dear?
Thus they; in silence long my fate I mourn'd.
At length these words with accent low return'd.
Me, lock'd in sleep, my faithless crew bereft
Of all the blessings of your godlike gift!
But grant, oh grant our loss we may retrieve:
A favour you, and you alone can give.

Thus I with art to move their pity try'd,
And touch'd the youths; but their stern sire reply'd:
Vile wretch, begone! this instant I command
Thy fleet accurs'd to leave our hallow'd land.
His baseful suit pollutes these blest abodes,
Whose fate proclaims him hateful to the gods.

Thus fierce he said: we sighing went our way,
And with desponding hearts put off to sea.
The sailors spent with toils their folly morn,
But mourn in vain; no prospect of return:
Six days and nights a doubtful course we steer,
The next proud Lamos' stately towers appear,
And Læstrigonos's gates arise distinct in air.
The shepherd, quitting here at night the plain,
Calls, to succeed his cares, the watchful swain;
But he that scorns the chains of sleep to wear,
And adds the herdsman's to the shepherd's care,
So near the pastures, and so short the way,
His double toils may claim a double pay,
And join the labours of the night and day.

Within a long recess a bay there lies,
Edg'd round with cliffs high pointing to the skies;
The jutting shores that swell on either side
Contract its mouth, and break the rushing tide.
Our eager sailors seize the fair retreat,
And bound within the port: their crowded fleet;
For here retir'd the sinking billows sleep,
And smiling calmness silver'd o'er the deep.
I only in the bay refuse'd to moor,
And sird, without, my halsers to the shore.

From thence we climb'd a point, whose airy brow
Commands the prospect of the plains below:
No tracts of beasts, or signs of men, we found,
But smoky volumes rolling from the ground.
Two with our herald thither we command,
With speed to learn what men possess'd the land.
They went, and kept the wheel's smooth beaten road
Which to the city drew the mountain wood;
When lo! they met beside a crystal spring,
The daughter of Antiphates the king;                      120
She to Artacia's silver streams came down
(Artacia's streams alone supply the town):
The damsel they approach, and ask'd what race
The people were? who monarch of the place?
With joy the maid th' unwary strangers heard, 125
And show'd them where the royal dome appear'd.
They went; but, as they entering saw the queen
Of size enormous, and terrific mien
(Not yielding to some bulky mountain's height),
A sudden horror struck their aking sight. 130
Swift at her call her husband scout'd away
To wreak his hunger on the destin'd prey;
One for his food the raging glutton slew,
But two rush'd out and to the navy flew.
Balk'd of his prey, the yelling monster flies, 135
And fills the city with his hideous cries;
A ghastly band of giants hear the roar,
And, pouring down the mountains crowd the shore.
Fragments they rend from off the craggy brow,
And dash the ruins on the ships below: 140
The crackling vessels burst; hoarse groans arise,
And mingled horrors echo to the skies;
The men, like fish, they stuck upon the flood,
And cram'd their filthy throats with human food,
Whilst thus their fury rages at the bay, 143
My sword our cables cut, I call'd to weigh;
And charg'd my men, as they from fate would fly,
Each nerve to strain, each bending oar to ply.
The sailors catch the word, their ears they seize,
And sweep with equal strokes the smoky seas: 150
Clear of the rocks th' impatient vessel flies;
Whilst in the port each wretch encumber'd dies.
With earnest haste my frighted sailors press.
While kindling transports glow'd at our success;
But the sad fate that did our friends destroy 155
Cool'd every breast, and damp'd the rising joy.
BOOK X. THE ODYSSEY.

Now dropp'd our anchors in the Eean bay,
Where Circe dwell, the daughter of the Day!
Her mother Perse, of old Ocean's strain,
Thus from the Sun descended, and the Main
(From the same lineage stern Estes came,
The far-fam'd brother of the enchantress dame);
Goddess, and queen, to whom the powers belong
Of dreadful magic, and commanding song.
Some god directing to this peaceful bay
Silent we came, and melancholy lay,
Spent and o'erwatch'd. Two days and nights roll'd on,
And now the third succeeding morning alone.
I climb'd a cliff, with spear and sword in hand,
Whose ridge o'erlook'd a shady length of land:
To learn if ought of mortal works appear,
Or cheerful voice of mortal strike the ear?
From the high point I mark'd, in distant view,
A stream of curling smoke ascending blue,
And spiry tops, the tufted trees above,
Of Circe's palace bosom'd in the grove.
Thither to haste, the region to explore,
Was first my thought: but speeding back to shore
I deem'd it best to visit first my crew,
And send out spies the dubious coast to view.
As down the hill I solitary go,
Some power divine, who pities human wo,
Sent a tail stag, descending from the wood,
To cool his fervour in the crystal flood;
Luxuriant on the wave-worn bank he lay,
Stretch'd forth and panting in the sunny ray.
I launch'd my spear, and with a sudden wound
Transpire'd his back, and fix'd him to the ground.
He falls, and mourns his fate with human cries:
Through the wide wound the vital spirit flies.
I drew, and casting on the river's side
The bloody spear, his gather'd feet I ty'd
With twining osiers which the bank supply'd.
An all in length the pliant wisps I weav'd
And the huge body on my shoulders heav'd:
Then leaning on the spear with both my hands,
Upbore my load, and press'd the sinking sands.
With weighty steps, till at the ship I threw
The welcome burden, and besoke my crew.
Cheer up, my friends! it is not yet our fate
To glide with ghosts through Pluto's gloomy gate.
Food in the desert land, behold! is given;
Live, and enjoy the providence of Heaven.
The joyful crew survey his mighty size,
And on the future banquet feast their eyes,
As huge in length extended lay the beast;
Then wash their hands, and hasten to the feast.
There, till the setting sun roll'd down the light,
They sat indulging in the genial rite.
When evening rose, and darkness cover'd o'er
The face of things, we slept along the shore.
But when the rosy morning warm'd the east,
My men I summon'd, and these words addrest.
Followers and friends! attend what I propose:
Ye sad companions of Ulysses' woes!
We know not here what land before us lies,
Or to what quarter now we turn our eyes,
Or where the sun shall set, or where shall rise.
Here let us think (if thinking be not vain)
If any counsel, any hope remain.
Alas! from yonder promontory's brow
I view'd the coast, a region flat and low;
An isle encircled with the boundless flood;
A length of thickets, and entangled wood.
Some smoke I saw amid the forest rise,
And all around it only seas and skies!
With broken hearts my sad companions stood,
Mindful of Cyclops and his human food,
And horrid Læstrigons, the men of blood.
Presaging tears apace began to rain;
But tears in mortal miseries are vain.
In equal parts I straight divide my band,
And name a chief each party to command;
I led the one, and of the other side
Appointed brave Eurylochus the guide:
Then in the brazen helm the lots we throw,
And fortune cast Eurylochus to go:
He march'd with twice eleven in his train;
Pensive they march, and pensive we remain. —

The palace in a woody vale they found,
High rais'd of stone; a shaded space around;
Where mountain wolves, and brindled lions roam,
(By magic tam'd) familiar to the dome.
With gentle blandishment our men they meet,
And wag their tails, and fawning lick their feet. 248
As from some feast a man returning late,
His faithful dogs all meet him at the gate,
Rejoicing round, some morsel to receive (Such as the good man ever us'd to give).
Domestic thus the grisly beasts drew near;
They gaze with wonder not unmix'd with fear.
Now on the threshold of the dome they stood,
And heard a voice resounding through the wood:
Plac'd at her loom within, the goddess sung;
The vaulted roofs and solid pavement rung. 255
O'er the fair web the rising figures shine,
Immortal labour! worthy hands divine.
Polites to the rest the question mov'd
(A gallant leader, and a man I lov'd).

What voice celestial, chanting to the loom
(Or nymph, or goddess) echoes from the room?
Say, shall we seek access? With that they call;
And wide unfold the portals of the hall.

The goddess rising, asks her guests to stay,
Who blindly follow where she leads the way,
Earylochus alone of all the band,
Suspecting fraud, more prudently remain'd.
On thrones around with downy coverings grac'd,
With semblance fair, th' unhappy men she plac'd.
Milk newly press'd, the sacred flour of wheat,
And honey fresh, and Pramnian wines the treat:
But venom'd was the bread, and mix'd the bowl,
With drugs of force to darken all the soul:
Soon in the luscious feast themselves they lost,
And drank oblivion of their native coast. 275
Instant her circling wand the goddess waves,
To hogs transforms them, and the sty receives.
No more was seen the human form divine;
Head, face, and members, bristle into swine:
Still curst with sense, their minds remain alone, 280
And their own voice affrights them when they groan.
Meanwhile the goddess in disdain bestows
The mast and acorn, brutal food! and strows
The fruits of cornel, as their feast, around;
Now prone and groveling on unsavory ground. 285
Eurylochus, with pensive steps and slow,
Aghast returns; the messenger of woe,
And bitter fate. To speak he made essay,
In vain essay'd, nor would his tongue obey. 289
His swelling heart deny'd the words their way!
But speaking tears the want of words supply,
And the full soul bursts copious from his eye.
Affrighted, anxious for our fellows' fates,
We press to hear what sadly he relates.

We went, Ulysses! (such was thy command!) 295
Through the lone thicket and the desert land,
A palace in a woody vale we found
Brown with dark forests, and with shades around.
A voice celestial echoed from the dome,
Or nymph, or goddess, chanting to the loom. 300
Access we sought, nor was access deny'd:
Radiant she came; the portals open'd wide:
The goddess mild invites the guests to stay:
They blindly follow where she leads the way.
I only wait behind of all the train: 305
I waited long, and ey'd the doors in vain:
The rest are vanish'd, none repass'd the gate;
And not a man appears to tell their fate.
I heard, and instant o'er my shoulders flung
The belt in which my weighty falchion hung 310
(A beamy blade): then seiz'd the bended bow,
And bade him guide the way, resolv'd to go.
He, prostrate falling, with both hands embrac'd
My knees, and weeping thus his suit address'd.
O king, belov'd of Jove, thy servant spare, 315
And ah, thyself the rash attempt forbear!
Never, alas! thou never shalt return,
Or see the wretched for whose loss we mourn.
BOOK X.  THE ODYSSEY,  163

With what remains from certain rules fly,
And save the few not faced yet to die.  320

I answer'd stern.  Inglorious then remain,
Here feast and loiter, and desert thy train.
Alone, unfriended, will I tempt my way;
The laws of fate compel, and I obey.

This said, and scornful turning from the shore 328
My haughty step, I stalk'd the valley o'er.
Till now approaching nigh the magic bower;
Where dwelt th' enchantress skill'd in herbs of power,
A form divine forth issued from the wood
(Immortal Hermes with the golden rod) 330
In human semblance.  On his bloomy face
Youth smil'd celestial, with each opening grace.
He seiz'd my hand, and gracious thus began.
Ah whither roam'st thou, much-enduring man?
O blind to fate! what led thy steps to rove 336
The hallowed mazes of this magic grove!
Each friend you seek in you enclosure lies,
All lost their form, and habitants of styg.
Think'st thou by wit to model their escape!
Sooner shalt thou, a stranger to thy shape, 342
Fall prone their equal: first thy danger know,
Then take the antidote the gods bestow.
The planet I give, through all the direful bower
Shall guard thee, and avert the evil hour.
Now hear her wicked arts.  Before thy eyes 344
The bowl shall sparkle, and the banquet rise;
Take this, por from the faithless feast abtain,
For temper'd drugs and poison shall be vain,
Soon as she strikes her wand, and gives the word,
Draw farth, and brandish thy resplendent sword, 350
And menace death; those menaces shall move
Her alter'd mind to blandishment and love.
Nor shun the blessing proffer'd to thy arms,
Ascend her bed, and taste celestial charms:
So shall thy tedious toils a respite find.  356
And thy lost friends return to human-kind.
But swear her first by those dread oaths that tie
The powers below, the blessed in the sky;
Lest to thee naked secret fraud be meant,
Or magic bind thee cold and impotent.

Thus while he spoke, the sovereign plant he drew
Where on th' all-bearing earth unmark'd it grew,
And show'd its nature and its wondrous power:
Black was the root, but milky white the flower;
Moly the name, to mortals hard to find,
But all is easy to th' ethereal kind.
This Hermes gave, then, gliding off the glade,
Shot to Olympus from the woodland shade;
While, full of thought, revolving fates to come,
I speed my passage to th' enchant'd dome.

Arriv'd, before the lofty gates I stay'd;
The lofty gates the goddess wide display'd:
She leads before, and to the feast invites;
I follow sadly to the magic rites.
Radiant with starry studs, a silver seat
Receiv'd my limbs: a footstool eas'd my feet.
She mix'd the potion, fraudulent of soul;
The poison mani'd in the golden bowl.
I took, and quaff'd it, confident in heaven:
Then wav'd the wand, and then the word was given.

Hence to thy fellows! (dreadful she began)
Go, be a beast!—I heard, and yet was man.

Then sudden whirling, like a waving flame,
My beamy falchion I assault the dame.
Struck with unusual fear, she trembling cries.
She faints, she falls; she lifts her weeping eyes.

What art thou? say! from whence, from whom you came?

O more than human! tell thy race, thy name.
Amazing strength, these poisons to sustain!

Not mortal thou, nor mortal is thy brain.

Or art thou he? the man to come (foretold
By Hermes powerful with the wand of gold),
The man from Troy, who wander'd ocean round;
The man for wisdom's various arts renown'd,
Ulysses? Oh! thy threatening fury cease,
Sheath thy bright sword, and join our hands in peace!
Let mutual joys our mutual trust combine,
And love, and love-born confidence, be thine.
And bow, dread Circe! (fearful I rejoice)
Can love, and love-born confidence be mine?
Beneath thy charms when my companions groan,
Transform'd to beasts, with accents not their own.
O thou of fraudulent heart, shall I be led
To share thy feast-sites, or ascend thy bed;
That, all unarm'd, thy vengeance may have vent,
And magic bind me, cold and impotent?
Celestial as thou art, yet stand denied;
Or swear that oath by which the gods are tied,
Swear, in thy soul no latent frauds remain,
Swear by the vow which never can be vain.

The goddess swore: then seiz'd my hand, and led
To the sweet transports of the genial bed.
Ministrant to their queen, with busy care
Four faithful handmaids the soft rites prepare;
Nymphs sprung from fountains, or from shady woods,
Or the fair offspring of the sacred floods.
One o'er the couches painted carpets threw,
Whose purple lustre glow'd against the view:
White linen lay beneath. Another plac'd
The silver stands, with golden flasks greac'd:
With dulcet beverage this the beaker crown'd,
Fair in the midst, with gilded cups around;
That in the tripod o'er the kindled pile
The water pours; the bubbling waters boil;
An ample vase receives the smoking wave;
And, in the bath prepar'd, my limbs I lave:
Reviving sweets repair the mind's decay,
And take the painful sense of toil away.

A vest and tunic o'er me next she threw,
Fresh from the bath, and dropping balmy dew;
Then led and plac'd me on the sovereign seat,
With carpets spread; a footstool at my feet.
The golden ever, a nymph obsequious brings,
Replenish'd from the cool translucent springs:
With copious water the bright vase supplies
A silver laver of capacious size.
I wash'd. The table in fair order spread,
They heap the glittering canisters with bread;
Viands of various kinds allure the taste;
Of choicest sort and savour, rich repast!
Circe in vain invites the feast to share;
Absent I ponder, and absorb in care:
While scenes of woe rose anxious in my breast,
The queen beheld me, and these words address.
Why sits Ulysses silent and apart,
Some hoard of grief close harbour'd at his heart?
Untouch'd before thee stand the cates divine,
And unregarded laughs the rosy wine.
Can yet a doubt or any dread remain,
When sworn that oath which never can be vain?
I answer'd—Godess! human is my breast,
By justice sway'd, by tender pity prest:
Ill fits it me, whose friends are sunk to beasts,
To quaff thy bowls, or riot in thy feasts.
Me would'st thou please? for them thy cares employ,
And them to me restore, and me to joy.
With that she parted; in her potent hand
She bore the virtue of the magic wand.
Then, hastening to the styes, set wide the door,
Urg'd forth, and drove the bristly herd before;
Unwieldy, out they rush'd with general cry,
Enormous beasts dishonest to the eye.
Now touch'd by counter-charms they change again,
And stand majestic, and recall'd to men.
'Those hairs, of late that bristled every part,
Fall off, miraculous effect of art!
Till all the form in full proportion rise,
More young, more large, more graceful to my eyes.
They saw, they knew me, and with eager pace
Chung to their master in a long embrace:
Sad, pleasing sight! with tears each eye ran o'er,
And sobs of joy re-echo'd through the bower;
Ev'n Circe wept, her adamantine heart
Felt pity enter, and sustain'd her part.
Son of Laërtes! (then the queen began)
Oh much-enduring, much-experienced man!
Haste to thy vessel on the sea-beat shore,
Unload thy treasures and the galley moor;
Then bring thy friends, secure from future harms,
And in our grottoes stow thy spoils and arms.

She said. Obedient to her high command
I quit the place, and hasten to the strand.
My sad companions on the beach I found,
Their wistful eyes in floods of sorrow drown'd.
As from fresh pastures and the dewy field
(When loaded cribs their evening banquet yield)
The lowing herds return; around them throng
With leaps and bounds their late imprison'd young,
Rush to their mothers with unruly joy,
And echoing hills return the tender cry:
So round me press'd, exulting at my sight,
With cries and agonies of wild delight,
The weeping sailors; nor less fierce their joy
Than if return'd to Ithaca from Troy.

Ah master! ever honour'd, ever dear!
(These tender words on every side I hear)
What other joy can equal thy return?
Not that lov'd country for whose sight we mourn,
The soil that nurs'd us, and that gave us breath:
But ah! relate our lost companion's death.

I answer'd cheerful. Haste, your galley moor,
And bring our treasures and our arms ashore:
Those in yon hollow caverns let us lay;
Then rise, and follow where I lead the way.
Your fellows live: believe your eyes, and come
To taste the joys of Circe's sacred dome.

With ready speed the joyful crew obey;
Alone Eurylochus persuades their stay.
Whither (be cry'd) ah whither will ye run?
Seek ye to meet those evils ye should shun?

Will you the terrors of the dome explore,
In swine to grovel, or in lions roar,
Or wolf-like howl away the midnight hour
In dreadful watch around the magic bower?
Remember Cyclops, and his bloody deed;
The leader's rashness made the soldiers bleed.

I heard incens'd, and first resolv'd to speed
My flying faulchion at the rebel's head.
Dear as he was, by ties of kindred bound,
This hand had stretch'd him breathless on the ground,
But all at once my interposing train
For mercy pleaded, nor could plead in vain.
Leave here the man who dares his prince desert,
Leave to repentance and his own sad heart,
To guard the ship. Seek we the sacred shades
Of Circe's palace, where Ulysses leads.
This with one voice declar'd, the rising train
Left the black vessel by the murmuring main.
Shame touch'd Eurylochus's alter'd breast,
He fear'd my threats, and follow'd with the rest.
Meanwhile the goddess, with indulgent cares
And social joys, the late transform'd repairs;
The bath, the feast, their fainting soul renews;
Rich in refulgent robes, and dropping balmy dews:
Brightening with joy their eager eyes behold
Each other's face, and each his story told;
Then gushing tears the narrative confound,
And with their sobs the vaulted roofs resound.
When hush'd their passion, thus the goddess cries:
Ulysses, taught by labours to be wise,
Let this short memory of grief suffice.
To me are known the various woes ye bore,
In storms by sea, in perils on the shore;
Forget whatever was in Fortune's power,
And share the pleasures of this genial hour.
Such be your minds as ere ye left your coast,
Or learn'd to sorrow for a country lost.
Exiles and wanderers now, where'er ye go
Too faithful memory renews your woe;
The cause remov'd, habitual griefs remain,
And the soul saddens by the use of pain.
Her kind entreaty mov'd the general breast;
Tir'd with long toil, we willing sunk to rest.
We ply'd the banquet, and the bowl we crown'd,
Till the full circle of the year came round.
But when the seasons, following in their train,
Brought back the months, the days, and hours again;
As from a lethargy at once they rise,
And urge their chief with animating cries.
Book X.  The Odyssey.

Is this, Ulysses, our inglorious lot?
And is the name of Ithaca forgot?
Shall never the dear land in prospect rise,
Or the lov'd palace glitter in our eyes?
Melting I heard; yet till the sun's decline
Prolong'd the feast, and quaff'd the rosy wine:
But when the shades came on at evening hour,
And all lay slumbering in the dusty bower;
I came a suppliant to fair Circe's bed,
The tender moment seiz'd, and thus I said,
Be mindful, goddess! of thy promise made;
Must sad Ulysses ever be delay'd?
Around their lord my sad companions mourn,
Each breast beats homeward, anxious to return:
If but a moment parted from thy eyes,
Their tears flow round me, and my heart complies.

Go then (she cry'd), ah go! yet think, not I,
Not Circe, but the Fates, your wish deny.
Ah hope not yet to breathe thy native air!
Far other journey first demands thy care;
To tread th' uncomfortable paths beneath,
And view the realms of darkness and of death.
There seek the Theban bard, depriv'd of sight;
Within, irradiate with prophetic light;
To whom Persephone, entire and whole,
Gave to retain th' unseparated soul:
The rest are forms, of empty ether made;
Impassive semblance, and a fitting shade.

Struck at the word, my very heart was dead:
Pensive I sate; my tears bedew'd the bed;
To hate the light and life my soul begun,
And saw that all was grief beneath the sun.
Compos'd at length, the gushing tears suppress,
And my toil limbs now weary'd into rest,
How shall I tread (I cry'd) ah, Circe! say,
The dark descent, and who shall guide the way?
Can living eyes behold the realms below?
What bark to wait me, and what wind to blow?
Thy fated road (the magic power reply'd)
Divine Ulysses! asks no mortal guide.
Rear but the mast, the spacious sail display.
The northern winds shall wing thee on thy way.
Soon shalt thou reach old Ocean's utmost ends,
Where to the main the shelving shore descends;
The barren trees of Proserpine's black woods,
Poplars and willows trembling o'er the floods:
There fix thy vessel in the lonely bay,
And enter these the kingdoms void of day:
Where Phlegethon's loud torrents, rushing down,
Hiss in the flaming gulf of Acheron;
And where, slow-rolling from the Stygian bed,
Cocytus' lamentable waters spread?
Where the dark rock o'erhangs th' infernal lake,
And mingling streams eternal murmurs make.
First draw thy' falchion, and on every side
Trench the black earth a cubit long and wide:
To all the shades around, libations pour,
And o'er th' ingredients strew the hallow'd flour:
New wine and milk, with honey-temper'd, bring;
And living water from the crystal spring,
Then the wan shades and feeble ghosts implore,
With promis'd offerings on thy native shore;
A barren cow the stateliest of the isle,
And, heap'd with various wealth, a blazing pile:
These to the rest; but to the seer must bleed
A sable ram, the pride of all thy breed.
These solemn vows, and holy offerings paid
To all the phantom nations of the dead;
Be next thy care the sable sheep to place
Full o'er the pit, and hellward turn their face:
But from th' infernal rite thine eye withdraw,
And back to Ocean glance with reverend awe.
Sudden shall skim along the dusky glades
Thin airy shoals, and visionary shades.
Thus give command the sacrifice to haste,
Let the flay'd victims in the flame be cast,
And sacred vows and mystic song apply'd
To grisly Pluto and his gloomy bride.
Wide o'er the pool o' the fallen wave, round
Shall drive the spectres from forbidden ground:
The sacred draught shall all the dead seepbear,
Till awful from the shades arise the seer.
Let him, oracular, the end, the way,
The turns of all thy future fate, display,
Thy pilgrimage to come, and remnant of thy day.
So speaking, from the ruddy orient shone
The morn, conspicuous on her golden throne.
The goddess with a radiant tunic drest
My limbs, and o'er me cast a silken vest.
Long flowing robes, of purest white, array
The nymph, that added lustre to the day:
A tier wreath'd her head with many a fold;
Her waste was circled with a zone of gold.
Forth issuing then, from place to place I flew;
Rouse man by man, and animate my crew.
Rise, rise, my mates! 'tis Circe gives command:
Our journey calls us: haste, and quit the land.
All rise and follow, yet depart not all,
For fate decreed one wretched man to fall.
A youth there was, Elpenor was he nam'd,
Not much for sense, nor much for courage fam'd:
The youngest of our band, a vulgar soul,
Born but to banquet, and to drain the bowl.
He, hot and careless, on a turret's height
With sleep repair'd the long debouch of night:
The sudden tumult stirr'd him where he lay,
And down he hasted, but forgot the way;
Full endlong from the roof the sleeper fell,
And snapp'd the spinal joint, and wak'd in hell.
The rest crowd round me with an eager look;
I met them with a sigh, and thus bespoke:
Already, friends! ye think your toils are o'er,
Your hopes already touch your native shore:
Alas! far otherwise the nymph declares,
Far other journey first demands our cares;
To tread th' uncomfortable paths beneath,
The dreary realms of darkness and of death;
To seek Tiresias' awful shade below,
And thence our fortunes and our fates to know.
    My sad companions heard in deep despair;
Frantic they tore their manly growth of hair;
To earth they fell: the tears began to rain;
But tears in mortal miseries are vain.
Sadly they far'd along the sea-beat shore;
Still heav'd their hearts, and still their eyes ran o'er.
The ready victims at our bark we found,
The sable ewe and ram, together bound,
For swift as thought the goddess had been there,
And thence had glided, viewless as the air:
The paths of gods what mortal can survey?
Who eyes their motion? who shall trace their way?
THE ODYSSEY.

BOOK XI.

ARGUMENT.

The Descent into Hell.

Ulysses continues his narration. How he arrived at the land of the Cimmerians, and what ceremonies he performed to invoke the dead. The manner of his descent, and the apparition of the shades: his conversation with Elpenor, and with Tiresias, who informs him in a prophetic manner of his fortunes to come. He meets his mother Anticlea, from whom he learns the state of his family. He sees the shades of the ancient heroines, afterwards of the heroes, and converses in particular with Agamemnon and Achilles. Ajax keeps at a sullen distance, and disdains to answer him. He then beholds Tityus, Tantalus, Sysiphus, Hercules; till he is deterred from further curiosity by the apparition of horrid spectres, and the cries of the wicked in torments.
BOOK XI.

Now to the shores we bend, a mournful train,
Climb the tall bark, and launch into the main:
At once the mast we rear, at once unbind,
The spacious sheet, and stretch it to the wind:
Then pale and pensive stand, with cares opprest,
And solemn horror saddens every breast.
A freshening breeze the magic power supply'd,
While the winged vessel flew along the tide;
Our oars we shipp'd: all day the swelling sails
Full from the guiding pilot catch'd the gales.
Now sunk the sun from his aërial height,
And o'er the shaded billows rush'd the night:
When lo! we reach'd old Ocean's utmost bounds,
Where rocks controul his waves with ever-during mounds.

There in a lonely land, and gloomy cells,
The dusky nation of Cimmeria dwells;
The sun ne'er views th' uncomfortable seats,
When radiant he advances, or retreats:
Unhappy race! whom endless night invades,
Clouds the dull sir, and wraps them round in shades.

The ship we moor on these obscure abodes;
Disbark the sheep, an offering to the gods;
And, hellward bending, o'er the beach descry
The doleful passage to th' infernal sky.
The victims, vow'd to each Tartarean power,
Eurylochus and Perimedes bore.

Here open'd hell, all hell I here implor'd,
And from the scabbard drew the shining sword:
And trenching the black earth on every side,
A cavern form'd, a cubit long and wide.

New wine, with honey-temper'd milk, we bring,
Then living waters from the crystal spring:
O'er these was strew'd the consecrated flour,
And on the surface shone the holy store.

Now the wan shades we hail, th' infernal gods,
To speed our course, and waft us o'er the floods:

* Circe.
So shall a barren knave from the stall
Beneath the knife upon your altars fall;
So in our palace, at our safe return,
Rich with unnumber'd gifts the pile shall burn; 40
So shall a ram, the largest of the breed,
Black as these regions to Tiresias bleed.

Thus solemn rites and holy vows we paid
To all the phantom-nations of the dead,
Then dy'd the sheep: a purple torrent flow'd, 45
And all the caverns smok'd with streaming blood.
When, lo! appear'd along the dusky coast,
Thin, airy shells of visionary ghosts:
Fair, pensive youths, and soft enamour'd maidens;
And wither'd elders, pale and wrinkled shades; 50
Ghastly with wounds the forms of warriers slain
Stalk'd with majestic port, a martial train;
These and a thousand more swarm'd o'er the ground,
And all the dire assembly shriek'd around.

Astonish'd at the sight, aghast I stood,
And a cold fear ran shivering through my blood.
Straight I command the sacrifice to haste,
Straight the flay'd victims to the flames are cast,
And mutter'd vows, and mystic song apply'd,
To grisly Pluto, and his gloomy bride. 60

Now swift I wav'd my faction o'er the blood;
Back started the pale throngs, and trembling stood.
Round the black trench the gore untasted flows;
Till awful from the shades Tiresias rose.

There wandering through the gloom I first survey'd,
Now to the realms of death, Elpenor's shade: 65
His cold remains all naked to the sky
On distant shores unwept, unburied lie.
Sad at the sight I stand, deep fix'd in woe,
And ere I spoke the tears began to flow. 70

O say what angry power Elpenor led
To glide in shades, and wander with the dead?
How could thy soul, by realms and seas disjointed,
Outfly the nimble sail, and leave the lagging wind?
The ghost reply'd: to hell my doom I owe, 75
Demons accrue, dire miseries of war.
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK XI.

My feet, through wine unfaithful to their weight,
Betray'd me tumbling from a towery height;
Staggering I reel'd, and as I reel'd I fell,
Lux'd the neck-joint—my soul descends to hell. 80
But lend me aid, I now conjure thee lend,
By the soft tie and sacred name of friend;
By thy fond consort! by thy father's cares!
By lov'd Telemachus's blooming years!
For well I know that soon the heavenly powers
Will give thee back to day, and Circe's shores:
There pious on my cold remains attend,
There call to mind thy poor departed friend.
The tribute of a tear is all I crave,
And the possession of a peaceful grave.
But if, unheard, in vain compassion plead,
Revere the gods, the gods avenge the dead!
A tomb along the watery margin raise,
The tomb with manly arms and trophies grace,
To show posterity Elpenor was.
There high in air, memorial of my name,
Fix the smooth oar, and bid me live to fame.
To whom with tears: These rites, oh mournful shake,
Due to thy ghost, shall to thy ghost be paid.
Still as I spoke the phantom seem'd to moan, 100
Tear follow'd tear, and groan succeeded groan.
But, as my waving sword the blood surrounds,
The shade withdrew, and mutter'd empty sounds.
There as the wondrous visions I survey'd,
All pale ascends my roya! mother's shade:
A queen, to Troy she saw our legions pass;
Now a thin form is all Anticlea was!
Struck at the sight, I melt with filial woe,
And down my cheek the pious sorrows flow,
Yet as I shook my falchion o'er the blood,
Regardless of her son the parent stood.
When lo! the mighty Theban I behold;
To guide his steps he bore a staff of gold;
Awful he trod! majestic was his look!
And from his holy lips these accents broke:
Why, mortal, wanderest thou from cheerful day;
To tread the downward, melancholy way?
What angry gods to these dark regions led
Thee yet alive, companion of the dead?

But sheath thy poniard, while my tongue relates
Heaven's steadfast purpose, and thy future fates.
While yet he spoke, the prophet I obey'd,
And in the scabbard plung'd the glittering blade:
Hager he quaff'd the gorgon, and then express
Dark things to come, the counsels of his breast:

Weary of light, Ulysses here explores,
A prosperous voyage to his native shores;
But know—by me unerring Fate disclose
New trains of dangers, and new scenes of woe;
I see, I see, thy bark by Neptune toss,
For injur'd Cyclops, and his eye-ball lost!
Yet to thy woes the gods decree an end,
If heaven thou please, and how to please attend!
Where on Trinacrian rocks the ocean roars,
Graze numerous herds along the verdant shores;
Though hunger press, yet fly the dangerous prey,
The herds are sacred to the god of day,
Who all surveys with his extensive eye
Above, below, on earth, and in the sky!

Rob not the god: and so propitious gales
Attend thy voyage, and impel thy sails:
But, if his herds ye seize, beneath the waves
I see thy friends o'erwhelm'd in liquid graves!
The direful wreck Ulysses scarce survives!
Ulysses at his country source arrives:

Strangers thy guides! nor there thy labours end,
New foes arise, domestic ills attend!
There soul adulterers to thy bride resort,
And lordly gluttons riot in thy court.

But vengeance hastes amain! These eyes behold
The deathful scene, princes on princes roll'd!

That done, a people far from sea explore,
Who ne'er knew salt, nor heard the billows roar,
Or saw gay vessel stem the watery plain,
Rejoiced—wander dying on the main!
Bear on thy back an ear: with strange amaze
A shepherd meeting thee, the ear surveys,
And names a van: there fix it on the plain,
To calm the god that holds the watery reign;
A threefold offering to his altar bring,
A bull, a ram, a boar; and hail the ocean king.
But, home return'd, to each ethereal power
Slay the due victim in the genial hour:
So peaceful shalt thou end thy blissful days,
And steal thyself from life by slow decays;
Unknown to pain, in age resign thy breath,
When late stern Neptune points the shaft with death.
To the dark grave retiring as to rest,
Thy people blessing, by thy people blest!
Unerring truths, oh man, my lips relate,
This is thy life to come, and this is fate.
To whom unmov'd: If this the gods prepare;
What heaven ordains, the wise with courage bear.
But say, why yonder on the lonely sands,
Unmindful of her son, Anticlea stands?
Why to the ground she bends her downcast eye?
Why is she silent, while her son is nigh?
The latent cause, oh sacred seer reveal!
Nor this, replies the seer, will I conceal.
Know, to the spectres, that thy beverage taste,
The scenes of life recur, and actions past:
They, seal'd with truth, return the sure reply;
The rest, repell'd, a train oblivious fly.
The phantom-prophet cease'd, and sunk from sight
To the black palace of eternal night.
Still in the dark abodes of death I stood,
When near Anticlea mov'd, and drank the blood.
Straight all the mother in her soul awakes,
And, owning her Ulysses, thus she speaks.
Com'st thou, my son, alive, to realms beneath,
The dolesome realms of darkness and of death?
Com'st thou alive from pure, ethereal day?
Dire is the region, dismal is the way!
Here lakes profound, there floods oppose their waves,
There the wide sea with all his billows raves!
BOOK XI. THE ODYSSEY.

Or (since to dust proud Troy submits her towers)
Com'st thou a wanderer from the Phrygian shores?
Or say, since honour call'd thee to the field,
Hast thou thy Ithaca, thy bride beheld?
Source of my life, I cry'd, from earth I fly
To seek Tiresias in the nether sky,
To learn my doom; for, toss'd from woe to woe,
In every land Ulysses finds a foe:
Nor have these eyes beheld my native shores,
Since in the dust proud Troy submits her towers.

But, when thy soul from her sweet mansion fled,
Say, what distemper gave thee to the dead?
Has life's fair lamp declin'd by slow decays,
Or swift expir'd it in a sudden blaze?
Say, if my sire, good old Laërtes, lives?
If yet Telemachus, my son, survives?
Say, by his rule is my dominion sw'd,
Or crush'd by traitors with an iron rod?
Say, if my spouse maintains her royal trust;
Though tempted, chaste, and obstinately just?
Or if no more her absent lord she wails,
But the false woman o'er the wife prevails?

Thus I, and thus the parent-shade returns;
Thee, ever thee, thy faithful consort mourns:
Whether the night descends, or day prevails,
Thee she by night, and thee by day bewails.
Thee in Telemachus thy realm obeys;
In sacred groves celestial rites he pays,
And shares the banquet in superior state,
Orac'd with such honours as become the great.

Thy sire in solitude foment's his care:
The court is joyless, for thou art not there!
No costly carpets raise his hoary head,
No rich embroidery shines to grace his bed;
Ev'n when keen winter freezes in the skies,
Rank'd with his slaves, on earth the monarch lies:
Deep are his sighs, his visage pale, his dress
The garb of woe and habit of distress.
And when the autumn takes his annual round,
The leafy honours scattering on the ground;
Regardless of his years, abroad he lies,
His bed the leaves, his canopy the skies,
Thus cares on cares his painful days consume,
And bow his age with sorrow to the tomb!

For thee, my son, I wept my life away;
For thee through hell's eternal dungeons stray:
Nor came my fate by lingering pains and slow,
Nor bent the silver-shafted queen her bow;
No dire disease bereav'd me of my breath;
Thou, thou, my son, wert my disease and death;
Unkindly with my love my son conspir'd,
For thee I liv'd, for absent thee expir'd.

Thrice in my arms I strove her shade to bind,
Thrice through my arms she slipt like empty wind,
Or dreams, the vain illusions of the mind.
Wild with despair, I shed a copious tide
Of flowing tears, and thus with sighs reply'd.

Fly'st thou, lov'd shade, while I thus fondly mourn?
Turn to my arms, to my embraces turn!
Is it, ye powers that smile at human harms?
Too great a bliss to weep within her arms?
Or has hell's queen an empty image sent,
That wretched I might ev'n my joys lament?

O son of woe, the pensive shade rejoin'd,
O most inur'd to grief of all mankind!
'Tis not the queen of hell who thee deceives;
All, all are such, when life the body leaves:
No more the substance of the man remains,
Nor bounds the blood along the purple veins:
These the funereal flames in atoms bear,
To wander with the wind in empty air:
While the impassive soul reluctant flies,
Like a vain dream, to these infernal skies.
But from the dark dominions speed thy way,
And climb the steep ascent to upper day;
To thy chaste bride the wondrous story tell,
The woes, the horrors, and the laws of hell.

Thus while she spoke, in swarms hell's empress brings
Daughters and wives of heroes and of kings;
Thick and more thick they gather round the blood,
Ghost throng'd on ghost (a dire assembly) stood!
Dauntless my sword I seize; the airy crew,
Swift as it flash'd along the gloom, withdrew;
Then shade to shade in mutual forms succeeded,
Her race recovers, and their illustrious deeds.

Tyro began, whom great Salmoneus bred;
The royal partner of fam'd Cretheus' bed.
For fair Enipeus, as from fruitful urns
He pours his watery store, the virgin burns;
Smooth flows the gentle stream with wanton pride,
And in soft waves rolls a silver tide.

As on his barks the maid enamour'd roves,
The monarch of the deep beholds and loves!
In her Enipeus' form and borrow'd charms,
The amorous god descends into her arms:
Around, a spacious arch of waves he throws,
And high in air the liquid mountain rose;
Thus in surrounding floods conceal'd he proves
The pleasing transport, and completes his loves.

Then, softly sighing, he the fair adress,
And as he spoke her tender hand he prest,
Hail, happy nymph! no vulgar births are ow'd
To the prodigie raptures of a god:
Lo! when nine times the moon reneweth her horn,
Two brother heroes shall from thee be born;
Thy early care the future worthies claim,
To point them to the arduous paths of fame;
But in thy breast th' important truth conceal,
Nor dare the secret of a god reveal:

For know, thou Neptune view'st! and at my nod
Earth trembles, and the waves confess their god.

He added not, but mounting spurn'd the plain,
Then plung'd into the chamber of the main.

Now in the time's full process forth she brings
Jove's dread viceregent in two future kings;
O'er proud Icarios Pallas stretch'd his reign,
And god-like Neleus rule'd the Pylian plain:
Then, fruitful, to her Cretheus' royal bed
She gallant Phereus and fam'd Ascan bred:
From the same fountain Amytheon rose,
Pleas'd with the din of war, and noble shout of foes;
There mov'd Antiope, with haughty charms;
Who blest th' Almighty Thunderer in her arms:
Hence sprung Amphon, hence brave Zethus came,
Founders of Thebes, and men of mighty name;
Though bold in open field, they yet surround
The town with walls, and mound inject on mound;
Here ramparts stood, there towers rose high in air,
And here thro' seven wide portals rush'd the war:
There with soft step the fair Alcmene trod,
Who bore Alcides to the thundering god:
And Megara, who charm'd the son of Jove,
And soften'd his stern soul to tender love.
Sullen and sour with discontented mien
Jocasta frown'd, th' incestuous Theban queen;
With her own son she join'd in nuptial bands,
Though father's blood imbru'd his murderous bands:
The gods and men the dire offence detest,
The gods with all their furies rend his breast;
In lofty Thebes he wore th' imperial crown,
A pompous wretch! accurst upon a throne.
The wife self-murder'd from a beam depends,
And her foul soul to blackest hell descends;
Thence to her son the choicest plagues she brings,
And the fiends haunt him with a thousand stings.
And now the beauteous Chloris I descry,
A lovely shade, Amphion's youngest joy!
With gifts unnumber'd Nелеus sought her arms,
Nor paid too dearly for unequall'd charms;
Great in Orchomenos, in Pylot great,
He sway'd the sceptre with imperial state.
Three gallant sons the joyful messarch told,
Sage Nestor, Periclimenus the bold,
And Chromius last; but of the softer race,
One nymph alone, a miracle of grace.
Kings on their thrones for lovely Pero burn;
The sire denies, and kings rejected moura.
To him alone the beauteous prize he yields,
Whose arm should ravish from Phylacian fields
BOOK XI. THE ODYSSEY.

The herds of Iphycles, detain'd in wrong; 355
Wild, furious herds, unconquerably strong!
This darges a seer, but naught the seer prevails,
In beauty's cause illustriously he fails;
Twelve moons the foe the captive youth detains
In painful dungeons, and coercive chains; 360
The foe at last, from durance where he lay,
Hjs art revering, gave him back to day;
Won by prophetic knowledge, to fulfil
The stedfast purpose of th' Almighty will.

With graceful poct advancing now I spy'd 365
Leda the fair, the godlike Tyndar's bride:
Hence Pollux sprung, who wields with furious sway
The deathful gauntlet matchless in the fray;
And Castor glorious on th' embattled plain
Curbs the proud steeds, reluctant to the rein: 370
By turns they visit this ethereal sky,
And live alternate, and alternate die:
In hell beneath, on earth, in heaven above,
Reign the twin-gods, the favourite sons of Jove.

There Ephimeda trod the gloomy plain, 375
Who charm'd the monarch of the boundless main;
Hence Ephialtes; hence stern Otus sprung,
More fierce than giants, more than giants strong:
The earth o'erburden'd groan'd beneath their weight,
None but Orion e'er surpass'd their height: 380
The wonderous youths had scarce nine winters told,
When high in air, tremendous to behold,
Nine ells aloft they rear'd their towering head,
And full nine cubits broad their shoulders spread.

Proud of their strength, and more than mortal size,
The gods they challenge, and affect the skies: 385
Heav'd on Olympus tottering Ossa stood;
On Ossa, Pelion nods with all his wood.
Such were these youths! had they to manhood grown,
Almighty Jove had trembled on his throne; 390
But, ere the harvest of the beard began
To bristle on the chin, and promise man,
His shafts Apollo aim'd; at once they sound,
And stanch the giant monsters o'er the ground: 395
There mournful Phaedra with sad Procris moves,
Both benummed shades, both hapless in their loves;
And near them walk’d, with solemn pace and slow,
Sad Ariadne, partner of their woe:
The royal Minos Ariadne bred,
She Theseus lov’d, from Crete with Theseus fled;
Swift to the Dian isle the hero flies,
And tow’rds his Athens bears the lovely prize;
There Bacchus with fierce rage Diana fires,
The goddess shoots her shaft, the nymph expires.

There Clymene and Mera I behold,
There Eriphyle weeps, who loosely sold
Herald, her honour, for the lust of gold.
But should I all recount, the night would fail,
Unequal to the melancholy tale;
And all-composing rest my natures craves,
Here in the court, or yonder on the waves;
In you I trust, and in the heavenly powers;
To land Ulysses on his native shores.

He ceas’d; but left so charming on their ear
His voice, that listening still they seem’d to hear,
Till, rising up, Arethusa broke,
Stretch’d out her snowy hand, and thus she spoke:
What wondrous man Heaven sends us in our guest!
Through all his woes the hero shines most feast;
His comely port, his ample frame express
A manly air, majestic in distress.
He, as my guest, is my peculiar care:
You share the pleasure, then in bounty share;
To worth in misery, a reverence pay,
And with a generous hand reward his stay;
For since kind heav’n with wealth our realm hath blest,
Give it to Heaven, by aiding the distress.

Then sage Echeneus, whose grave reverend brow
The hand of time had silver’d o’er with snow,
Mature in wisdom rose: Your words, he cries,
Demand obedience, for your words are wise.
But let our king direct the glorious way
To generous acts; our part is to obey.

:While life informs these limbs (the king reply’d),
Well to deserve, be all my cares employ’d:
BOOK XI.  THE ODYSSEY.

But here this night the royal guest detain,
Till the sun flames along th' ethereal plain.
Be it my task to send with ample stores
The stranger from our hospitable shore:
Tread you my steps! 'Tis mine to lead the race, 440
The first in glory, as the first in place.

To whom the prince. This night with joy I stay;
O monarch great in virtue as in sway!
If thou the circling year my stay control,
To raise a bounty noble as thy soul;

The circling year I wait, with ampler stores
And fitter pomp to hail my native shores:
Then by my realms due homage would be paid;
For wealthy kings are loyally obey'd!

O king! for such thou art, and sure thy blood 450
Through veins (he cry'd) of royal fathers flow'd;
Unlike those vagrants who on falsehood live,
Skill'd in smooth tales, and artful to deceive;
Thy better soul abhors the liar's part,
Wise is thy voice, and noble is thy heart,

Thy words like music every breast controul,
Steal through the ear, and win upon the soul;
Soft, as some song divine, thy story flows,
Nor better could the Muse record thy woes.

But say, ' Upon the dark and dismal coast,
Saw'st thou the worthies of the Grecian host?
The godlike leaders who, in battle slain,
Fell before Troy, and nobly prest the plain?
And lo! a length of night behind remains,
The evening stars still mount the ethereal plains. 465
Thy tale with raptures I could hear thee tell,
Thy woes on earth, the wondrous scenes in hell,
Till in the vault of heaven the stars decay,
And the sky reddens with the rising day.

O worthy of the power the gods assign'd 470
(Ulysses thus replies), a king in mind!
Since yet the early hour of night allows
Time for discourse, and time for soft repose,
If scenes of misery can entertain,
Woes I unfold, of woes a dismal train. 475
Prepare to hear of murder and of blood;
Of godlike heroes who uninjur’d stood
Amidst a war of spears in foreign lands,
Yet bled at home, and bled by female hands.

Now summon’d Proserpine to hell’s black ball
The heroine shades; they vanish’d at her call.

When lo! advanc’d the forms of heroes slain
By stern Ægysthus, a majestic train,
And high above the rest, Atrides prest the plain.
He quaff’d the gore; and straight his soldier knew,

And from his eyes pour’d down the tender dew:
His arms he stretch’d; his arms the touch deceive,
Nor in the fond embrace, embraces give;
His substance vanish’d, and his strength decay’d,
Now all Atrides is an empty shade.

Mov’d at the sight, I for a space resign’d
To soft affliction all my manly mind;
At last with tears—O what relentless doom,
Imperial phantom, bow’d thee to the tomb?
Say while the sea, and while the tempest raves,
Has Fate oppress’d thee in the roaring waves,
Or nobly seis’d thee in the dire alarms
Of war and slaughter, and the clash of arms?
The ghost returns: O chief of human kind,
For active courage and a patient mind;
Nor while the sea, nor while the tempest raves,
Has Fate oppress’d me on the roaring waves;
Nor nobly seis’d me in the dire alarms
Of war and slaughter, and the clash of arms.
Stabb’d by a murderous hand Atrides dy’d,
A foul adulterer, and a faithless bride;
Ev’n in my mirth, and at the friendly feast,
O’er the full bowl, the traitor stabb’d his guest;
Thus by the gory arm of slaughter falls
The stately ox, and bleeds within the stalls.
But not with me the direful murder ends,
These, these expir’d! their crime, they were my friends:
Thick as the boars, which some luxurious lord
Kills for the feast, to crown the nuptial board.
BOOK XL. THE ODYSSEY. 707

When war has thunder’d with its loudest storms, 513
Death thou hast seen in all her ghastly forms;
In duel met her on the listed ground,
When hand to hand they wound return for wound;
But never have thy eyes astonish’d view’d
So vile a deed, so dire a scene of blood.

By’n in the flow of joy, when now the bowl
Glows in our veins, and opens every soul,
We groan, we mourn; with blood the dome is dy’d,
And o’er the pavement floats the dreadful tide—
Her breast all gore, with lamentable cries,
The bleeding innocent Cassandra dies!

Then though pale death froze cold in every vein,
My sword I strive to wield, but strive in vain;
Nor did my traitress wife these eye-lids close,
Or decently in death my limbs compose.

O woman, woman, when to ill thy mind
Is bent, all hell contains no fouler fiend:
And such was mine! who basely plung’d her sword
Through the fond bosom where she reign’d ador’d!

Ah! I hop’d, the toils of war o’ercome,
To meet soft, quiet and repose at home!

Delusive hope! O wife, thy deeds disgrace
The perjur’d sex, and blacken all the race;
And should posterity one virtuous find,
Name Clytemnestra, they will curse the kind.

O injur’d shade, I cry’d, what mighty woes
To thy imperial race from woman rose!
By woman here thou treadest this mournful strand,
And Greece by woman lies a desert land.

Warn’d by my ills beware, the shade replies,
Nor trust the sex that is so rarely wise;
When earnest to explore thy secret breast,
Unfold some trifle, but conceal the rest.
But in thy consort cease to fear a foe,
For thee she feels sincerity of woe:

When Troy first bled beneath the Grecian arms,
She shone unrivall’d with a blame of charms;
Thy infant son her fragrant bosom prest,
Hung at her knee, or wanton’d at her breast;
But now the years a numerous train have ran:
The blooming boy is ripen'd into man:
Thy eyes shall see him burn with noble fire,
The sires shall bless his son, the son his sire:
But my Orestes never met these eyes,
Without one look the murder'd father dies;
Then from a wretched friend this wisdom learn,
Ev'n to thy queen disguis'd, unknown, return;
For since of womankind so few are just,
Think all are false, nor ev'n the faithful trust.

But say, resides my son in royal port,
In rich Orchomenos, or Sparta's court?
Or say in Pyle? for yet he views the light,
Nor glides a phantom through the realms of night.
Then I: thy suit is vain, nor can I say
If yet he breathes in realms of cheerful day;
Or pale or wan beholds these nether skies:
Truth I revere, for wisdom never lies.

Thus in a tide of tears our sorrows flow,
And add new horror to the realms of woe;
Till side by side along the dreary coast
Advanc'd Achilles' and Patroclus' ghost,
A friendly pair! near these the Pylian * stray'd
And towering Ajax, an illustrious shade!
War was his joy, and pleas'd with loud alarms,
None but Pelides brighter shone in arms.

Through the thick gloom his friend Achilles knew,
And as he speaks the tears descend in dew.

Com'st thou alive to view the Stygian bounds,
Where the wan spectres walk eternal rounds;
Nor fear'st the dark and dismal waste to tread,
Throng'd with pale ghosts, familiar with the dead?

To whom with sighs: I pass these dreadful gates
To seek the Theban, and consult the Fates:
For still, distrest, I revolve from coast to coast,
Lost to my friends, and to my country lost.

But sure the eye of Time beholds no name
So blest as thine in all the rolls of fame;
Alive we hail'd thee with our guardian gods,
And dead thou 'rt ruler a king in these abodes.

* Antilochus.
BOOK XI.  THE ODYSSEY.

Talk not of ruling in this dolorous gloom,
Nor think vain words (he cried) can ease my doom,
Rather I choose laboriously to bear
A weight of woes, and breathe the vital air,
A slave to some poor hind that toils for bread;
Then reign the scepter'd monarch of the dead.

But say, if in my steps my son proceeds;
And emulates his godlike father's deeds?
If at the clash of arms, and shout of foes,
Swells his bold heart, his bosom nobly grows?
Say, if my sire, the reverend Peleus reigns,
Great in his Pthia, and his throne maintains;
Or, weak and old, my youthful arm demands,
To fix the sceptre steadfast in his hands?
O might the lamp of life rekindled burn,
And death release me from the silent urn!

This arm, that thunder'd o'er the Phrygian plain,
And swell'd the ground with mountains of the slain,
Should vindicate my injur'd father's fame,
Crush the proud rebel, and assert his claim.

Illustrious shade (I cried), of Peleus' fates
No circumstance the voice of Fame relates:
But bear with pleas'd attention the renown,
The wars and wisdom of thy gallant son,
With me from Scyros to the field of fame
Radiant in arms, the blooming hero came.

When Greece assembled all her hundred states,
To ripen counsels, and decide debates,
Heavens! how he charm'd us with a flow of sense,
And won the heart with manly eloquence!
He first was seen of all the peers to rise,
The third in wisdom where they all were wise;
But when, to try the fortune of the day,
Host mov'd tow'rd host in terrible array,
Before the van, impatient for the fight,
With martial port he strode, and stern delight;
Heaps strew'd on heaps, beneath his falchion groan'd,
And monuments of dead deform'd the ground.
The time would fail, should I in order tell
What foes were vanquish'd, and what numbers fell:
How, lost through love, Eurypylus was slain,
And round him bled his bold Cetian train.
To Troy no hero came of sober line,
Or if nobler, Memnon, it was thine.

When Ilias in the horse receiv'd her doom,
And unseen armies ambush'd in its womb,
Greece gave her latent warriors to my care,
'Twas mine on Troy to pour th' imprison'd war:
Then when the boldest bosom beat with fear,
When the stern eyes of heroes dropt a tear;
Fierce in his look, his ardent valour glow'd,
Flush'd in his cheek, or call'd in his blood;
Indignant in the dark recess he stands,
Pants for the battle, and the war demands:
His voice breath'd death, and with a martial air
He grasp'd his sword, and shook his glittering spear.
And when the gods our arms with conquest crown'd,
When Troy's proud fort works smok'd upon the ground,
Greece to reward her soldier's gallant toils
Heap'd high his navy with unnumber'd spoils.

Thus great in glory from the din of war,
Safe he return'd, without one hostile scar;
Though spears in iron tempests rain'd around,
Yet innocent they play'd, and guiltless of a wound.

While yet I spoke, the shade with transport glow'd,
Rose in his majesty, and nobler trod;
With haughty stalk he sought the distant glades
Of warrior kings, and join'd th' illustrious shades.

Now without number ghost by ghost arose
All wailing with unutterable woes.

Alone, apart, in discontented mood,
A gloomy shade, the sullen Ajax stood;
For ever sad with proud disdain he pin'd,
And the lost arms for ever stung his mind.
Though to the contest Thetis gave the laws,
And Pallas, by the Trojans, judg'd the cause.

O why was I victorious in the strife!
O dear-bought honour with so brave a life!
With him the strength of war, the soldiers' pride,
Our second hope to great Achilles died!
Touch'd at the sight from tears I scarce refrain, 675
And tender sorrow thrills in every vein;
Pensive and sad I stand, at length accost
With accents mild the inexorable ghost.
Still burns thy rage? and can brave soles resent
Ev'n after death? Relent, great shade, relent! 680
Perish those arms which by the gods' decree
Accurs'd our army with the loss of thee!
With thee we fell; Greece wept thy hapless fate,
And shook astonish'd through her hundred states;
Not more, when great Achilles prest the ground, 685
And breath'd his manly spirit through the wound.
O deem thy fall not o'er to man's decree,
Jove hated Greece, and punish'd Greece in thee!
Turn then, oh peaceful, turn, thy wrath control,
And calm the raging tempest of thy soul. 690
While yet I speak, the shade disdain'd to stay,
In silence turns, and sullen stalks away.
Touch'd at his sour retreat, through deepest night,
Through hell's black bounds I had pursued his flight,
And forc'd the stubborn spectre to reply; 695
But wondrous visions drew my curious eye.
High on a throne, tremendous to behold,
Stern Minos waves a mace of burnish'd gold;
Around ten thousand thousand spectres stand
Through the wide dome of Dis, a trembling band.
Still as they plead, the fatal lots he rolls, 700
Absolves the just, and dooms the guilty souls.
There huge Orion, of portentous size,
Swift through the gloom a giant-hunter flies;
A ponderous mace of brass with direful sway 705
Aloft he whirls, to crush the savage prey;
Stern beasts in trains that by his truncheon fell,
Now grisly forms shoot o'er the lawns of hell.
There Tityus large and long, in fetters bound,
O'erspreads Nine acres of infernal ground; 710
Two ravenous vultures, furious for their food,
Scream o'er the fiend, and riot in his blood,
Incessant gore the liver in his breast,
Th' immortal liver grows, and gives th' immortal feast.
Far as o'er Panope's enamell'd plains,
Latona journey'd to the Pythian fane,
With haughty love th' audacious monster strove
To force the goddess, and to rival Jove.

There Tantalus along the Stygian bounds
Pours out deep groans (with groans all hell resounds);
Ev'n in the circling floods refreshment craves,
And pines with thirst amidst a sea of waves;
When to the water he his lip applies,
Back from his lip the treacherous water flies.
Above, beneath, around, his hapless head,
Trees of all kinds delicious fruitage spread;
There figs sky-dy'd, a purple hue disclose,
Green looks the olive, the pomegranate glows,
There dangling pears exalted scents unfold,
And yellow apples ripest into gold:
The fruit he strives to seize; but blasts arise,
Toss it on high, and whirl it to the skies,
I turn'd my eye, and as I turn'd survey'd
A mournful vision! the Sisyphian shade;
With many a weary step, and many a groan,
Up the high hill he heaves a huge round stone;
The huge round stone, resulting with a bound,
Thunders impetuous down, and smokes along the ground.
Again the restless orb his toil renew's,
Dust mounts in clouds, and sweat descends in dews.
Now I the strength of Hercules behold,
A towering spectre of gigantic mould,
A shadowy form! for high in heaven's abodes
Himself resides, a god among the gods;
There, in the bright assemblies of the skyes,
He nectar quaffs, and Hébé crowns his joys.
Here hovering ghosts, like fowl, his shade surround,
And clang their pinions with terrific sound;
Gloomy as night he stands, in act to throw
Th' aërial arrow from the twanging bow.
Around his breast a wondrous zone is roll'd,
Where woodland monsters grin in fretted gold;
There sullen lions sternly seem to roar,
The bear to growl, to foam the tusky boar,
BOOK XI.  THE ODYSSEY.

There war and havock and destruction stood,
And vengeful murder rod with human blood.
Thus terribly adorn'd the figures shine,
Inimitably wrought with skill divine.
The mighty ghost advance'd with awful look,
And, turning his grim visage, sternly spoke.

O exercis'd in grief! by arts refin'd!
O taught to bear the wrongs of base mankind!
Such, such was I! still lost from care to care,
While in your world I drew the vital air!
Ev'n I, who from the Lord of Thunders rose,
Bore toils and dangers, and a weight of woes;
To a base monarch still a slave confin'd
(The hardest bondage to a generous mind!)
Down to these worlds I trod the dismal way,
And dragg'd the three-mouth'd dog to upper day;
Ev'n hell I conquer'd, through the friendly aid
Of Maia's offspring and the martial maid.

Thus he, nor desir'd for our reply to stay,
But, turning, stalk'd with giant-strides away.
Curious to view the kings of ancient days,
The mighty dead that live in endless praise.
Resolv'd I stand; and haply had survey'd
The godlike Theseus, and Pirithous' shade;
But swarms of spectres rose from deepest hell,
With bloodless visage, and with hideous yell;
They scream, they shriek; sad groans and dismal sounds
Stun my scar'd ears, and pierce hell's utmost bounds.
No more my heart the dismal din sustains,
And my cold blood hangs shivering in my veins;
Lest Gorgon, rising from th' infernal lakes,
With horrors arm'd, and curls of hissing snakes,
Should fix me, stiffen'd at the monstrous sight,
A stony image, in eternal night!
Straight from the direful coast to purer air
I speed my flight, and to my mates repair.

My mates ascend the ship; they strike their oars;
The mountains lessen, and retreat the shores;
Swift o'er the waves we fly; the freshening gales
Sing through the shrouds, and stretch the swelling sails.
The Odyssey.

Book XII.

Argument.

The Sirens, Scylla, and Charybdis.

He relates how, after his return from the shades, he was sent by Circe on his voyage, by the coast of the Sirens, and by the Strait of Scylla, and Charybdis: the manner in which he escaped those dangers: how, being cast on the island Trinacria, his companions destroyed the oxen of the Sun: the vengeance that followed; how all perished by shipwreck except himself, who, swimming on the mast of the ship, arrived on the island of Calypso. With which his relation concludes.
BOOK XII.

Thus o'er the rolling surge the vessel flies,
Till from the waves the Eban hills arise.
Here the gay morn resides in radiant bowers,
Here keeps her revels with the dancing Hours;
Here Phæbus rising in th' ethereal way,
Through heaven's bright portals pours the beauteous day.
At once we fix our halsers on the land,
At once descend, and press the desert sand;
There, worn and wasted, loose our cares in sleep
To the hoarse murmurs of the rolling deep.

Soon as the morn restor'd the day, we pay'd
Sepulchral honours to Elpenor's shade,
Now by the ax the rushing forest bends,
And the huge pile along the shore ascends.
Around we stand, a melancholy train,
And a loud groan re-echoes from the main.
Fierce o'er the pyre, by fanning breezes spread,
The hungry flame devours the silent dead.
A rising tomb, the silent dead to grace,
Fast by the roarings of the main we place;
The rising tomb a lofty column bore,
And high above it rose the tapering oar.

Meantime the goddess our return survey'd
From the pale ghosts, and hell's tremendous shade.
Swift she descends; a train of nymphs divine
Bear the rich viands and the generous wine:
In act to speak the power of magic stands,
And graceful thus accents the listening bands.

O sons of woe! decreed by adverse fates
Alive to pass through hell's eternal gates!
All, soon or late, are doom'd that path to tread;
More wretched you! twice number'd with the dead!
This day adjourn your cares, exalt your souls,
Indulge the taste, and drain the sparkling bowls;
And when the morn unveils her saffron ray,
Spread your broad sails, and plough the liquid ways:
Lo I this night, your faithful guide, explain
Your woes by land, your dangers on the main.

The goddess spoke; in feasts we waste the day,
Till Phoebus downward plung'd his burning ray; 40
Then sable night ascends, and balmy rest
Seals every eye, and calms the troubled breast.
Then curious she commands me to relate
The dreadful scenes of Pluto's dreary state.
She sat in silence while the tale I tell,

The wondrous visions, and the laws of hell.
Then thus: the lot of man the gods dispose;
These ills are past: now hear thy future woes.
O prince, attend! some favouring power be kind,
And print th' important story on thy mind!

Next, where the Sirens dwell, you plough the seas;
Their song is death, and makes destruction please.
Unblest the man, whom music wins to stay
Nigh the curst shore, and listen to the lay.
No more that wretch shall view the joys of life,
His blooming offspring, or his beauteous wife!
In verdant meads they sport; and wide around
Lie human bones, that whiten all the ground;
The ground polluted floats with human gore,
And human carnage taints the dreadful shore.

Fly swift the dangerous coast; let every ear
Be stopp'd against the song! 'tis death to hear!
Firm to the mast with chains thyself be bound,
Nor trust thy virtue to th' enchanting sound.
If, mad with transport, freedom thou demand,
Be every fetter strain'd, and added band to band.

These seas o'erpass'd, be wise! but I refrain
To mark distinct thy voyage o'er the main:
New horrors rise! let prudence be thy guide,
And guard thy various passage through the tide.

High o'er the main two rocks exalt their brow,
The boiling billows thundering roll below;
Through the vast waves the dreadful wonders move,
Hence nam'd Erratic by the gods above.
No bird of air, no dove of swiftest wing,
That bears ambrosia to th' ethereal king.
Shun the dire-rocks: in vain she cuts the skies.
The dire rocks meet, and crush her as she flies;
Not the fleet bark, when prosperous breezes play,
Ploughs o'er that roaring surge its desperate way;
O'erwhelm'd it sinks: while round a smoke expires,
And the waves flashing seem to burn with fires.
Scarce the fam'd Argo pass'd these raging floods,
The sacred Argo, fill'd with demigods!
Ev'n she had sunk, but Jove's imperial bride
Wing'd her fleet sail, and push'd her o'er the tide.

High in the air the rock its summit shrouds
In brooding tempests, and in rolling clouds;
Loud storms around, and mists eternal rise,
Beat its bleak brow, and intercept the skies.

When all the broad expansion bright with day
Glows with th' autumnal or the summer ray,
The summer and the autumn glow in vain,
The sky for ever lowers, for ever clouds remain.

Impervious to the step of man it stands,
Tho' borne by twenty feet, tho' arm'd with twenty hands;

Smooth as the polish of the mirror rise
The slippery sides, and shoot into the skies:
Full in the centre of this rock display'd,
A yawning cavern casts a dreadful shade:

Nor the fleet arrow from the twanging bow,
Sent with full force, could reach the depth below.
Wide to the west the horrid gulf extends,
And the dire passage down to hell descends.

O fly the dreadful sight! expand thy sails,
Ply the strong oar, and catch the nimble gales;
Here Scylla bellows from her dire abodes,
Tremendous pest, abhor'd by man and gods!
Hideous her voice, and with less terrors roar
The whelps of lions in the midnight hour.

Twelve feet deform'd and foul the head diapread;
Six horrid necks she rears, and six terrific heads;
Her jaws grin dreadful with three rows of teeth;
Jaggy they stand, the gaping den of death;
Her parts obscene the raging billows hide;

Her bosom terribly o'erlooks the tide,
When stung with hunger she embroils the flood,
The sea-dog and the dolphin are her food;
She makes the huge leviathan her prey,
And all the monsters of the watery way;
The swiftest racer of the azure plain
Here fills her sails, and spreads her oars in vain;
Fell Scylla rises, in her fury roars,
At once six mouths expands, at once six men devours.

Close by a rock of less enormous height
Breaks the wild waves, and forms a dangerous strait;
Full on its crown a fig’s green branches rise,
And shoot a leafy forest to the skyes;
Beneath, Charybdis holds her boisterous reign
’Midst roaring whirlpools, and absorbs the main;
Thrice in her guls the boiling seas subalde,
Thrice in dire thunders she refunds the tide.
Oh, if thy vessel plough the direful waves
When seas retreating roar within her caves,
Ye perish all! though he who rules the main
Lend his strong aid, his aid he lends in vain.
Ah, shun the horrid gulf! by Scylla fly,
Tis better six to lose, than all to die.

Then she: Oh worn by toils, oh broke in fight,
Still are new toils and war thy dire delight?
Will martial flames for ever fire thy mind,
And never, never be to heaven resign’d?
How vain thy efforts to avenge the wrong?
Deathless the pest! impenetrably strong!
Furious and fell, tremendous to behold!
Ev’n with a look she withers all the bold!
She mocks the weak attempts of human might:
Oh fly her rage! thy conquest is thy flight.
If but to seize thy arms thou make delay,
Again the fury vindicates her prey,
Her six mouths yawn, and six are snatch’d away.
BOOK XII.  THE ODYSSEY.

From her foul womb Cratanis gave to air
This dreadful pest! To her direct thy prayer,
To curb the monster in her dire abodes,
And guard thee through the tumult of the floods.
Thence to Trinacria's shore you bend your way, 160
Where graze thy herds, illustrious source of day!
Seven herds, seven flocks enrich the sacred plains,
Each herd, each flock, full fifty heads contains;
The wondrous kind a length of age survey,
By breed increase not, nor by death decay. 165
Two sister goddesses possess the plain,
The constant guardians of the woolly train:
Lampetia fair, and Phaethusa young.
From Phaesus and the bright Neaira sprung:
Here, watchful o'er the flocks, in shady bowers
And flowery meads they waste the joyous hours.
Rob not the god! and so propitious gales
Attend thy voyage, and impel thy sails;
But if thy impious hands the flocks destroy,
The gods, the gods avenge it, and ye die! 175
'Tis thine alone (thy friends and navy lost)
Through tedious toils to view thy native coast.
She eas'd: and now arose the morning ray;
Swift to her dome the goddess held her way.
Then to my mates I measur'd back the plain, 180
Climb'd the tall bark and rush'd into the main;
Then bending to the stroke, their oars they drew
To their broad breasts, and swift the galley flew.
Up sprung a brisker breeze; with freshening gales
The friendly goddess stretch'd the swelling sails;
We drop our oars; at ease the pilot guides; 185
The vessel light along the level glides.
When, rising sad and slow, with pensive look,
Thus to the melancholy train I spoke:
Oh friends, oh ever partners of my woes,
Attend while I what Heaven foredooms disclose,
Hear all! Fate hangs o'er all; on you it lies
To live, or perish! to be safe, be wise!
In flowery meads the sportive Sirens play,
Touch the soft lyre, and tune the vocal lay; 190

THE ODYSSEY. BOOK XIII.

Me, me alone, with fetters firmly bound,
The gods allow to hear the dangerous sound.
Hear and obey: if freedom I demand,
Be every fetter strain'd, be added band to band.
While yet I speak the winged galley flies,
And lo! the Siren shores like mists arise.
Sink were at once the winds; the air above,
And waves below, at once forgot to move:
Some damned calms the air, and smooth'd the deep,
Hush'd the loud winds, and charm'd the waves to sleep.

Now every sail we furl, each oar we ply;
Lash'd by the stroke, the frothy waters fly.
The ductile wax with busy hands I mould,
And cleft in fragments, and the fragments roll'd;
Th' aerial region now grew warm with day,
The wax dissolv'd beneath the burning ray;
Then every ear I bair'd against the strain,
And from access of phrensy lock'd the brain.
Now round the mast my mates the fetters roll'd,
And bound me limb by limb with fold on fold.
Then bending to the stroke, the active train
Plunge all at once their oars and cleave the main.

While to the shore the rapid vessel flies,
Our swift approach the Siren quire descries;
Celestial music warbles from their tongue,
And thus the sweet deluders tune the song.

Oh stay, oh pride of Greece! Ulysses, stay!
Oh cease thy course, and listen to our lay!
Blest is the man ordain'd our voice to hear,
The song instructs the soul, and charms the ear.
Approach! thy soul shall into raptures rise!
Approach! and learn new wisdom from the wise!
We know whate'er the kings of mighty name
Achiev'd at Ilium in the field of fame;
Whate'er beneath the Sun's bright journey lies.
Oh stay, and learn new wisdom from the wise!
Thus the sweet charmers warbled o'er the main;
My soul takes wing to meet the heavenly strain;
I give the sign, and struggle to be free:
Swift row my mates, and shoot along the sea;
New chains they add, and rapid urge the way,
Till, dying off, the distant sounds decay:
Then, scudding swiftly from the dangerous ground,
The deafen'd ear unlock'd, the chains unbound.

Now all at once tremendous scenes unfold;
Thunder'd the deeps, the smoking billows roll'd!
Tumultuous waves embroil the bellowing flood,
All trembling, deafen'd, and aghast we stood!
No more the vessel plough'd the dreadful wave,
Fear seiz'd the mighty, and unnerv'd the brave;
Each dropt his oar: but swift from man to man
With looks serene I turn'd, and thus began:
Oh friends! oh often try'd in adverse storms!
With ills familiar in more dreadful forms!
Deep in the dire Cyclopean den you lay,
Yet safe return'd—Ulysses led the way.
Learn courage hence, and in my care confide;
Lo! still the same Ulysses is your guide.
Attend my words! your oars incessant ply;
Strain every nerve, and bid the vessel fly.
If from you justling rocks and wavy war
Jove safety grants, he grants it to your care.
And thou whose guiding hand directs our way,
Pilot, attentive listen and obey!
Bear wide thy course, nor plough those angry waves
Where rolls your smoke, your tumbling ocean raves;
Steer by the higher rock; lest whirl'd around
We sink, beneath the circling eddy drown'd.

While yet I speak, at once their oars they seize,
Stretch to the stroke, and brush the working seas.
Caution the name of Scylla I suppress;
That dreadful sound had chill'd the boldest breast.

Meantime, forgetful of the voice divine,
All dreadful bright my limbs in armour shine;
High on the deck I take my dangerous stand,
Two glittering javelins lighten in my hand;
Prepar'd to whirl the whizzing spear I stay,
Till the fell fiend arise to seize her prey.
Around the dungeon, staidious to behold
The hideous pest, my labouring eyes I roll'd;
In vain! the dismal dungeon dark as night.
Veils the dire monster, and confounds the sight.

Now through the rocks, appall'd with deep dismay,
We bend our course, and stem the desperate way;
Dire Scylla there a scene of horror forms,
And here Charybdis fills the deep with storms.
When the tide rushes from her rumbling caves
The rough rock roars; tumultuous boil the waves;
They toss, they foam, a wild confusion raise;
Like waters bubbling o'er the fiery blaze;
Eternal mists obscure th' aerial plain,
And high above the rock she spouts the main!
When in her guls the rushing sea subsides,
She drains the ocean with the confluent tides;
The rock rebellows with a thundering sound:
Deep, wondrous deep below, appears the ground.

Struck with despair, with trembling hearts we view'd
The yawning dungeon, and the tumbling flood;
When lo! fierce Scylla stoop'd to seize her prey,
Stretch'd her dire jaws, and swept six men away;
Chiefs of renown! loud-echoing shrieks arise:
I turn and view them quivering in the skies;
They call, and aid with out-stretch'd arms implore;
In vain they call, those arms are stretch'd no more.

As from some rock that overhangs the flood,
The silent fisher casts th' insidious food,
With fraudulent care he waits the sinner prize,
And sudden lifts it quivering to the skies;
So the foul monster lifts her prey on high,
So pant the wretches struggling in the sky;

In the wide dungeon she devours her food,
And the flesh trembles while she churns the blood.
Worn as I am with griefs, with care decay'd,
Never, I never, scene so dire survey'd;
My shivering blood, congeal'd, forgot to flow;
Aghast I stood, a monument of woe.

Now from the rocks the rapid vessel flies,
And the hoarse din like distant thunder dies;
BOOK XII.  THE ODYSSEY.

To Sol's bright isle our voyage we pursue; 315
And now the glittering mountains rise to view,
There sacred to the radiant god of day,
Grave the fair herds, the flocks promiscuous stray;
Then suddenly was heard along the main
To low the ox, to bleat the woolly train.
Straight to my anxious thoughts the sound convey'd:
The words of Circe and the Theban shade; 321
Warn'd by their awful voice these shores to shun,
With cautious fear oppress, I thus begun.

O friends! of ever exercis'd in care!

 Hear Heaven's commands and reverence what ye hear!

To fly these shores the precent Theban shade 325
And Circe warns: O be their voice obey'd:
Some mighty woe relentless heaven forebodes:
Fly the dire regions, and revere the gods!

While yet I spoke, a sudden sorrow ran 330
Through every breast, and spread from man to man,
Till wrathful Thus Eurylochus began:

O cruel thou! some fury sure has steel'd
That stubborn soul, by tell untaught to yield!
From sleep debarr'd, we sink from woes to woes;
And cruel envious thou a short repose? 335
Still must we restless rove, new seas explore,
The sun descending, and so near the shore?
And lo! the night begins her gloomy reign,
And doubles all the terrors of the main.

Oft in the dead of night loud winds arise,
Lash the wild surge, and bluster in the skies;
Oh should the fierce south-west his rage display,
And toss with rising storms the watery way.
Though gods descend from heaven's aerial plain 345
To lend us aid, the gods descend in vain;
Then while the night displays her awful shade,
Sweet time of slumber! be the night obey'd!
Haste ye to land! and when the morning ray
Sheds her bright beam, pursue the destin'd way.
A sudden joy in every bosom rose: 351
So wild'd some demon, minister of woes!
To whom with grief—O swift to be undone,
Constrain'd I act what wisdom bids me shun.
But yonder herds and yonder flocks forbear;
Attest the heavens and call the gods to hear:
Content an innocent repast display,
By Circe given, and fly the dangerous prey.
Thus I: and while to shore the vessel flies,
With hands uplifted they attest the skies;
Then, where a fountain's gurgling waters play,
They rush to land, and end in feasts the day:
They feed; they quaff; and now (their hunger fed)
Sigh for their friends devoured, and mourn the dead.
Nor cease the tears till each in slumber shares
A sweet forgetfulness of human cares.

Now far the night advance'd her gloomy reign,
And setting stars roll'd down the azure plain:
When, at the voice of Jove, wild whirlwinds rise,
And clouds and double darkness veil the skies;
The moon, the stars, the bright ethereal host
Seem as extinct, and all their splendors lost;
The furious tempest roars with dreadful sound:
Air thunders, rolls the ocean, groans the ground.
All night it rag'd: when morning rose, to land
We haul'd our bark, and moor'd it on the strand,
Where in a beauteous grotto's cool recess
Dance the green Nereids of the neighbouring seas.

There while the wild winds whistled o'er the main,
Thus careful I address the listening train.

O friends, be wise, nor dare the flocks destroy
Of these fair pastures: if ye touch, ye die.
Warn'd by the high command of Heaven, be aw'd;
Holy the flocks, and dreadful is the god!
That god who spreads the radiant beams of light,
And view widespread earth and heaven's unmeasur'd height.

And now the moon had run her monthly round,
The south-east blustering with a dreadful sound:
Unhurt the beaves, untouch'd the woolly train
Low through the grove, or range the flowery plain.
Then fail'd our food; then fish we make our prey,
Or fowl that screaming haunt the watery way.
BOOK XII. THE ODYSSEY.

Till now, from sea or flood no succour found,
Famine and meagre want besieg’d us round.
Pensive and pale from grove to grove I stray’d, 395
From the loud storms to find a sylvan shade;
There, o’er my hands the living waeve I pour;
And heaven and heaven’s immortal thrones adore,
To calm the roarings of the stormy main,
And grant me peacefull to my realms again. 400
Then o’er my eyes the gods soft slumbers shed,
While thus Eurylochus arising said.

O friends, a thousand ways frail mortals lead
To the cold tomb, and dreadful all to tread;
But dreadful most, when by a slow decay 405
Pale hunger wastes the manly strength away.
Why cease ye then t’ implore the powers above,
And offer hecatombs to thundering Jove?
Why seize ye not yon beesves, and fleecy prey?
Arise unanimous; arise and slay!
And if the gods ordain a safe return,
To Phæbus shrines shall rise, and altars burn.
But, should the powers that o’er mankind preside 410
Decree to plunge us in the whelming tide;
Better to rush at once to shades below,
Than linger life away, and nourish woe!
Thus he: the beesves around securely stray,
When swift to ruin they invade the prey;
They seize, they kill!—but for the rite divine,
The barley fail’d, and for libations wine. 420
Swift from the oak they strip the shady pride;
And verdant leaves the flowery cake supply’d.

With prayer they now address th’ etherial train,
Slay the selected beesves, and slay the slain:
The thighs, with fat involv’d, divide with art, 425
Strew’d o’er with morsels cut from every part.
Water, instead of wine, is brought in urns,
And pour’d profusely as the victim burns.
The thighs thus offer’d, and the entrails drest,
They roast the fragments, and prepare the feast. 430
’Twas then soft slumber fled my troubled brain;
Back to the bark I speed along the main.
THE ODYSSEY.  BOOK XXX.

When, lo! an odour from the feast exhales,
Spreads o'er the coast, and scents the tattered gales;
A chilly fear congeal'd my vital blood,
And thus obtruding Heaven I mourn'd aloud.
O sire of men and gods, immortal Jove!
O all ye blissful powers that reign above!
Why were my cares beguil'd in short repose?
O fatal slumber paid with lasting woe!
A deed so dreadful all the gods alarm,
Vengeance is on the wing, and heaven in arms!

Meantime Lampetes mounts th' aerial way,
And kindles into rage the god of day:
Vengeance, ye powers (he cries), and then whose hand
Slain are these herds which I with pride survey,
When through the ports of heaven I pour the day,
Or deep in ocean plunge the burning ray.
Vengeance, ye gods! or I the skies forego,
And bear the lamp of heaven to shades below.

To whom the thundering power; O source of day!
Whose radiant lamp adorns the azure way.
Still may thy beams thro' heaven's bright portals rise,
The joy of earth, and glory of the skies;
Lo! my red arm I bare, my thunders guide,
To dash th' offenders in the whelming tide.
To fair Calypso, from the bright abodes,
Hermes convey'd these counsels of the gods.

Meantime from man to man my tongue exclaims,
My wrath is kindled, and my soul in flames.
In vain! I view perform'd the direful deed,
Beesves, slain by heaps, along the ocean bleed.

Now heaven gave signs of wrath; along the ground
Crept the raw hides, and with a bellowing sound
Rooz'd the dead limbs; the burning entrails groan'd.
Six guilty days my wretched mates employ
In impious feasting, and unhallow'd joy;
The seventh arose, and now the sire of gods
Rein'd the rough storms, and calm'd the tossing floods.
With speed the bark we climb; the spacious sails
Loose'd from the yards invite th' impelling gales.
Past sight of shore, along the surge we bound,
And all above is sky, and ocean all around;
When lo! a busy cloud the Thunderer forms 475
Full o'er our heads, and blackens heaven with storms.
Night dwells o'er all the deep: and now outfries
The gloomy West, and whistles in the skyes.
The mountain-billows roar! the furious blast 479
Howls o'er the throud, and scours it from the mast.
The mast gives way, and, crackling as it bends,
Tears up the deck; then all at once descends;
The pilot by the tumbling ruin slain,
Dash'd from the helm, falls headlong in the main.
Then Jove in anger bids his thunders roll, 483
And fork'd lightnings dash from pole to pole.
Fierce at our heads his deadly bolt he aims,
Red with uncommon wrath, and wrapt in flames:
Full on the bark it fell; now high, now low,
Toss'd and re-toss'd, it reeled beneath the blow; 490
At once into the main the crew it shook;
Sulphureous odours rose, and smouldering smoke.
Like fowl that haunt the floods, they sink, they rise,
Now lost, now seen, with shrieks and dreadful cries;
And strive to gain the bark; but Jove denies.
Firm at the helm I stand, when fierce the main 495
Rush'd with dire noise, and dash'd the sides in twain;
Again impetuous drove the furious blast,
Swept the strong helm; and bore to sea the mast.
Firm to the mast with cords the helm I bind, 500
And aloft ride, to Providence resign'd,
Through tumbling billows and a war of wind.
Now sunk the West, and now a southern breeze
More dreadful than the tempest, lash'd the seas;
For on the rocks it bore where Scylla raves, 505
And dire Charybdis rolls her thundering waves.
All night I drove, and at the dawn of day,
Fast by the rocks beheld the desperate way:
Just when the sea within her gulf subsides,
And in the roaring whirlpools rush the tides.
Swift from the seat I vaulted with a bound,
The lofty fig-tree seiz'd, and clung around:
So to the beam the tenacious clings,
And pendant round it clasps his leathern wings.
High in the air the tree its boughs display'd,
And o'er the dungeon cast a dreadful shade,
All unsustain'd between the wave and sky,
Beneath my feet the whirling billows fly,
What time the judge forsakes the noisy bar
To take repast, and stills the wordy war!
Charybdis rumbling from her inmost caves,
The mast refunded on her refluent waves.
Swift from the tree, the floating mast to gain,
Sudden I dropt amidst the flashing main;
Once more undaunted on the ruin rode,
And oar'd with labouring arms along the flood,
Unseen I pass'd by Scylla's dire abodes:
So Jove decreed (dread sire of men and gods).
Then nine long days I plough'd the calmer seas,
Heav'd by the surge, and waft'd by the breeze.
Weary and wet th' Ogygian shores I gain,
When the tenth sun descended to the main.
There, in Calypso's ever-fragrant bowers,
Refresh'd I lay, and joy beguil'd the hours.
My following fates to thee, O king, are known,
And the bright partner of thy royal throne.
Enough: in misery can words avail?
And what so tedious as a twice-told tale?
THE

ODYSSEY.

BOOK XIII.

ARGUMENT.

The Arrival of Ulysses in Ithaca.

Ulysses takes his leave of Alcinous and Arete, and embarks in the evening. Next morning the ship arrives at Ithaca; where the sailors, as Ulysses is yet sleeping, lay him on the shore with all his treasures. On their return, Neptune changes their ship into a rock. In the meantime Ulysses awaking, knows not his native Ithaca, by reason of a mist which Pallas had cast round him. He breaks into loud lamentations; till the goddess appearing to him in the form of a shepherd, discovers the country to him, and points out the particular places. He then tells a feigned story of his adventures, upon which she manifests herself, and they consult together of the measures to be taken to destroy the suitors. To conceal his return, and disguise his person the more effectively, she changes him into the figure of an old beggar.
BOOK XIII.

He ceas'd; but left so pleasing on their ear
His voice, that listening still they seem'd to hear,
A pause of silence hush'd the shady rooms:
The grateful conference then the king resumes.
Whatever toils the great Ulysses past,
Beneath this happy roof they end at last;
No longer now from shore to shore to roam,
Smooth seas and gentle winds invite him home.
But hear me, princes! whom these walls enclose,
For whom my chanter sings, and goblet flows
With wines unmixt, (an honour due to age,
To cheer the grave, and warm the poet's rage);
Though labour'd gold and many a dazzling vest
Lie heap'd already for our godlike guest;
Without new treasures let him not remove,
Large, and expressive of the public love:
Each peer a tripod, each a vase bestow,
A general tribute, which the state shall owe.
This sentence pleas'd: then all their steps addressed
To separate mansions, and retir'd to rest.

Now did the rosy-finger'd morn arise,
And shed her sacred light along the skies.
Down to the haven and the ships in haste
They bore the treasures, and in safety plac'd,
The king himself the vases rang'd with care:
Then bade his followers to the feast repair.
A victic ox beneath the sacred band
Of great Alcinoüs falls, and stains the sand,
To Jove th' Eternal (power above all powers!
Who wings the winds, and darkens heaven with showers)
The flames ascend: till evening they prolong
The rites, more sacred made by heavenly song:
For in the midst, with public honours grace'd,
Thy lyre divine, Demodocus! was plac'd.
All, but Ulysses, heard with fixt delight:
He sate, and ey'd the sun, and wish'd the night:
BOOK XIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Slow seem'd the sun to move, the hours to roll,
His native home deep-imag'd in his soul.
As the tir'd ploughman spent with stubborn toil,
Whose oxen long have torn the furrow'd soil,
Sees with delight the sun's declining ray,
When home with feeble knees he bends his way
To late repast (the day's hard labour done):
So to Ulysses welcome set the sun;
Then instant to Alcinous and the rest
(The Scherian states) he turn'd, and thus address.

O thou, the first in merit and command!
And you the peers and princes of the land!
May every joy be yours! nor this the least,
When due libation shall have crown'd the feast.
Safe to my home to send your happy guest.
Complete are now the bounties you have given,
Be all those bounties but confirm'd by Heaven!
So may I find, when all my wanderings cease,
My consort blameless, and my friends in peace.

On you be every bliss; and every day,
In home-felt joys, delighted roll away:
Yourselves, your wives, your long-descending race,
May every god enrich with every grace!
Sure fixed on virtue may your nation stand,
And public evil never touch the land!

His words well weigh'd, the general voice approv'd
Benign, and instant his dismissal mov'd.
The monarch to Pontonous gave the sign,
To fill the goblet high with rosy wine:
Great Jove the Father first (he cried) implore;
Then send the stranger to his native shore.
The luscious wine th' obedient herald brought;
Around the mansion flow'd the purple draught;
Each from his seat to each immortal pours,
Whom glory circles in th' Olympian bowers.
Ulysses sole with air majestic stands,
The bowl presenting to Aretè's hands;
Then thus: O queen, farewell! be still possess'd
Of dear remembrance, blessing still and blest!
THE ODYSSEY.

BOOK XIX.

Till age and death shall gently call thee hence
(Sure fate of every mortal excellence)
Farewell! and joys successive over spring
To thee, to time, the people, and the king!

Thus he; then parting prints the sandy shore
To the fair port: a herald march'd before,
Sent by Alcinous; of Ariste's train
Three chosen maids attend him to the main;
This does a tunic and white vest convey;
A various casket, of rich inlay,
And bread and wine the third. The cheerful mates
Safe in the hollow poop dispose the casks:
Upon the deck soft painted robes they spread,
With linen cover'd, for the king's bed.
He climb'd the lofty stern—then gently prest
The swelling couch, and lay compos'd to rest.

Now placed in order, the Phocian train
Their cables loose, and launch into the main:
At once they bend, and strike their equal oars,
And leave the sinking hills and leasow'd shores;
While on the deck the chief in silence lies,
And pleasing slumbers steal upon his eyes.
As fiery coursers in the rapid race
Ur'd by fierce drivers through the dusty space,
Toss their high heads, and scour along the plain;
Six mounts the bounding vessel o'er the main.
Back to the stern the parted billows flow,
And the black ocean foams and roars below.

Thus wish spread sails the winged galleys files;
Less swift an eagle cuts the liquid skies;
Divine Ulysses was her sacred load,
A man, in wisdom equal to a god!
Much danger, long and mighty toils, he bore,
In storms by sea, and combats on the shore;
All which soft sleep now banish'd from his breast,
Wrapt in a pleasing, deep, and death-like rest.

But when the morning-star with early ray
Flam'd in the front of heaven, and promis'd day;
Like distant clouds the mariner descries
Fair Ithaca's emerging hills arise.
BOOK XIII.  THE ODYSSEY.

Far from the town a spacious port appears,
Sacred to Phoroeys' power, whose name it bears:
Two craggy rocks projecting to the main,
The roaring wind's tempestuous rage restrain;
Within the waves in softer murmurs glide,
And ships secure without their halyards ride.
High at the head a branching olive grows,
And crowns the pointed cliffs with shady boughs.
Beneath, a gloomy grotto's cool recess
Delights the Nereids of the neighbouring seas.
Where bowls and urns were form'd of living stone,
And massy beams in native marble shone;
On which the labours of the nymphs were roll'd,
Their webs divine of purple mix'd with gold.
Within the cave the clustering bees attend
Their waxen works, or from the roof descend.
Perpetual waters o'er the pavement glide;
Two marble doors unfold on either side;
Sacred the south, by which the gods descend;
But mortals enter at the northern end.

Thither they bent, and haul'd their ship to land
(The crooked keel divides the yellow sand);
Ulysses sleeping on his couch they bore,
And gently plac'd him on the rocky shore.
His treasures next, Alcinoüs gifts, they laid
In the wild olive's unfrequented shade,
Secure from theft; then launch'd the bark again,
Resum'd their oars, and measur'd back the main.
Nor yet forgot old Ocean's dread supreme
The vengeance vow'd for eyeless Polypheme.
Before the throne of mighty Jove he stood;
And sought the secret counsels of the god.

Shall then no more, O sire of gods, be mine
The rights and honours of a power divine?
Scorn'd ev'n by man, and (oh severe disgrace!)
By soft Phæacians, my degenerate race!
Against you destin'd head in vain I swore,
And menace'd vengeance, ere he reach'd his shore;
To reach his natal-shore was thy decree;
Mild I obey'd, for who shall war with thee?
Behold him landed, careless and asleep,
From all th' eluded dangers of the deep;
Lo where he lies, amidst a shining store
Of brass, rich garments, and resplendent ore;
And bears triumphant to his native isle
A prize more worth than Ilion's noble spoil.
To whom the Father of th' immortal powers,
Who swells the clouds, and gladdens earth with showers.

Can mighty Neptune thus of man complain?
Neptune, tremendous o'er the boundless main!
Rever'd and awful ev'n in heaven's abodes,
Ancient and great! a god above the gods!
If that low race offend thy power divine
(Weak, daring creatures!) is not vengeance thine?
Go then, the guilty at thy will chastise.

He said: the shaker of the earth replies.
This then I doom: to fix the gallant ship
A mark of vengeance on the sable deep;
To warn the thoughtless self-confiding train,
No more unites'd thus to brave the main.

Pull in their port a shady hill shall rise;
If such thy will.—We will it, Jove replies.
Ev'n when with transport blackening all the strand,
The swarming people hail their ship to land,
Fix her for ever, a memorial stone:
Still let her seem to sail, and seem alone:
The trembling crowds shall see the sudden shade
Of whelming mountains overhang their head!
With that, the god whose earthquakes rock the ground,
Fierce to Phæacia cross the vast profound.
Swift as a swallow sweeps the liquid way.
The winged pianace shot along the sea.
The god arrests her with a sudden stroke,
And roots her down an everlasting rock.
Aghast the Sclerians stand in deep surprise;
All press to speak, all question with their eyes.
What hands unseen the rapid bark restrain!
And yet it swims, or seems to swim, the main!
BOOK XIII. — THE ODYSSEY.

Thus they, unconscious of the dead divine:
Till great Alcinoüs rising own'd the sign.

Behold the long-predestin'd day! (he cries);
Oh certain faith of ancient prophecies!
These ears have heard my royal sire disclose
A dreadful story, big with future woes;
How mov'd with wrath, that careless we convey
Promiscuous every guest to every bay,

Stern Neptune rag'd; and how by his command
Firm rooted in the surge a ship should stand
(A monument of wrath); and mound on mound
Should hide our walls, or whelm beneath the ground.

The Fates have follow'd as declar'd the seer.
Be humbled, nations! and your monarch hear.
No more unlicens'd brave the deeps, no more
With every stranger pass from shore to shore:

On angry Neptune now for mercy call;
To his high name let twelve black oxen fall.
So may the god reverse his purpos'd will,
Nor o'er our city hang the dreadful hill.

The monarch spoke; they trembled and obey'd,
Forth on the sands the victim oxen led:
The gather'd tribes before the altars stand,
And chiefs and rulers, a majestic band.
The king of ocean all the tribes implore;
The blazing altars redd'en all the shore.

Meanwhil'e Ulysses in his country lay,
Releas'd from sleep, and round him might survey
The solitary shore and rolling sea.
Yet had his mind through tedious absence lost
The dear remembrance of his native coast;
Besides, Minerva, to secure her care,
Diffus'd around a veil of thicken'd air:
For so the gods ordain'd, to keep unseen
His royal person from his friends and queen;
Till the proud suitors for their crimes afford
An ample vengeance to their injur'd lord.

Now all the land another prospect bore,
Another port appear'd, another shore,
And long-continued ways, and winding roads,
And unknown mountains, crown'd with unknown woods.
Pensive and slow with sudden grief opprest
The king arose, and beat his careful breast,
Cast a long look o'er all the coast and main,
And sought, around, his native realm in vain:
Then with everted eyes stood fix'd in weep,
And as he spake, the tears began to flow.
Ye gods, be cry'd, upon what barren coast,
In what new region, is Ulysses lost?
Possess'd by wild barbarians, fierce in arms;
Or men whose bosom tender pity warms?
Where shall this treasure now in safety lie?
And whither, whither, its sad owner fly?
Ah why did I Alcinoüs' grace implore?
Ah, why forsake Phæacia's happy shore?
Some juster prince perhaps had entertain'd,
And save restor'd me to my native land.
Is this the promis'd long-expected coast,
And this the faith Phæacia's rulers boast?
Oh righteous gods! of all the great, how few
Are just to heaven, and to their promise true!
But he, the power to whose all-seeing eyes
The deeds of men appear without disguise,
'Tis his alone t' avenge the wrongs I bear:
For still th' oppress'd are his peculiar case.
To count these presents, and from thence to prove
Their faith is mine: the rest belongs to Jove.

Then on the sands he rang'd his wealthy store,
The gold, the vessels, the tripods number'd o'er:
All these he found, but still in error lost
Disconsolate he wanders on the coast,
Sighs for his country, and laments again
To the deaf rocks, and hoarse-resounding main.
When lo! the guardian goddess of the wise,
Celestial Pallas, stood before his eyes;
In show a youthful swain, of form divine,
Who seem'd descended from some princely line.
BOOK XIII. THE ODYSSEY.

A graceful robe her slender body drest; 271
Around her shoulders flew the waving vest,
Her decent hand a shining javelin bore,
And painted sandals on her feet she wore,
To whom the king: Whose'er of human race 275
Thou art, that wander'st in this desert place!
With joy to thee, as to some god, I bend,
To thee my treasures, and myself commend.
O tell a wretch in exile doom'd to stray,
What air I breathe, what country I survey? 280
The fruitful continent's extremest bound,
Or some fair isle which Neptune's arms surround?

From what far clime (said she) remote from fame
Arriv'st thou here a stranger to our name?
Thou seest an island, not to these unknown 285
Whose hills are bright'en'd by the rising sun,
Nor those that plac'd beneath his utmost reign
Behold him sinking in the western main.
The ragged soil allows no level space
For flying chariots, or the rapid race;
Yet, not ungrateful to the peasant's pain,
Suffices fullness to the swelling grain:
The loaded trees their various fruits produce,
And clustering grapes afford a generous juice:
Woods crown our mountains, and in every grove 290
The bounding goats and frisking heifers rove;
Soft rains and kindly dews refresh the field,
And rising springs eternal verdure yield.
Ev'n to those shores is Ithaca renown'd,
Where Troy's majestic ruins strew the ground. 300

At this, the chief with transport was possest,
His panting heart exulted in his breast:
Yet, well dissembling his untimely joys,
And veiling truth in plausible disguise,
Thus, with an air sincere, in fiction bold, 305
His ready tale th' inventive hero told:

Oft have I heard in Crete, this island's name;
For 'twas from Crete my native soil I came,
Self-banish'd thence. I sail'd before the wind,
And left my children and my friends behind. 310
From fierce Idomeneus' revenge I flew,
Whose son, the swift Orsilochus, I slew
(With brutal force he seiz'd my Trojan pray,
Due to the toils of many a bloody day).
Unseen I 'scap'd, and, favour'd by the night,
In a Phœnician vessel took my flight,
For Pyle or Elis bound: but tempests tost
And raging billows drove us on your coast.
In deaf of night an unknown port we gain'd,
Spent with fatigue, and slept secure on land.
But ere the rosy morn renew'd the day,
While in th' embrace of pleasing sleep I lay,
Sudden, invited by auspicious gales,
They land my goods, and hoist their flying sails.
Abandon'd here, my fortune I deplore,
A hapless exile on a foreign shore.

Thus while he spoke the blue-ey'd maid began
With pleasing smiles to view the godlike man:
Then chang'd her form: and now divinely bright,
Joye's heavenly daughter stood confess'd to sight;
Like a fair virgin in her beauty's bloom,
Skil'd in th' illustrious labours of the loom.

O still the same Ulysses! she rejoin'd,
In useful craft successfully refin'd!
Artful in speech, in action, and in mind!
Suffic'd it not, that, thy long labours past,
Secure thou seest thy native shore at last?
But this to me? who, like thyself, excel
In arts of course!, and dissembling well;
To me? whose wit exceeds the powers divine,
No less than mortals are surpass'd by thine.
Know'st thou not me? who made thy life my care,
Thro' ten years' wandering, and thro' ten years' war;
Who taught thee arts, A cinotis to persuade,
To raise his wonder; and engage his aid;
And now appear, thy treasures to protect,
Conceal thy person, thy designs direct,
And tell what more thou must from Fate expect.
Domestic woes far heavier to be borne!
The pride of fools, and slaves' insulting scorn.
But thou be silent, nor reveal thy state;
Yield to the force of unresisted fate,
And bear unmov'd the wrongs of base mankind,
The last, and hardest conquest of the mind.

Goddess of wisdom! Ithacus replies,
He who discerns thee must be truly wise,
So seldom view'd, and ever in disguise.
When the bold Argives led their warring powers,
Against proud Ilion's well-defended towers;

Ulysses was thy care, celestial maid!
Grac'd with thy sight, and favour'd with thy aid.

But when the Trojan piles in ashes lay,
And bound for Greece we plough'd the watery way;
Our fleet dispers'd and driven from coast to coast,
Thy sacred presence from that hour I lost;

Till I beheld thy radiant form once more,
And heard thy counsels on Phaeacia's shore.

But, by th' almighty author of thy race,
Tell me, oh tell, is this my native place?
For much I fear, long tracts of land and sea
Divide this coast from distant Ithaca;

The sweet delusion kindly you impose,
To soothe my hopes, and mitigate my woes.

Thus he, the blue-ey'd goddess thus replies.
How prone to doubt, how cautious are the wise!
Who, vers'd in fortune, fear the flattering show,
And taste not half the bliss the gods bestow.
The more shall Pallas aid thy just desires,
And guard the wisdom which herself inspires.

Others, long absent from their native place,
Straight seek their home, and fly with eager pace
To their wives' arms, and children's dear embrace.
Not thus Ulysses: he decrees to prove
His subjects' faith, and queen's suspected love;
Who mourn'd her lord twice ten revolving years,
And wastes the days in grief, the nights in tears.
But Pallas knew (thy friends and navy lost)
Once more 'twas given thee to behold thy coast:
Yet how could I with adverse Fate engage,
And mighty Neptune's unrelenting rage?
Now lift thy longing eyes, while I restore
The pleasing prospect of thy native shore.
Behold the port of Phorcys! fenc’d around
With rocky mountains, and with olives crown’d.
Behold the gloomy grot! whose cool recess
Delights the Nereids of the neighbouring seas;
Whose now-neglected altars in thy reign
Blush’d with the blood of sheep and oxen slain.
Behold! where Neritum the clouds divides,
And shakes the waving forests on his sides.

So spake the goddess; and the prospect clear’d,
The mists dispers’d, and all the coast appear’d.
The king with joy confess’d his place of birth,
And on his knees salutes his mother-earth;
Then, with his suppliant hands upheld in air,
Thus to the sea-green sisters sends his prayer.

All hail! ye virgin-daughters of the main!
Ye streams, beyond my hopes beheld again!
To you once more your own Ulysses bows;
Attend his transports, and receive his vows!
If Jove prolong my days, and Pallas crown
The growing virtues of my youthful son,
To you shall rites divine be ever paid,
And grateful offerings on your altars laid.

Then thus Minerva. From that anxious breast
Dismiss those cares, and leave to Heaven the rest.
Our task be now thy treasurer stores to save,
Deep in the close recesses of the cave;
Then future means consult—She spoke, and trod
The shady grot, that brighten’d with the god.

The closest caverns of the grot she sought;
The gold, the brass, the robes, Ulysses brought;
These in the secret gloom the chief dispos’d;
The entrance with a rock the goddess clos’d.

Now, seated in the olive’s sacred shade,
Confer the hero and the martial maid.
The goddess of the azure eyes began:
Son of Laëstes! much-experienced man!
The suitor, train thy earliest care demand,
Of that luxurious race to rid the land:
Three years thy house their lawless rule has seen,
And proud addresses to the matchless queen.
But she thy absence mourns from day to day,
And inly bleeds, and silent wastes away:
Evasive of the bridal hour, she gives
Fond hopes to all, and all with hopes deceives.

To this Ulysses. Oh, celestial maid!
Prais’d be thy counsel, and thy timely aid:
Else had I seen my native walls in vain,
Like great Atrides, just restor’d and slain.
Vouchsafe the means of vengeance to debate,
And plan with all thy arts the scene of fate.
Then, then be present, and my soul inspire,
As when we wrapt Troy’s heaven-built walls in fire.
The’ leagu’d against me hundred heroes stand,
Hundreds shall fall, if Pallas aid my hand.
She answer’d: In the dreadful day of fight
Know, I am with thee, strong in all my might.
If thou but equal to thyself be found,
What gasping numbers then shall press the ground!
What human victims stain the feastful floor!
How wide the pavements float with guilty gore!
It fits thee now to wear a dark disguise,
And secret walk unknown to mortal eyes.
For this, my hand shall wither every grace,
And every elegance of form and face,
O'er thy smooth skin a bark of wrinkles spread,
Turn hoar the auburn honours of thy head,
Disfigure every limb with coarse attire,
And in thy eyes extinguish all the fire;
Add all the wants and the decays of life;
 Estrange thee from thy own; thy son, thy wife;
From the loath’d object every sight shall turn,
And the blind suitors their destruction scorn.

Go first the master of thy herds to find,
True to his charge, a loyal swain and kind:
For thee he sighs; and to the royal heir
And chaste Penelope extends his care.
At the Coracian rock he now resides,
Where Arethusa’s sable water glides;
The sable water and the copious mast
Swell the fat herd; luxuriant, large repast!
With him rest peaceful in the rural cell,
And all you ask his faithful tongue shall tell.
Me into other realms my cares convey,
To Sparta, still with female beauty gay:
For know, to Sparta thy lov'd offspring came,
To learn thy fortunes from the voice of Fame.

At this the father, with a father's care,
Must he too suffer? he, oh goddess! bear
Of wanderings and of woes a wretched share?
Through the wild ocean plough the dangerous way,
And leave his fortunes and his house a prey?
Why would'st not thou, oh all-enlighten'd mind!
Inform him certain, and protect him, kind?
To whom Minerva. Be thy soul at rest;
And know, whatever Heaven ordains, is best.
To fame I sent him, to acquire renown;
To other regions is his virtue known:
Secure he sits, near great Atrides plac'd;
With friendships strengthen'd, and with honors grac'd.
But lo! an ambush waits his passage o'er;
Fierce foes insidious intercept the shore:
In vain; far sooner all the murderous brood
This injur'd land shall fatten with their blood.

She spake, then touch'd him with her powerful wand:
The skin shrunk up, and wither'd at her hand:
A swift old age o'er all his members spread;
A sudden frost was sprinkled on his head;
Nor longer in the heavy eye-ball shin'd
The glance divine, forth-beaming from the mind.
His robe, which spots indelible besmear,
In rags dishonest flutters with the air:
A stag's torn hide is lapt around his reins;
A rugged staff his trembling hand sustains;
And at his side a wretched scrip was hung,
Wide-patch'd, and knotted to a twisted thong.
So look'd the chief, so mov'd: to mortal eyes
Object uncouth! a man of miseries!
While Pallas, cleaving the wide fields of air,
To Sparta flies, Telemachus her care.

ODYSSEY.
BOOK XIV.

ARGUMENT.
The Conversation with Eumæus.
Ulysses arrives in disguise at the house of Eumæus, where he is received, entertained, and lodged with the utmost hospitality. The several discourses of that faithful old servant, with the feigned story told by Ulysses to conceal himself, and other conversations on various subjects, take up this entire book.
BOOK XIV.

BUT he, deep-musing, o'er the mountains stray'd
Through maze' thicken's of the woodland shade,
And cavern'd ways, the shaggy coast along,
With cliffs and nodding forests overhung.
Eumæus at his sylvan lodge he sought,
A faithful servant, and without a fault.
Ulysses found him busied, as he sate
Before the threshold of his rustic gate;
Around, the mansion in a circle shone;
A rural portico of rugged stone
(In absence of his lord, with honest toil
His own industrious hands had rais'd the pile).
The wall was stone from neighbouring quarries borne,
Encircled with a fence of native thorn,
And strong with pales, by many a weary stroke
Of stubborn labour hewn from heart of oak;
Frequent and thick. Within the space were rear'd
Twelve ample cells, the lodgements of his herd.
Full fifty pregnant females each contain'd;
The males without (a smaller race,) remain'd;
Doom'd to supply the suitors' wasteful feast,
A stock by daily luxury decreas'd;
Now scarce four hundred left. These to defend,
Four savage dogs, a watchful guard, attend.
Here sate Eumæus, and his cares apply'd
To form strong buskins of well-season'd hide.
Of four assistants who his labour share,
Three now were absent on the rural care;
The fourth drove victims to the suitor-train:
But he, of ancient faith, a simple swain,
Sigh'd, while he furnish'd the luxurious board,
And weary'd heaven with wishes for his lord.

Soon as Ulysses near th' inclosure drew,
With open mouths the furious mastiffs flew:
Down sate the sage, and cautious to withstand,
Let fall th' offensive truncheon from his hand.
BOOK XIV. THE ODYSSEY.

Sudden, the master runs; aloud he calls;
And from his hasty hand the leather falls;
With showers of stones he drives them far away;
The scattering dogs around at distance bay. 40

Unhappy stranger! (thus the faithful swain Began with accent gracious and humane)
What sorrow had been mine, if at my gate
Thy reverend age had met a shameful fate!
Enough of woes already have I known;
Enough my master's sorrows and my own.
While here (ungrateful task!) his herds I feed,
Ordain'd for lawless rioters to bleed;
Perhaps, supported at another's board,
Far from his country roams my hapless lord!
Or sigh'd in exile forth his latest breath,
Now cover'd with th' eternal shade of death!
But enter this my homely roof, and see
Our woods not void of hospitality.
Then tell me whence thou art, and what the share
Of woes and wanderings thou wert born to bear?

He said, and, seconding the kind request,
With friendly step precedes his unknown guest.
A shaggy goat's soft hide beneath him spread,
And with fresh rushes heap'd an ample bed:
Joy touch'd the hero's tender soul, to find
So just reception from a heart so kind;
And, Oh, ye gods! with all your blessings grace
(He thus broke forth) this friend of human race!

The swain reply'd. It never was our guise
To slight the poor, or aught humane despise;
For Jove unfolds our hospitable door,
'Tis Jove that sends the stranger and the poor,
Little, alas! is all the good I can;
A man opprest, dependent, yet a man:
Accept such treatment as a swain affords,
Slave to the insolence of youthful lords!
For hence is by unequal god: remov'd
That man of bounties, loving and belov'd!
To whom what's'er his slave enjoys is ow'd,
And moro, had Fate allow'd, had been bestow'd:
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK XIV.

But Fate condemn'd him to a foreign shore; 80
Much have I sorrow'd, but my master more.
Now cold he lies, to death's embrace resign'd:
Ah, perish Helen! perish all her kind!
For whose curse'd cause, in Agamemnon's name, 90
He trod so fatally the paths of Fame.

His vest succinct then girding round his waist,
Forth rush'd the swain with hospitable haste.
Straight to the lodgements of his herd he run, 85
Where the fat porkers slept beneath the sun;
Of two, his cup-glass launch'd the spouting blood;
These quarter'd, sing'd, and fix'd on forks of wood,
All hasty on the hissing coals he threw;
And, smoaking, back the tasteful viands drew, 90
Broachers and all; then on the board display'd
The ready meal, before Ulysses laid
With flour imbrownd; next mingled wine yet new,
And luscious as the bees' nectarous dew:
Then sate companion of the friendly feast, 95
With open look; and thus bespoke his guest.

Take with free welcome what our hands prepare,
Such food as falls to simple servant's share;
The best our lords consume; those thoughtless peers,
Rich without bounty, guilty without fears. 100
Yet sure the gods their impious acts detest,
And honour justice and the righteous breast.
Pirates and conquerors of harden'd mind,
The foes of peace, and scourges of mankind,
To whom offending men are made a prey 105
When Jove in vengeance gives a land away;
Ev'n these, when of their ill-got spoils possess'd
Find sure tormentors in the guilty breast:
Some voice of God, close whispering from within,
"Wretch! this is villainy, and this is sin." 110
But these, no doubt, some oracle explore,
That tells, the great Ulysses is no more.
Hence springs their confidence, and from our signs
Their rapine strengthens, and their riots rise;
Constant as Jove the night and day bestows, 115
Bleeds a whole hecatomb, a vintage flows.
None match'd this hero's wealth, of all who reign
O'er the fair islands of the neighbouring main.
Nor all the monarchs whose far-dreaded sway
The wide-extended continents obey:
First, on the main-land, of Ulysses breed
Twelve herds, twelve flocks, on ocean's margin feed;
As many stalls for shaggy goats are rear'd;
As many lodgements for the tusk'd herd;
Those foreign keepers guard; and here are seen
Twelve herds of goats that graze our utmost green;
To native pastors is their charge assign'd;
And mine the care to feed the bristly kind:
Each day the fattest bleeds of either herd,
All to the suitor's wasteful board prefer'd.

Thus he benevolent: his unknown guest
With hunger keen devours the savoury feast;
While schemes of vengeance ripen in his breast.
Silent and thoughtful while the board he ey'd,
Eumæus pours on high the purple tide;
The king with smiling looks his joy exprest,
And thus the kind inviting host address'd.

Say now, what man is he, the man deplor'd,
So rich, so potent, whom you style your lord?
Late with such affluence and possessions blest,
And now in honour's glorious bed at rest.
Whoever was the warrior, he must be
To Fame no stranger, nor perhaps to me;
Who, (so the gods, and so the fates ordain'd)
Have wander'd many a sea, and many a land.

Small is the faith, the prince and queen ascribe
(Reply'd Eumæus) to the wandering tribe.
For needy strangers still to flattery fly,
And want too oft betrays the tongue to lie.
Each vagrant traveller, that touches here,
Deludes with fallacies the royal ear,
To dear remembrance makes his image rise,
And calls the springing sorrows from her eyes.
Such thou may'st be. But he whose name you crave
Moulders in earth, or welters on the wave,
THE ODYSSEY.

BOOK XIV.

Or food for fish or dogs his relics lie,
Or torn by birds are scatter'd through the sky.
So perish'd he: and left (for ever lost)
Much woe to all, but sure to me the most.
So mild a master never shall I find;
Less dear the parents, whom I left behind,
Less soft my mother, less my father kind.
Not with such transport would my eyes run o'er,
Again to hail them in their native shore;
As lov'd Ulysses once more to embrace,
Restor'd and breathing in his natal place.
That name for ever dread, yet ever dear,
Ev'n in his absence I pronounce with fear:
In my respect, he bears a prince's part;
But lives a very brother in my heart.

Thus spoke the faithful swain, and thus rejoin'd
The master of his grief, the man of patient mind.
Ulysses, friend! shall view his old abodes
(Distrustful as thou art), nor doubt the gods.
Nor speak I rashly, but with faith aver'td,
And what I speak, attesting Heaven has heard.
If so, a cloak and vesture be my meed;
Till his return, no title shall I plead;
Though certain be my news, and great my need.
Whom want itself can force untruths to tell,
My soul detests him as the gates of hell.
Thou first be witness, hospitable Jove!
And every god inspiring social love;
And witness every household power that waits
Guard of these fires, and angel of these gates!
Ere the next moon increase, or this decay,
His ancient realms Ulysses shall survey;
In blood and dust each proud oppressor mourn,
And the lost glories of his house return.

Nor shall that meed be thine, nor ever more
Shall lov'd Ulysses hail this happy shore
(Replied Eumæus): to the present hour
Now turn thy thought, and joys within our power.
From sad reflexion let my soul repose;
The name of him awakes a thousand woes.
Book XIV. The Odyssey.

But guard him, gods! and to these arms restore!
Not his true consort can desire him more;
Not old Laërtes, broken with despair;
Not young Telemachus, his blooming heir.
Alas, Telemachus! my sorrows flow
Afresh for thee, my second cause of woe!
Like some fair plant set by a heavenly hand,
He grew, he flourish’d, and he blest the land;
In all the youth his father’s image shin’d,
Bright in his person, brighter in his mind.
What man, or god, deceiv’d his better sense,
Far on the swelling seas to wander hence?
To distant Pylos hapless is he gone,
To seek his father’s fate, and find his own!
For traitors wait his way, with dire design
To end at once the great Arcesian line.
But let us leave him to their wills above;
The fates of men are in the hand of Jove.
And now, my venerable guest! declare
Your name, your parents, and your native air:
Sincere from whence begun your course, relate,
And to what ship I owe the friendly freight?

Thus he: and thus (with prompt invention bold)
The cautious chief his ready story told.
On dark reserve what better can prevail,
Or from the fluent tongue produce the tale,
Than when two friends, alone, in peaceful place
Confer, and wines and cates the table grace;
But most, the kind inviter’s cheerful face?
Thus might we sit, with social goblets crown’d,
Till the whole circle of the year goes round;
Not the whole circle of the year would close
My long narration of a life of woes.
But such was Heaven’s high will! Know then, I came
From sacred Crete, and from a sire of fame:
Castor Hylacides (that name he bore),
Belov’d and honour’d in his native shore;
Blest in his riches, in his children more.
Sprung of a handmaid, from a bought embrace,
I shar’d his kindness with his lawful race:
But when that fate, which all must undergo,
From earth remov'd him to the shades below;
The large domain his greedy sons divide,
And each was portion'd as the lots decide.
Little, alas! was left my wretched share,
Except a house, a covert from the air:
But what by niggard fortune was deny'd,
A willing widow's copious wealth supply'd.
My valour was my plea, a gallant mind
That, true to honour, never lagg'd behind
(The sex is ever to a soldier kind).
Now wasting years my former strength confound,
And added woes have bow'd me to the ground;
Yet by the stubble you may guess the grain,
And mark the ruins of no vulgar man.
Me, Pallas gave to lead the martial storm,
And the fair ranks of battle to deform;
Me, Mars inspir'd to turn the foe to flight,
And tempt the secret ambush of the night.
Let ghastly Death in all his forms appear,
I saw him not, it was not mine to fear.
Before the rest I rais'd my ready steel;
The first I met, he yielded, or he fell.
But works of peace my soul disdain'd to bear,
The rural labour, or domestic care.
To raise the mast, the missile dart to wing.
And send swift arrows from the bounding string.
Were arts the gods made grateful to my mind;
Those gods, who turn (to various ends design'd)
The various thoughts and talents of mankind.
Before the Grecians touch'd the Trojan plain,
Nine times commander or by land or main,
In foreign fields I spread my glory far,
Great in the praise, rich in the spoils of war:
Thence charg'd with riches, as increas'd in fame,
To Crete return'd, an honourable name.
But when great Jove that direful war decreed,
Which rous'd all Greece, and made the mighty bleed;
Our states myself and Idomen employ
To lead their fleets, and carry death to Troy.
BOOK XIV. THE ODYSSEY.

Nine years we warr'd; the tenth saw Ilion fall;
Homeward we sail'd, but Heaven dispers'd us all.
One only month my wife enjoy'd my stay;
So will'd the God who gives and takes away.
Nine ships I mann'd, equipp'd with ready stores,
Intent to voyage to th' Egyptian shores;
In feast and sacrifice my chosen train
Six days consum'd; the seventh we plough'd the main.
Crete's ample fields diminish to our eye;
Before the Boreal blasts the vessels fly;
Safe through the level seas we sweep our way;
The steerman governs, and the ships obey.
The fifth fair morn we stem th' Egyptian tide;
And tilting o'er the bay the vessels ride:
To anchor there my fellows I command,
And spies commission to explore the land,
But, sway'd by lust of gain, and headlong will,
The coasts they ravage, and the natives kill.
The spreading clamour to their city flies,
And horse and foot in mingled tumult rise,
The reddening dawn reveals the circling fields,
Horrid with bristly spears, and glancing shields.
Jove thunder'd on their side. Our guilty head
We turn'd to flight, the gathering vengeance spread
On all parts round, and heaps on heaps his dead.
I then explor'd my thought, what course to prove
(And sure the thought was dictated by Jove);
Oh, had he left me to that happier doom,
And sav'd a life of miseries to come!
The radiant helmet from my brows unlac'd,
And low on earth my shield and javelin cast,
I meet the monarch with a suppliant's face,
Approach his chariot, and his knees embrace.
He heard, he saw'd, he plac'd me at his side;
My state he pity'd, and my tears he dried,
Restrain'd the rage the vengeful foe express'd
And turn'd the deadly weapons from my breast.
Pious! to guard the hospitable rite,
And fearing Jove, whom mercy's works delight.
In Egypt thus with peace and plenty blest,
I liv'd (and happy till had liv'd) a guest.
On seven bright years successive blessings wait;
The next chang'd all the colour of my fate.
A false Phœnician, of insidious mind,
Vers'd in vile arts, and foe to human kind,
With semblance fair invites me to his home;
I seize'd the proffer (ever fond to roam):
Domestic in his faithless roof I stay'd,
Till the swift sun his annual circle made.
To Lybia then he meditates the way;
With guileful art a stranger to betray,
And sell to bondage in a foreign land:
Much doubting, yet compell'd, I quit the strand.
Through the mid seas the nimble pinnace sails,
Aloof from Crete, before the northern gales:
But when remote her chalky cliffs we lost,
And far from ken of any other coast,
When all was wild expanse of sea and air;
Then doom'd high Jove due vengeance to prepare.
He hung a night of horrors o'er their head
(The shaded ocean blacken'd as it spread);
He launch'd the fiery bolt; from pole to pole
Broad burst the lightnings, deep the thunders roll;
In giddy rounds the whirling ship is toss'd,
And all in clouds of smothering sulphur lost.
As from a hanging rock's tremendous height,
The sable crows with intercepted flight
Drop endlong; scar'd and black with sulphurous hue:
So from the deck are hurl'd the ghastly crew.
Such end the wicked found! but Jove's intent
Was yet to save th' oppress and innocent.
Plac'd on the mast, (the last resource of life)
With winds and waves I held unequal strife;
For nine long days the billows tilting o'er,
The tenth soft wafts me to Thespulia's shore.
The monarch's son a shipwreck'd wretch reliev'd,
The sire with hospitable rites receiv'd,
And in his palace like a brother plac'd,
With gifts of price and gorgeous garments grac'd.
While here I sojourn'd, oft I heard the fame
How late Ulysses to the country came,
BOOK XIV. THE ODYSSEY.

How lov'd, how honour'd, in this court he stay'd, And here his whole collected treasure lay'd; I saw myself the vast unnumber'd store Of steel elaborate, and resplendent ore, And brass high heap'd amidst the regal dome; Immense supplies for ages yet to come! Meantime he voyag'd to explore the will Of Jove, on high Dodona's holy hill, What means might beat his safe return avail, To come in pomp, or bear a secret sail? Full oft has Phidon, whilst he pour'd the wine, Attesting solemn all the powers divine, That soon Ulysses would return, declar'd, The sailors waiting, and the ships prepar'd. But first the king dismiss'd me from his shores, For fair Dulichium crown'd with fruitful stores; To good Acastus' friendly care consign'd: But other counsels pleas'd the sailors' mind: New frauds were plotted by the faithless train, And misery demands me once again. Soon as remote from shore they plough the wave, With ready hands they rush to seize their slave; Then with these tatter'd rags they wrapt me round (Stript of my own), and to the vessel bound. At eve, at Ithaca's delightful land The ship arriv'd: forth-issuing on the sand They sought repast; while to th' unhappy kind, The pitying gods themselves my chains unbind. Soft I descended, to the sea apply'd My naked breast, and shot along the tide. Soon past beyond their sight, I left the flood, And took the spreading shelter of the wood. Their prize escap'd the faithless pirates mourn'd; But deem'd inquiring vain, and to their ship return'd. Screen'd by protecting gods from hostile eyes, They led me to a good man and a wise, To live beneath thy hospitable care, And wait the woes heaven dooms me yet to bear.

Unhappy guest! whose sorrows touch my mind! (Thus good Eumæus with a sigh rejoin'd),
THE ODYSSEY.

BOOK XIV.

For real sufferings since I grieve sincere,
Check not with fallacies the springing tear;
Nor turn the passion into groundless joy
For him, whom Heaven has destin’d to destroy. 400
Oh! had he perish’d on some well-fought day,
Or in his friend’s embraces died away!

That grateful Greece with streaming eyes might raise
Historic marbles to record his praise;
His praise, eternal on the faithful stone,
Had with transmissive honours grac’d his son.
Now snatch’d by harpies to the dreary coast,
Sunk is the hero, and his glory lost!

While pensive in this solitary den,
Far from gay cities and the ways of men,
I linger life; nor to the court repair,
But when the constant queen commands my care;
Or when, to taste her hospitable board,
Some guest arrives, with rumours of her lord;
And these indulge their want, and those their woe,
And here the tears, and there the goblets flow. 416

By many such have I been warn’d; but chief
By one Ætolian robb’d of all belief,
Whose hap it was to this our roof to roam,
For murder banish’d from his native home. 420

He swore, Ulysses on the coast of Crete
Staid but a season to rest his fleet;
A few revolving months should waft him o’er,
Fraught with bold warriors, and a boundless store.
O thou: whom age has taught to understand, 425
And heaven has guided with a favouring hand!
On god or mortal to obtrude a lie
Forbear, and dread to flatter, as to die.
Not for such ends my house and heart are free,
But dear respect to Jove, and charity.

And why, oh swain of unbelieving mind!
(Thus quick reply’d the wisest of mankind)
Doubt you my oath? yet more my faith to try,
A solemn compact let us ratify,
And witness every power that rules the sky! 435
If here Ulysses from his labours rest,
Be then my prize a tunic and a vest;
And, where my hopes invite me, straight transport
In safety to Dulichium's friendly court.
But, if he greets not thy desiring eye,
Hurl me from yon dread precipice on high;
The due reward of fraud and perjury,
Doubtless, oh guest! great laud and praise were mine

(Reply'd the swain for spotless faith divine),
If, after social rites and gifts bestow'd,
I stain'd my hospitable hearth with blood.
How would the gods my righteous toils succeed,
And bless the hand that made a stranger bleed?
No more—th' approaching hours of silent night
First claim refection, then to rest invite;
Beneath our humble cottage let us haste,
And here, unenvy'd, rural dainties taste.

Thus commun'd these; while to their lowly dome
The full-fed swine return'd with evening home;
Compell'd, reluctant, to their several styas,
With din obstreperous, and ungrateful cries.
Then to the slaves—Now from the herd the best
Select, in honour of our foreign guest:
With him, let us the genial banquet share,
For great and many are the griefs we bear;
While those who from our labours heap their board,
Blaspheme their feeder, and forget their lord.
Thus speaking, with dispatchful hand he took
A weighty ax, and cleft the solid oak;
This on the earth he pil'd; a boar full fed,
Of five years age, before the pile was lod:
The swain, whom acts of piety delight,
Observant of the gods, begins the rite;
First shears the forehead of the bristly bear,
And supplicant stands, invoking every power
To speed Ulysses to his native shore.
A knotty stake then aiming at his head,
Down dropt he groaning, and the spirit fled.
The scorching flames climb round on every side:
Then the sing'd members they with skill divide;
On these, in rolls of fat involv'd with art,
The choicest morsels lay from every part.
Some in the flamæ bestrewn’d with flour they threw;
Some cut in fragments from the forks they drew:
These while on several tables they dispose,
A priest himself the blameless rustic rose;
Expert the destin’d victim to dispar sup
In seven just portions, pure of hand and heart.
One sacred to the nympha’s part they lay;
Another to the winged son of May:
The rural tribe in common share the rest,
The king the chine, the honour of the feast,
Who sate delighted at his servant’s board;
The faithful servant joy’d his unknown lord.
Oh be thou dear (Ulysses cry’d) to Jove,
As well thou claim’st a grateful stranger’s love!
Be then thy thanks (the bounteous swain reply’d)
Enjoyment of the good the gods provide.
From God’s own hand descend our joys and woes;
These he decrees, and he but suffers those:
All power is his, and whatsoever he wills,
The will itself, omnipotent, fulfils.
This said, the first-fruits to the gods he gave;
Then pour’d of offer’d wine the sable wave:
In great Ulysses’ hand he plac’d the bowl,
He sate, and sweet refection cheer’d his soul.
The bread from canisters Messaulus gave (Eumæus’ proper treasure bought this slave,
And led from Taphos, to attend his board,
A servant added to his absent lord);
His task it was the wheaten loaves to lay,
And from the banquet take the bowls away.
And now the rage of hunger was represt,
And each betakes him to his couch to rest.
Now came the night, and darkness cover’d o’er
The face of things; the winds began to roar;
The driving storm the watery west-wind pours,
And Jove descends in deluges of showers.
Studious of rest and warmth, Ulysses lies,
Foreseeing from the first the storm would rise;
In mere necessity of coat and cloak,
With artful preface to his best he spoke.
Hear me, my friends! who this good banquet grace;
Tis sweet to play the fool in time and place,
And wine can of their wits the wise beguile,
Make the sage frolic, and the serious smile,
The grave in merry measures frisk about,
And many a long-repeated word bring out.
Since to be talkative I now commence,
Let wit cast off the sullen yoke of sense.
Once I was strong (would heaven restore those days!)
And with my betters claim'd a share of praise.
Ulysses, Menelaus, led forth a band,
And join'd me with them ('twas their own command);
A deathful ambush for the foe to lay,
Beneath Troy walls by night we took our way:
There, clad in arms, along the marshes spread,
We made the ozier-fringed bank our bed,
Full soon th' inclemency of heaven I feel,
Nor had these shoulders covering, but of steel.
Sharp blew the north; snow whitening all the fields
Froze with the blast, and gathering glas'd our shields.
There all but I, well fenc'd with cloak and vest,
Lay cover'd by their ample shields at rest.
Fool that I was! I left behind my own;
The skill of weather and of winds unknown,
And trusted to my coat and shield alone!
When now was wasted more than half the night,
And the stars faded at approaching light;
Sudden I jogg'd Ulysses, who was laid
Past by my side, and shivering thus I said:
Here longer in this field I cannot lie;
The winter pinches, and with cold I die,
And die asham'd (oh wisest of mankind),
The only fool who left his cloak behind.

He thought, and answer'd: hardly waking yet,
Sprung in his mind a momentary wit
(That wit, which or in council, or in fight,
Still met th' emergence, and determin'd right).
Hush thee, he cry'd (soft-whispering in my ear),
Speak not a word, lest any Greek may hear—
And then (supporting on his arm his head)
Hear me, companions! (thus aloud he said);
Methinks too distant from the field we lie;
Ev'n now a vision stood before my eye,
And sure the warning vision was from high:
Let from among us some swift courier rise,
Haste to the general, and demand supplies.
Up started Thoas straight, Andraemon's son,
Nimbly he rose, and cast his garment down;
Instant, the racer vanish'd off the ground;
That instant, in his cloak I wrapt me round:
And safe I slept, till brightly-dawning shone
The morn conspicuous on her golden throne.

Oh were my strength as then, as then my age!
Some friend would fence me from the winter's rage.
Yet, tatter'd as I look, I challeng'd then
The honours and the offices of men:
Some master, or some servant, would allow
A cloak and vest— but I am nothing now!

Well hast thou spoke (réjoin'd th'attentive swain);
Thy lips let fall no idle word or vain!
Nor garment shalt thou want, nor ought beside,
Meet, for the wandering suppliant to provide.
But in the morning take thy clothes again,
For here one vest suffices every swain;
No change of garments to our minds is known:
But, when return'd, the good Ulysses' son
With better hand shall grace with fit attires
His guest, and send thee where thy soul desires.

The honest herdsman rose, as this he said,
And drew before the hearth the stranger's bed:
The fleecy spoils of sheep, a goat's rough hide
He spreads; and adds a mantle thick and wide;
With store to heap above him, and below,
And guard each quarter as the tempests blow.
There lay the king and all the rest supine:
All, but the careful master of the swine:
Forth hasted he to tend his bristly care;
Well arm'd, and fanc'd against nocturnal air:
His weighty falchion o'er his shoulder tied;
His shaggy cloak a mountain goat supplied;
With his broad spear, the dread of dogs and men,
He seeks his lodging in the rocky den.
There to the tusky herd he bends his way,
Where, screen'd from Boreas, high o'erarch'd they lay.
ARGUMENT.

The Return of Telemachus.

The goddess Minerva commands Telemachus in a vision to return to Ithaca. Pisistratus and he take leave of Menelaus, and arrive at Pylos, where they part; and Telemachus sets sail, after having received on board Theoclymenus the soothsayer. The scene then changes to the cottage of Eumæus, who entertains Ulysses with a recital of his adventures. In the mean time Telemachus arrives on the coast, and sending the vessel to the town, proceeds by himself to the lodge of Eumæus.
BOOK XV.

NOW had Minerva reach'd those ample plains,
Fam'd for the dance, where Menelaus reigns;
Anxious she flies to great Ulysses' heir,
His instant voyage challeng'd all her care.
Beneath the royal portico display'd,
With Nestor's son Telemachus was lay'd;
In sleep profound the son of Nestor lies;
Not thine, Ulysses! Care unseal'd his eyes:
Restless he griev'd, with various fears oppress,
And all thy fortunes roll'd within his breast.
When, O Telemachus! (the goddess said)
Too long in vain, too widely hast thou stray'd,
Thus leaving careless thy paternal right
The robbers' prize, the prey to lawless might.
On fond pursuits neglectful while you roam,
Ev'n now the hand of rapine sacks the dome.
Hence to Atrides; and his leave implore
To launch thy vessel for thy natal shore;
Fly, whilst thy mother virtuous yet withstands
Her kindred's wishes, and her sire's commands;
Through both Eumachus pursues the dame,
And with the noblest gifts asserts his claim.
Hence therefore, while thy stores thy own remain;
Thou know'st the practice of the female train,
Lost in the children of the present spouse,
They slight the pledges of their former vows;
Their love is always with the lover past;
Still the succeeding flame expels the last.
Let o'er thy house some chosen maid preside,
Till heaven decrees to bless thee in a bride.
But now thy more attentive ears incline,
Observe the warnings of a power divine;
For thee their suares the suitor lords shall lay
In Samos' sands, or straits of Ithaca;
To seize thy life shall lurk the murderous band,
Ere yet thy footsteps press thy native land.
BOOK XV. THE ODYSSEY.

No—sooner far their riot and their last
All-covering earth shall bury deep in dust!
Then distant from the scatter'd islands steer,
Nor let the night retard thy full career;
Thy heavenly guardians shall instruct the gales
To smooth thy passage and supply thy sails:
And when at Ithaca thy labour ends,
Send to the town the vessel with thy friends;
But seek thou first the master of the swine
(For still to thee his loyal thoughts incline);
There pass the night: while he his course pursues
To bring Penelope the wish'd-for news,
That thou, safe sailing from the Pylian strand,
Art comes to bless her in thy native land.

Thus spoke the goddess, and resum'd her flight
To the pure regions of eternal light.
Meanwhile Pisistratus he gently shakes,
And with these words the slumbering youth awakes.
Rise, son of Nestor; for the road prepare,
And join the harness'd coursers to the car.
What cause, he cry'd, can justify our flight,
To tempt the dangers of forbidding night?
Here wait we rather, till approaching day
Shall prompt our speed, and point the ready way.
Nor think of flight before the Spartan king
Shall bid farewell, and bounteous presents bring;
Gifts, which, to distant ages safely stor'd,
The sacred act of friendship shall record.

Thus he. But when the dawn bestreak'd the east,
The king from Helen rose, and sought his guest,
As soon as his approach the hero knew,
The splendid mantle round him first he threw,
Then o'er his ample shoulders whirl the cloak,
Respectful met the monarch, and bespoke.

Hail, great Atrides, favour'd of high Jove!
Let not thy friends in vain for licence move.
Swift let us measure back the watery way,
Nor check our speed, impatient of delay.
If with desire so strong thy bosom glows,
Ill, said the king, should I thy wish oppose;
For oft in others freely I reproach
The ill-timed efforts of officious love;
Who love too much, hate in the like extreme,
And both the golden mean alike condemn.
Alike he thwart's the hospitable end,
Who drives the free, or stays the hasty friend;
True friendships' laws are by this rule express,
Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest.
Yet stay, my friends, and in your chariot take
The noblest presents that our love can make;
Meantime commit us to our women's care,
Some choice domestic viands to prepare;
The traveller, rising from the banquet gay,
Eludes the labours of the tedious way,
Then if a wider course shall rather please
Through spacious Argos and the realms of Greece,
Atrides in his chariot shall attend;
Himself thy convoy to each royal friend;
No prince will let Ulysses' heir remove
Without some pledge, some monument of love:
These will the cauldron, these the tripod give,
From these the well-pair'd mules we shall receive,
Or bowl embossed whose golden figures live.
To whom the youth, for prudence fam'd, reply'd. 100
O monarch, care of Heaven! thy people's pride!
No friend in Ithaca my place supplies,
No powerful hands are there, no watchful eyes:
My stores expos'd and fenceless house demand
The speediest succour from my guardian hand; 105
Lest, in a search too anxious and too vain
Of one lost joy, I lose what yet remain.

His purpose when the generous warrior heard,
He charg'd the household cates to be prepar'd.
Now with the dawn, from his adjoining home,
Was Boethus, Eteoneus come;
Swift as the word he forms the rising blaze,
And o'er the coals the smoking fragments lays.
Meantime the king, his son, and Helen, went
Where the rich wardrobe breathed a costly scent.
The king selected from the glittering rows
A bowl; the prince a silver beaker chose.
The beauteous queen revolv’d with careful eyes
Her various textures of unnumbar’d dyes,
And chose the largest; with no vulgar art
Her own fair hands embroidered every part:
Beneath the rest it lay divinely bright,
Like radiant heesper o’er the gems of night.
Then with each gift they hasten’d to their guest,
And thus the king Ulysses’ heir addract.
Since fix’d are thy resolves, may thundering Jove
With happiest omens thy desires approve?
This silver bowl, whose costly margins shine
Enchas’d with gold, this valu’d gift be thine;
To me this present of Vulcanian frame,
From Sidon’s hospitable monarch came;
To these we now consign the precious load,
The pride of kings, and labour of a god.
Then gave the cup, while Megapenthe brought
The silver vase with living sculpture wrought.
The beauteous queen, advancing next, display’d
The shining veil, and thus endearing said.
Accept, dear youth, this monument of love,
Long since, in better days, by Helen wove:
Safe in thy mother’s care the vesture lay;
To deck thy bride, and grace thy nuptial day.
Meantime may’st thou with happiest speed regain
Thy stately palace, and thy wide domain.
She said, and gave the veil; with grateful look
The prince the variegated present took.
And now, when thro’ the royal dome they pass’d,
High on a throne the king each stranger plac’d.
A golden ewer th’ attendant damsel brings,
Replete with water from the crystal springs;
With copious streams the shining vase supplies
A silver layer of capacious size.
They wash. The tables in fair order spread,
The glittering cannisters are crown’d with bread;
Viands of various kinds allure the taste,
Of choicest sort and savour; rich repast!
Whilst Eteoness portions out the shares,
Atrides’ son the purple draught prepares.
And now (each sated with the genial feast,
And the short rage of thirst and hunger ceas’d)
Ulysses’ son, with his illustrious friend,
The horses join, the polish’d car ascend.
Along the court the fiery steeds rebound,
And the wide portal echoes to the sound.
The king precedes; a bowl with fragrant wine
(Libation destin’d to the powers divine)
His right hand held; before the steeds he stands,
Then, mixt with prayers, he utters these commands.
Farewel, and prosper, youths! let Nestor know
What grateful thoughts still in this bosom glow,
For all the proofs of his paternal care,
Through the long daugers of the ten years’ war.
Ah! doubt not our report (the prince rejoin’d)
Of all the virtues of thy generous mind.
And oh! return’d might we Ulysses meet!
To him thy presents show, thy words repeat:
How will each speech his grateful wonder raise!
How will each gift indulge us in thy praise!
Scarce ended thus the prince, when on the right
Advanc’d the bird of Jove: auspicious sight!
A milk-white fowl his clinching talons bore,
With care domestic pamper’d at the floor.
Peasants in vain with threatening cries pursue,
In solemn speed the bird majestic flew
Full dexter to the car; the prosperous sight
Fill’d every breast with wonder and delight.
But Nestor’s son the cheerful silence broke,
And in these words the Spartan chief bespoke.
Say, if to us the gods these omens send,
Or fates, peculiar to thyself portend?
Whilst yet the monarch pause’d, with doubts opprest,
The beauteous queen reliev’d his labouring breast.
Hear me, she cried, to whom the gods have given
To read this sign, and mystic sense of Heaven.
As thus the plumy sovereign of the air
Left on the mountain’s brow his callow care,
And wander’d through the wide etherial way
To pour his wrath on yon luxurious prey;
BOOK XV.  THE ODYSSEY.

So shall thy godlike father, toss'd in vain
Through all the dangers of the boundless main,
Arrive (or is perchance already come)
From slaughter'd gluttons to release the dome.

Oh! if this promis'd bliss by thundering Jove
(The prince replied) stand fix'd in fate above;
To thee, as to some god, I'll temples raise,
And crown thy altars with the costly blaze.

He said; and, bending o'er his chariot, flung
Athwart the fiery steeds the smarting thong;
The bounding shafts upon the harness play,
Till night descending intercepts the way.

To Diocles at Pheræ, they repair,
Whose boasted sire was sacred Alpheus' heir;
With him all night the youthful strangers stay'd,
Nor found the hospitable rights unpay'd.

But soon as morning from her orient bed
Had ting'd the mountains with her earliest red,
They join'd the steeds, and on the chariot sprung,
The brazen portals in their passage rung.

To Pylos soon they came; when thus begun
To Nestor's heir Ulysses' godlike son:
Let not Pisistratus in vain be prest,
Nor unconsenting hear his friend's request;
His friend by long hereditary claim,
In toils his equal, and in years the same.
No farther from our vessel, I implore,
The coursers drive; but lash them to the shore.

Too long thy father would his friend detain;
I dread his proffer'd kindness urg'd in vain.
The hero paus'd, and ponder'd this request,
While love and duty warr'd within his breast.

At length resolv'd, he turn'd his ready hand,
And lash'd his panting coursers to the strand.
There, while within the poop with care he stor'd
The regal presents of the Spartan lord;
With speed begone (said he); call every mate,
Ere yet to Nestor I the tale relate:
Tis true, the fervour of his generous heart
Brooks no repulse, nor couldst thou soon depart;
Himself will seek thee here, nor wilt thou find,
In words alone, the Pylian monarch kind.
But when, arriv'd, he thy return shall know,
How will his breast with honest fury glow?
This said, the sounding strokes his horses fire,
And soon he reach'd the palace of his size.

Now (cried Telemachus, with speedy care,
Hoist every sail, and every ear prepare.
Swift as the word his willing mates obey,
And seize their seats, impatient for the sea.

Meantime the prince with sacrifice adores
Minerva, and her guardian aid implores;
When lo! a wretch ran breathless to the shore,
New from his crime, and reeking yet with gore.
A seer he was, from great Melampus sprung,
Melampus, who in Pylos flourish'd long,
Till, urg'd by wrongs, a foreign realm he chose,
Far from the hateful cause of all his woes.

Neleus his treasures one long year detained;
As long, he groan'd in Philacus's chains;
Meantime, what anguish, and what rage, combin'd,
For lovely Pero rack'd his labouring mind!
Yet 'scap'd he death; and vengeful of his wrong
To Pylos drove the lowing herds along:
Then (Neleus vanquish'd, and consign'd the fair
To Bias' arms) he sought a foreign air;
Argos the rich for his retreat he chose,
There form'd his empire; there his palace rose.

From him Antiphates and Mantius came:
The first begot Oicleus great in fame,
And he Amphiaraus, immortal name!
The people's saviour, and divinely wise,
Belov'd by Jove, and him who gilds the skies.
Yet short his date of life! by female pride he dies.
From Mantius Clitus, whom Aurora's love
Snatch'd for his beauty to the thrones above;
And Pelpides, on whom Phæbus shone
With fullest rays, Amphiaraus now gone;
In Hyperesia's groves he made abode,
And taught mankind the counsels of the god.
BOOK XV.

THE ODYSSEY.

From him sprung Theoclymenus, who found
(The sacred wine yet foaming on the ground)
Telemachus: whom, as to Heaven he prest
His ardent vows, the stranger thus address.

O thou! that dost thy happy course prepare
With pure libations and with solemn prayer;
By that dread power to whom thy vows are paid;
By all the lives of these; thy own dear head,
Declare sincerely to no foe's demand
Thy name, thy lineage, and paternal land.

Prepare then, said Telemachus, to know
A tale from falsehood free, not free from woe.
From Ithaca, of royal birth, I came,
And great Ulysses (ever honour'd name!)
Was once my sire, though now for ever lost,
In Stygian gloom he-glides a pensive ghost!
Whose fate inquiring through the world we rove;
The last, the wretched proof of filial love.

The stranger then. Nor shall I ought conceal,
But the dire secret of my fate reveal.
Of my own tribe an Argive wretch I slew;
Whose powerful friends the luckless deed pursue
With unrelenting rage, and force from home
The blood-stain'd exile, ever doom'd to roam.
But bear, oh bear me o'er you assure flood;
Receive the suppliant! spare my destin'd blood!

Stranger (replied the prince) securely rest
Affiance'd in our faith; henceforth our guest.

Thus assable, Ulysses' godlike heir
Takes from the stranger's hand the glittering spear:
He climbs the ship, ascends the stern with haste,
And by his side the guest accepted plac'd.
The chief his orders gives: th' obedient band
With due observance wait the chief's command;
With speed the mast they rear, with speed unbind
The spacious sheet, and stretch it to the wind.
Minerva calls; the ready gales obey
With rapid speed to whirl them o'er the sea.

Crunus they pass'd, next Chalcis roll'd away,
When thickening darkness clos'd the doubtful day.
The silver Phæa's glittering rills they lost,
And skimm'd along by Elia's sacred coast,
Then cautious through the rocky reaches wind,
And, turning sudden, shun the death design'd.

Meantime the king, Eumæus, and the rest,
Sate in the cottage, at their rural feast:
The banquet past, and satiate every man,
To try his host, Ulysses thus began.

Yet one night more, my friends, indulge your guest;
The last I purpose in your walls to rest:
To-morrow for myself I must provide,
And only ask your counsel, and a guide;
Patient to roam the street, by hunger led,
And bless the friendly hand that gives me bread.

There in Ulysses' roof I may relate
Ulysses' wanderings to his royal mate;
Or, mingling with the suitors' haughty train,
Not undeserving some support obtain.

Hermes to me his various gifts imparts,
Patron of industry and manual arts:
Few can with me in dextrous works contend,
The pyre to build, the stubborn oak to rend;
To turn the tasteful viand o'er the flame;
Or foam the goblet with a purple stream.
Such are the tasks of men of mean estate,
Whom fortune dooms to serve the rich and great.

Alas! (Eumæus with a sigh rejoin'd)
How sprung a thought so monstrous in thy mind!
If on that godless race thou would'st attend,
Fate owes thee sure a miserable end!

Their wrongs and blasphemies ascend the sky,
And pull descending vengeance from on high.
Not such, my friend, the servants of their feast;
A blooming train in rich embroidery drest,
With earth's whole tribute the bright table bents,
And smiling round celestial youth attends.
Stay then! no eye askance beholds thee here:
Sweet is thy converse to each social ear;
Well pleas'd, and pleasing, in our cottage rest,
Till good Telemachus accepts his guest.
BOOK XV. THE ODYSSEY.

With genial gifts, and change of fair attires,
And safe conveys thee where thy soul desires.

To him the man of woes. O gracious Jove! 360
Reward this stranger's hospitable love!
Who knows the son of sorrow to relieve,
Cheers the sad heart, nor lets affliction grieve.
Of all the ills unhappy mortals know,
A life of wanderings is the greatest woe:
On all their weary ways wait care and pain,
And pine, and penury, a meagre train.
To such a man since harbour you afford,
Relate the farther fortunes of your lord;
What cares his mother's tender breast engage,
And sire forsaken on the verge of age;
Beneath the sun prolong they yet their breath,
Or range the house of darkness and of death?

To whom the swain. Attend what you inquire;
Laërtes lives, the miserable sire,
Lives, but implores of every power to lay
The burden down, and wishes for the day.
Torn from his offspring in the eve of life,
Torn from th' embraces of his tender wife,
Sole, and all comfortless, he wastes away

Old age, untimely posting ere his day.
She too, sed mother, for Ulysses lost
Pin'd out her bloom, and vanish'd to a ghost
(So dire a fate, ye righteous gods! avert,
From every friendly, every feeling heart!)
While yet she was, though clouded o'er with grief,
Her pleasing converse minister'd relief;
With Ctimene, her youngest daughter, bred,
One roof contain'd us, and one table fed.

But when the softly-stealing pace of time
Crept on from childhood into youthful prime,
To Samos' isle she sent the wedded pair;
Me to the fields, to tend the rural care;
Array'd in garments her own hands had wove,
Nor less the darling object of her love.

Her hapless death my brighter days o'ercast,
Yet Providence deserts me not at last;

L 2
My present labours food and drink procure,
And more, the pleasure to relieve the poor.
Small is the comfort from the queen to hear
Unwelcome news, or vex the royal ear;
Blank and discountenanc'd the servants stand,
Nor dare to question where the proud command:
No profit springs beneath usurping powers;
Want feeds not there, where luxury devours,
Nor harbours charity where riot reigns;
Proud are the lords, and wretched are the swains.

The suffering chief at this began to melt;
And, Oh Eumæus! thou (he cries), has felt
The spite of fortune too! her cruel hand
Snatch'd thee an infant from thy native land!
Snatch'd from thy parents' arms, thy parents' eyes,
To early wants! a man of miseries!
Thy whole sad story, from its first declare:
Sunk the fair city by the rage of war,
Where once thy parents dwelt? or did they keep,
In humbler life, the lowing herds and sheep?
So left perhaps to tend the fleecey train,
Rude pirates seiz'd, and shipp'd thee o'er the main?
Doom'd a fair prize to grace some prince's board,
The worthy purchase of a foreign lord.

If then my fortunes can delight my friend,
A story fruitful of events attend;
Another's sorrow may thy ear enjoy,
And wine the lengthen'd intervals employ.
Long nights the now declining year bestows;
A part we consecrate to soft repose,
A part in pleasing talk we entertain;
For too much rest itself becomes a pain.
Let those, whom sleep invites, the call obey,
Their cares resuming with the dawning day:
Here let us feast, and to the feast be join'd
Discourse, the sweeter banquet of the mind;
Review the series of our lives, and taste
The melancholy joy of evils past:
For he who much has suffer'd, much will know;
And pleas'd remembrance builds delight on woe,
Above Ortygia lies an isle of fame,
Far hence remote, and Syria is the name
(There curious eyes inscrib'd with wonder trace 440
The sun's diurnal, and his annual race);
Not large, but fruitful; stor'd with grass, to keep
The bellowing oxen and the bleating sheep?
Her sloping hills the mantling vines adorn,
And her rich valleys wave with golden corn, 445
No want, no famine, the glad natives know,
Nor sink by sickness to the shades below;
But when a length of years unnerves the strong,
Apollo comes, and Cynthia comes along,
They bend the silver bow with tender skill, 450
And, void of pain, the silent arrows kill.
Two equal tribes this fertile land divide,
Where two fair cities rise with equal pride,
But both in constant peace one prince obey,
And Ctesius there, my father, holds the sway. 455
Freighted, it seems, with toys of every sort
A ship of Sidon anchor'd in our port;
What time it chanc'd the palace entertain'd,
Skill'd in rich works, a woman of their land:
This nymph, where anchor'd the Phœnician train, 460
To wash her robes descending to the main,
A smooth-tongu'd sailor won her to his mind
(For love deceives the best of womankind).
A sudden trust from sudden liking grew;
She told her name, her race, and all she knew. 465
I too (she cry'd) from glorious Sidon came,
My father Arybas, of wealthy fame:
But, snatch'd by pirates from my native place,
The Taphians sold me to this man's embrace.
Haste then (the false designing youth reply'd), 470
Haste to thy country; love shall be thy guide;
Haste to thy father's house, thy father's breast,
For still he lives, and lives with riches blest.
"Swear first (she cry'd), ye sailors! to restore
"A wretch in safety to her native shore." 475
Swift as she ask'd, the ready sailors swore.
She then proceeds: Now let our compact made
Be nor by signal nor by word betray'd,
Nor near me any of your crew descry’d,
By road frequented, or by fountain side.
Be silence still our guard. The monarch’s spies
(For watchful age is ready to surmise)
Are still at hand; and this, reveal’d, must be
Death to yourselves, eternal chains to me.
Your vessel loaded, and your traffic past,
Dispatch a wary messenger with haste:
Then gold and costly treasures will I bring,
And more, the infant-offspring of the king.
Him; child-like wandering forth, I’ll lead away
(A noble prise !) and to your ship convey.
Thick spoke the dame, and homeward took the road.

A year they traffic, and their vessel load,
Their stores complete, and ready now to weigh,
A spy was sent their summons to convey:
An artist to my father’s palace came,
With gold and amber chains, elaborate frame:
Each female eye the glittering links employ,
They turn, review, they cheapen every toy.
He took th’ occasion, as they stood intent,
Gave her the sign, and to his vessel went.
She straight pursu’d, and seiz’d my willing arm;
I follow’d smiling, innocent of harm.
Three golden goblets in the porch she found
(The guests not enter’d, but the table crown’d);
Hid in her fraudulent bosom these she bore:
Now set the sun, and darken’d all the shore.
Arriving then, where tilting on the tides
Prepar’d to launch the freighted vessel rides;
Aboard they heave us, mount their decks, and sweep
With level oar along the glassy deep.
Six calm days, and six smooth nights we sail,
And constant Jove supply’d the gentle gale.
The seventh, the fraudulent wretch (no cause described),
Touch’d by Diana’s vengeful arrow, died.
Down dropt the caitiff-corse, a worthless load,
Down to the deep; there roll’d, the future food
Of fierce sea-wolves, and monsters of the flood.
BOOK XV. THE ODYSSEY.

An helpless infant, I remain'd behind;  523
Thence borne to Ithaca by wave and wind;  524
Sold to Laërtes by divine command,  524
And now adopted to a foreign land.

To him the king. Reciting thus thy cares,
My secret soul in all thy sorrows shares;
But one choice blessing (such is Jove's high will)
Has sweeten'd all thy bitter draught of ill:
Torn from thy country to no hapless end,
The gods have, in a master, given a friend.
Whatever frugal nature needs is thine
(For she needs little), daily bread and wine,
While I, so many wanderings past, and woes,
Live but on what thy poverty bestows.

So past in pleasing dialogue away
The night; then down to short repose they lay;
Till radiant rose the messenger of day.
While in the port of Ithaca, the band
Of young Telemachus approach'd the land;
Their sails they loos'd, they lash'd the mast aside,
And cast their anchors, and the cables tied:
Then, on the breezy shore, descending, join
In grateful banquet o'er the rosy wine.

When thus the prince: Now each his course pursue;
I to the fields, and to the city you,
Long absent hence, I dedicate this day
My swains to visit, and the works survey.
Expect me with the morn, to pay the skies
Our debt of safe return in feast and sacrifice.

Then Theoclymenus. But who shall lend,
Meantime, protection to thy stranger friend?
Straight to the queen and palace shall I fly,
Or yet more distant, to some lord apply?

The prince return'd. Renown'd in days of yore
Has stood our father's hospitable door;
No other roof a stranger should receive,
Nor other hands than ours the welcome give.
But in my absence nought fills the place,
Nor bears the modest queen a stranger's face;
From noiseful revel far remote she flies,
But rarely seen, or seen with weeping eyes.
No—let Eurymachus receive my guest,
Of nature courteous, and by far the best; 560
He wooes the queen with more respectful flame,
And emulates her former husband’s fame:
With what success, 'tis Jove's alone to know,
And the hop'd nuptials turn'd to joy or woe.

Thus speaking, on the right up-soar'd in air 565
The hawk, Apollo's swift-wing'd messenger;
His deathful pounces tore a trembling dove;
The clotted feathers, scatter'd from above,
Between the hero and the vessel pour
Thick plumage, mingled with a sanguine shower. 570

Th' observing augur took the prince aside,
Seiz'd by the hand, and thus prophetic cry'd.
Yon bird that dexter cuts th' aerial road,
Rose ominous, nor flies without a god:
No race but thine shall Ithaca obey, 575
To thine, for ages, Heaven decrees the sway.

Succeed the omen, gods! (the youth rejoin'd);
Soon shall my bounties speak a grateful mind,
And soon each envied happiness attend
The man, who calls Telemachus his friend. 580

Then to Peiræus—Thou whom time has prov'd
A faithful servant, by the prince belov'd!
Till we returning shall our guest demand,
Accept this charge with honour, at our hand.

To this Peiræus: Joyful I obey, 585
Well pleas'd the hospitable rites to pay.
The presence of thy guest shall best reward
(If long thy stay) the absence of my lord.

With that, their anchors he commands to weigh,
Mount the tall bark, and launch into the sea. 590
All with obedient haste forsake the shores,
And plac'd in order, spread their equal oars.
Then from the deck the prince his sandals takes;
Pois'd in his hand the pointed javelin shakes.
They part; while, lessening from the hero's view, 595
Swift to the town the well-row'd galley flew:
The hero trod the margin of the main,
And reach'd the mansion of his faithful swain.
ARGUMENT.

The Discovery of Ulysses to Telemachus.

Telemachus arriving at the lodge of Eumæus sends him to carry Penelope the news of his return. Minerva appearing to Ulysses, commands him to discover himself to his son. The princes who had lain in ambush to intercept Telemachus in his way, their project being defeated, return to Ithaca.
BOOK XVI.

SOON as the morning blush'd-along the plains,
   Ulysses, and the monarch of the swains,
Awake the sleeping fires, their meal prepare,
And forth to pasture send the bristly care.
The prince's near approach the dogs descry,
And fawning round his feet confess their joy.
Their gentle blandishment the king survey'd,
Heard his resounding step, and instant said:
Some well-known friend (Eumæus) bends this way;
His steps I hear; the dogs familiar play.

While yet he spoke, the prince advancing drew
Nigh to the lodge, and now appear'd in view.
Transported from his seat Eumæus sprung,
Dropp'd the full bowl, and round his bosom hung;
Kissing his cheek, his hand, while from his eye
The tears rain'd copious in a shower of joy,
As some fond sire who ten long winters grieves,
From foreign climes an only son receives
(Child of his age), with strong paternal joy
Forward he springs, and clasps the favourite boy: 20
So round the youth his arms Eumæus spread,
As if the grave had given him from the dead.

And is it thou! my ever-dear delight!
Oh art thou come to bless my longing sight!
Never, I never hop'd to view this day,
When o'er the waves you plough'd the desperate way.
Enter, my child! Beyond my hopes restor'd,
O give these eyes to feast upon their lord.
Enter, oh seldom seen! for lawless powers
Too much detain thee from these sylvan bowers. 30

The prince reply'd, Eumæus, I obey;
To seek thee, friend, I hither took my way.
But say, if in the court the queen reside,
Severely chaste, or if commenc'd a bride?
Thus he; and thus the monarch of the swains: 35
Severely chaste Penelope remains;
But, lost to every joy, she wastes the day
In tedious cares, and weeps the night away.
BOOK XVI.  THE ODYSSEY.

He ended (and receiving as they pass
The javelin, pointed with a star of brass),
They reach'd the dome; the dome with marble shin'd.
His seat Ulysses to the prince resign'd.
Not so (exclaims the prince with decent grace):
For me, this house shall find an humbler place:
To usurp the honours due to silver hairs
And reverend strangers, modest youth forbears.
Instant the swain the spoils of beasts supplies,
And bids the rural throne with osiers rise.
There sate the prince: the feast Eumæus spread,
And heap'd the shining cannisters with bread.
Thick o'er the board the plenteous viands lay,
The frugal remnants of the former day.
Then in a bowl he tempers generous wines,
Around whose verge a mimic ivy twines.
And now, the rage of thirst and hunger fled,
Thus young Ulysses to Eumæus said.

Whence, father, from what shore this stranger, say!
What vessel bore him o'er the watery way?
To human step our land impervious lies,
And round the coast circumfluent oceans rise.

The swain returns. A tale of sorrows hear:
In spacious Crete he drew his natal air,
Long doom'd to wander o'er the land and main,
For Heaven has wove his thread of life with pain.
Half breathless 'scaping to the land he flew
From Thesprot mariners, a murderous crew.
To thee, my son, the suppliant I resign;
I gave him my protection, grant him thine.

Hard task, he cries, thy virtue gives thy friend,
Willing to aid, unable to defend.
Can strangers safely in the court reside,
Midat the swell'd insolence of lust and pride?
Ev'n I unsafe: the queen in doubt to wed,
Or pay due honours to the nuptial bed?
Perhaps she weds regardless of her fame,
Deaf to the mighty Ulyssean name.
However, stranger! from our grace receive
Such honours as befit a prince to give;
Sandals, a sword and robes, respect to prove,
And safe to seat with ornaments of love.
Till then, thy guest amid the rural train,
Far from the court, from danger far, detain.
Tis mine with food the hungry to supply,
And clothe the naked from th' inclement sky.
Here dwell in safety from th' suitors' wrongs,
And the rude insults of ungovern'd tongues.
For shouldst thou suffer, powerless to relieve,
I must behold it, and can only grieve.
The brave encompass'd by an hostile train,
O'erpower'd by numbers, is but brave in vain.
To whom, while anger in his bosom glows,
With warmth replies the man of mighty woes:
Since audience mild is deign'd, permit my tongue
At once to pity and resent thy wrong.
My heart weeps blood to see a soul so brave
Live to base insolence of power a slave.
But tell me, dost thou, prince, dost thou behold,
And hear, their midnight revels uncontrol'd?
Say, do thy subjects in bold faction rise,
Or priests in fabled oracles advise?
Or are thy brothers, who should aid thy power,
Turn'd mean deserters in the needful hour?
O that I were from great Ulysses sprung,
Or that these wither'd nerves like thine were strung?
Or, Heavens! might he return! (and soon appear
He shall, I trust; a hero scorns despair):
Might he return, I yield my life a prey
To my worst foe, if that avenging day
Be not their last: but should I lose my life
Oppress'd by numbers in the glorious strife,
I choose the nobler part, and yield my breath,
Rather than bear dishonour, worse than death;
Than see the hand of violence invade
The reverend stranger, and the spotless maid;
Than see the wealth of kings consum'd in waste,
The drunkards revel, and the gluttons feast.
Thus he, with anger flashing from his eye;
Sincere the youthful hero made reply:
BOOK XVI.  THE ODYSSEY.

Nor leagu'd in factions arms my subjects rise,
Nor priests in fabled oracles advise;
Nor are my brothers, who should aid my power,
Turn'd mean deserters in the needful hour.
Ah me! I boast no brother; heaven's dread king
Gives from our stock an only branch to spring:
Alone Laërtes reign'd Arcesius' heir,
Alone Ulysses drew the vital air,
And I alone the bed commubial grace'd,
An unblest offspring of a sire unblest!
Each neighbouring realm, conducive to our woe,
Sends forth her peers, and every peer a foe;
The court proud Samos and Dulichium fills,
And lofty Zacynth crown'd with shady hills,
Ev'n Ithaca and all her lords invade
Th' imperial sceptre, and the regal bed:
The queen, averse to love, yet aw'd by power,
Seems half to yield, yet flies the bridal hour:
Meantime their licence uncontroul'd I bear;
Ev'n now they envy me the vital air:
But Heaven will sure revenge, and gods there are.

But go! Eumaeus! to the queen impart
Our safe return, and ease a mother's heart.
Yet secret go; for numerous are my foes,
And here at least I may in peace repose.
To whom the swains. I hear, and I obey:
But old Laërtes weeps his life away,
And deems thee lost: shall I my speed employ
To bless his age; a messenger of joy?
The mournful hour that tore his son away
Sent the sad sire in solitude to stray;
Yet busied with his slaves, to ease his woe,
He drest the vine, and bade the garden blow,
Nor food nor wine refus'd, but since the day
That you to Pylos plough'd the watery way,
Nor wine nor food he tastes; but sunk in woes,
Wild springs the vine, no more the garden blows:
Shut from the walks of men, to pleasure lost,
Pensive and pale he wanders, half a ghost.
Wretched old man! (with tears the prince returns).
Yet cease to go—what man so blest but mourns?
Were every wish indulg'd by favouring skies,
This hour should give Ulysses to my eyes;
But to the queen with speed dispatchful bear
Our safe return, and back with speed repair;
And let some handmaid of her train resort
To good Laërtes in his rural court.

While yet he spoke, impatient of delay,
He brac'd his sandals on, and strode away:
Then from the heavens the martial goddess flies
Through the wide fields of air, and cleaves the skies:
In form, a virgin in soft beauty's bloom,
Skill'd in th' illustrious labours of the loom.
Alone to Ithaca she stood display'd,
But unapparent as a viewless shade
Escap'd Telemachus, (the powers above,
Seen or unseen, o'er earth at pleasure move):
The dogs intelligent confess'd the tread
Of power divine, and howling, trembling fled.
The goddess, beckoning, waves her deathless hands:
Dauntless the king before the goddess stands.

Then why (she said), O favour'd of the skies! Why to thy godlike son this long disguise?
Stand forth reveal'd; with him thy cares employ
Against thy foes; be valiant, and destroy!
Lo I descend in that avenging hour,
To combat by thy side, thy guardian power.

She said, and o'er him waves her wand of gold:
Imperial robes his manly limbs infold;
At once with grace divine his frame improves;
At once with majesty enlarg'd he moves;
Youth flush'd his reddening cheek, and from his brows
A length of hair in sable ringlets flows;
His blackening chin receives a deeper shade:
Then from his eyes upsprung the warrior-maid.

The hero re-ascends: the prince o'eraw'd
Scarce lifts his eyes, and bows as to a god.
Then with surprise (surprise chastis'd by fears)
How art thou chang'd! (he cry'd) —a god appears!
Far other vests thy limbs majestic grace,
Far other glories lighten from thy face!
BOOK XVI.  THE ODYSSEY.

If heaven be thy abode, with pious care
Lo! I the ready sacrifice prepare:
Lo! gifts of labour'd gold adorn thy shrine,
To win thy grace: O save us, power divine!

Few are my days, Ulysses made reply,
Nor I, alas! descendant of the sky.
I am thy father. O my son! my son!
That father, for whose sake thy days have run
One scene of woe; to endless cares consign'd,
And outrag'd by the wrongs of base mankind.

Then rushing to his arms, he kiss'd his boy
With the strong raptures of a parent's joy.
Tears bathe his cheek, and tears the ground bedew:
He strain'd him close, as to his breast he grew.
Ah me! (exclaims the prince with fond desire)
Thou art not—no, thou canst not be my sire.

Heaven such illusion only can impose,
By the false joy to aggravate my woes.
Who but a god can change the general doom,
And give to wither'd age a youthful bloom?
Late, worn with years, in weeds obscene you trod;
Now, cloth'd in majesty, you move a god!

Forbear, he cry'd; for heaven reserve that name,
Give to thy father but a father's claim:
Other Ulysses shalt thou never see,
I am Ulysses, I (my son) am he.

Twice ten sad years o'er earth and ocean tost,
'Tis given at length to view my native coast.
Pallas, unconquer'd maid, my frame surrounds
With grace divine, her power admits no bounds:
She o'er my limbs old age and wrinkles shed;
Now strong as youth, magnificent I tread.
The gods with ease frail man depress or raise,
Exalt the lowly, or the proud debase.

He spoke, and sate. The prince with transport flew,
Hung round his neck, while tears his cheek bedew:
Nor less the father pour'd a social flood;
They wept abundant, and they wept aloud.
As the bold eagle with fierce sorrow stung,
Or parent vulture, mourns her ravish'd young;
They cry, they scream, their unflinched brood a prey
To some rude churl, and borne by stealth away: 241
So they aloud; and tears in tides had run,
Their grief unfinish'd with the setting sun;
But checking the full torrent in its flow,
The prince thus interrupts the solemn woe. 245
What ship transported thee, O father, say,
And what bless'd bands have oar'd thee on the way?
All, all (Ulysses instant made reply)
I tell thee all, my child, my only joy!
Phaeacians bore me to the port assign'd,
A nation ever to the stranger kind;
Wrapt in th' embrace of sleep, the faithful train
O'er seas convey'd me to my native reign:
Embroider'd vestures, gold, and brases, are laid
Conceal'd in caverns in the sylvan shade. 255
Hither, intent the rival rout to slay,
And plan the scene of death, I bend my way;
So Pallas wills—but thou, my son, explain
The names and numbers of th' audacious train;
'Tis mine to judge if better to employ
Assistant force, or singly to destroy.
O'er earth (returns the prince) resounds thy name,
Thy well-tried wisdom, and thy martial fame,
Yet at thy words I start, in wonder lost;
Can we engage, not decades, but an host? 265
Can we alone in furious battle stand,
Against that numerous and determin'd band?
Hear then their numbers: from Dulichium came
Twice twenty-six, all peers of mighty name,
Six are their menial train: twice twelve the boast
Of Samos; twenty from Zacynthus' coast?
And twelve our country's pride: to these belong
Medon and Phemius skill'd in heavenly song,
Two sewers from day to day the revels wait,
Exact of taste, and serve the feast in state.
With such a foe th' unequal fight to try,
Were by false courage unreven'd to die.
Then what assistant powers you boast, relate,
Ere yet we mingle in the stern debate.
BOOK XVI. THE ODYSSEY.

Mark well my voice, Ulysses straight replies: 280
What need of aids, if favour'd by the skies?
If shielded to the dreadful fight we move,
By mighty Pallas, and by thundering Jove?
Sufficient they (Telemachus rejoin'd)
Against the banded powers of all mankind: 285
They, high enthron'd above the rolling clouds,
Wither the strength of man, and awe the gods.

Such aids expect, he cries, when strong in might
We rise terrific to the task of fight.
But thou, when morn salutes th' aerial plain, 290
The court revisit and the lawless train:
Me thither in disguise Eumæus leads,
An aged mendicant in tatter'd weeds.
There, if base scorns insult my reverend age;
Bear it, my son! repress thy rising rage.

If outrag'd, cease that outrage to repel;
Bear it, my son! bowser thy heart rebel.
Yet strive by prayer and counsel to restrain
Their lawless insults, though thou strive in vain;
For wicked ears are deaf to wisdom's call,
And vengeance strikes whom heaven has doom'd to fall.

Once more attend: when she whose power inspires
The thinking mind, my soul to vengeance fires;
I give the sign: that instant, from beneath,
Aloft convey the instruments of death,
Armour and arms; and if mistrust arise,
Thus veil the truth in plausible disguise:

"These glittering weapons, ere he sail'd to Troy,
"Ulysses view'd with stern heroic joy;
"Then, beaming o'er th' illumin'd wall they shone;
"Now dust dishonours, all their lustre gone."

"I bear them hence (so Jove my soul inspires),
"From the pollution of the fuming fires;
"Lest when the bowl inflames, in vengeful mood
"Ye rush to arms, and stain the feast with blood:
"Oft ready swords in lackless hour incite
"The hand of wrath, and arm it for the fight."

* Minerva.
Such be the plea, and by the plea deceive:
For Jove infatuates all, and all believe.
Yet leave for each of us a sword to wield,
A pointed javelin, and a fencible shield.
But by my blood that in thy bosom glows,
By that regard a son his father owes;
The secret that thy father lives, retain
Lock'd in thy bosom from the household train;
Hide it from all; ev'n from Eumæus hide,
From my dear father, and my dearer bride.
One care remains, to note the loyal few
Whose faith yet lasts among the menial crew;
And, noting, ere we rise in vengeance, prove
Who loves his prince; for sure you merit love.

To whom the youth: to emulate I aim
The brave and wise, and my great father's fame.
But re-consider, since the wisest err,
Vengeance resolv'd, 'tis dangerous to defer.

What length of time must we consume in vain,
Too curious to explore the menial train?
While the proud foes, industrious to destroy
Thy wealth, in riot the delay enjoy.

Suffice it in this exigence alone
To mark the damsels that attend the throne:
Dispers'd the youth reside; their faith to prove
Jove grants henceforth, if thou hast spoke from Jove.

While in debate they waste the hours away,
Th' associates of the prince repass'd the bay:
With speed they guide the vessel to the shores;
With speed debarking land the naval stores:
Then, faithful to their charge, to Clytius bear,
And trust the presents to his friendly care.
Swift to the queen a herald flies t' impart
Her son's return, and ease a parent's heart;
Lest a sad prey to ever-musing cares,
Pale grief destroy what time awhile forbears.

Th' uncautious herald with impatience burns,
And cries aloud; Thy son, oh queen, returns:
Eumæus sage approach'd th' imperial throne,
And breath'd his mandate to her ear alone,
BOOK XVI. THE ODYSSEY.

Then measur'd back the way—The suitor band,
Stung to the soul, abash'd, confounded stand;
And issuing from the dome, before the gate,
With clouded looks, a pale assembly sate.

At length Eurymachus. Our hopes are vain;
Telemachus in triumph sails the main.
Haste, rear the mast, the swelling shroud display;
Haste, to our ambush'd friends the news convey!

Scarce had he spoke, when, turning to the strand,
Amphinomus survey'd th' associate band;
Full to the bay within the winding shores
With gather'd sails they stood, and lifted oars.
O friends! he cry'd, elate with rising joy,
See to the port secure the vessel fly!
Some god has told them, or themselves survey
The bark escap'd; and measure back their way.

Swift at the word descending to the shores,
They moor the vessel and unlaide the stores:
Then moving from the strand, apart they sate,
And full and frequent form'd a dire debate.

Lives then the boy? he lives (Antinous cries),
The care of gods and favourite of the skies.
All night we watch'd, till with her orient wheels
Aurora flam'd above the eastern hills,
And from the lofty brow of rocks by day
Took in the ocean with a broad survey:
Yet safe he sails, the powers celestial give
To shun the hidden snares of death, and live.
But die he shall, and thus condemn'd to bleed,
Be now the scene of instant death decreed.
Hope ye success? undaunted crush the foe.
Is he not wise? know this, and strike the blow.
Wait ye, till he to arms in council draws
The Greeks, averse too justly to our cause?
Strike, ere, the states conven'd, the foe betray
Our murderous ambush on the watery way.
Or choose ye vagrant from their rage to fly
Outcasts of earth, to breathe an unknown sky?
The brave prevent misfortune; then be brave,
And bury future danger in his grave.
Returns he? ambusc'd we'll his walk invade,
Or where he hides in solitude and shade;
And give the palace to the queen a dower,
Or him she blesses in the bridal hour.
But if submissive you resign the sway,
Slaves to a boy; go, flatter and obey.
Retire we instant to our native reign,
Nor be the wealth of kings consum'd in vain;
Then wed whom choice approves: the queen be given
To some blest prince, the prince decreed by heaven.
Abash'd, the suitor train his voice attends;
Till from his throne Amphinomus ascends,
Who o'er Dulichium stretch'd his spacious reign,
A land of plenty, bless'd with every grain:
Chief of the numbers who the queen address,
And though displeasing, yet displeasing least.
Soft were his words; his actions wisdom sway'd;
Graceful awhile he paus'd, then mildly said:
O friends, forbear! and be the thought withstood;
'Tis horrible to shed imperial blood!
Consult we first th' all-seeing powers above,
And the sure oracles of righteous Jove.
If they assent, ev'n by this hand he dies;
If they forbid, I war not with the skies.
He said: the rival train his voice approv'd,
And rising instant to the palace mov'd.
Arriv'd, with wild tumultuous noise they sate,
Recumbent on the shining thrones of state.
Then Medon, conscious of their dire debates,
The murderous counsel to the queen relates.
Touch'd at the dreadful story she descends:
Her hasty steps a damsel-train attends.
Full where the dome its shining valves expands, 430
Sudden before the rival powers she stands;
And, veiling, decent, with a modest shade
Her cheek, indignant to Antinous said:
O void of faith! of all bad men the worst!
Renown'd for wisdom, by th' abuse accurst'd!
435
Mistaken name proclaims thy generous mind!
Thy deeds denote thee of the basest kind.
BOOK XVI. THE ODYSSEY.

Wretch! to destroy a prince that friendship gives,
While in his guest his murder he receives;
Nor dread superior Jove, to whom belong
The cause of suppliants, and revenge of wrong.
Hast thou forgot (ingrateful as thou art)
Who sav'd thy father with a friendly part?
Lawless he ravag'd with his martial powers
The Taphian pirates on Theopropia's shores;
Enrag'd, his life, his treasure they demands;
Ulysses sav'd him from th' avenger's hand.
And wouldst thou evil for his good repay?
His bad dishonour, and his house betray?
Afflict his queen, and with a murderous hand
Destroy his hear?-but cease, 'tis J's command.
For hence those fears, (Eurymachus reply'd),
O prudent princess! bid thy soul confide.
Breathes there a man who dares that hero slay,
While I behold the golden light of day?
No: by the righteous powers of heaven I swear,
His blood in vengeance smokes upon my spear.
Ulysses, when my infant days I led,
With wine suffic'd me, and with dainties fed:
My generous soul abhors th' ungrateful part,
And my friend's son lives dearest to my heart.
Then fear no mortal arm; if heaven destroy,
We must resign: for man is born to die.
Thus smooth he ended, yet his death conspir'd:
Then sorrowing, with sad step the queen retir'd.
With streaming eyes, all comfortless deplor'd,
Touch'd with the dear remembrance of her lord:
Nor ceas'd till Pallas bid her sorrows fly,
And in soft slumber seal'd her flowing eye.

And now Eumæus, at the evening hour,
Came late returning to his sylvan bower.
Ulysses and his son had dress'd with art
A yearling boar, and gave the gods their part,
Holy repast! That instant from the skies
The martial goddess to Ulysses flies:
She waves her golden wand, and re-assumes
From every feature, every grace that blooms;
At once his vastures change; at once she sheds
Age o'er his limbs, that tremble as he treads.
Lest to the queen the swain with transport fly, 480
Unable to contain th' unruly joy.
When near he drew, the prince breaks forth: Proclaim
What tidings, friend? what speaks the voice of fame?
Say, if the suitors measure back the main,
Or still in ambush thirst for blood in vain? 485

Whether, he cries, they measure back the flood,
Or still in ambush thirst in vain for blood,
Escap'd my care: where lawless suitors sway,
Thy mandate borne, my soul disdain'd to stay.
But from th' Hermesian height I cast a view, 490
Where to the port a bark high-bounding flew;
Her freight a shining band: with martial air
Each pois'd his shield, and each advanc'd his spear;
And, if aright these searching eyes survey,
Th' eluded suitors stem the watery way.

The prince, well pleas'd to disappoint their wiles,
Steals on his sire a glance, and secret smiles.
And now, a short repast prepar'd, they fed
Till the keen rage of craving hunger fled:
Then to repose withdrawn, apart they lay,
And in soft sleep forgot the cares of day.
ARGUMENT.

Telemachus returning to the city relates to Penelope the sum of his travels. Ulysses is conducted by Eumæus to the palace, where his old dog Argus acknowledges his master, after an absence of twenty years, and dies with joy. Eumæus returns into the country, and Ulysses remains among the suitors, whose behaviour is described.
BOOK XVII.

SOON as Aurora, daughter of the dawn,
Sprinkled with roseate light the dewy lawn;
In haste the prince arose, prepar'd to part;
His hand impatient grasps the pointed dart;
Fair on his feet the polish'd sandals shine,
And thus he greets the master of the swine.

My friend, adieu; let this short stay suffice;
I haste to meet my mother's longing eyes;
And end her tears, her sorrows, and her sighs.
But thou, attentive, what we order heed:
This hapless stranger to the city lead:
By public bounty let him there be fed,
And bless the hand that stretches forth the bread.
To wipe the tears from all afflicted eyes,
My will may covet but my power denies.
If this raise anger in the stranger's thought,
The pain of anger punishes the fault:
The very truth I undisguis'd declare;
For what so easy as to be sincere?

To this Ulysses. What the prince requires
Of swift removal seconds my desires.
To want like mine the peopled town can yield
More hopes of comfort than the lonely field.
Nor fits my age to till the labour'd lands,
Or stoop to tasks a rural lord demands.

Adieu! but since this ragged garb can bear
So ill th' inclemencies of morning air,
A few hours space permit me here to stay;
My steps Eumæus shall to town convey,
With riper beams when Phœbus warms the day.

Thus he: nor aught Telemachus reply'd,
But left the mansion with a lofty stride:
Schemes of revenge his pondering breast elate,
Revolving deep the suitors' sudden fate.
Arriving now before th' imperial hall,
He props his spear against the pillar'd wall;
Then like a lion o'er the threshold bounds;
The marble pavement with his step resounds!
His eye first glance'd where Euryclea spreads
With furry spoils o'th' beasts the splendid bed:
She saw, she wept, she ran with eager pace,
And reached her master with a long embrace.
All crowded round the family appears
With wild entreatments, and ecstatic tears.
Swift from above descends the royal fair
(Her beauteous cheeks the blush of Venus wear,
Chasten'd with coy Diana's pensive air);
Hangs o'er her son, in his embraces dies;
Baths kisses on his neck, his face, his eyes;
Few words she spoke, though much she had to say:
And scarce those few, for tears, could force their way.

Light of my eyes! he comes! unhop'd for joy!
Has Heaven from Pylos brought my lovely boy?
Sonsnatch'd from all our care!—Tell, hast thou known
Thy father's fate, and tell me all thy own.

Oh dearest! most rever'd of womankind!
Cease with those tears to melt a manly mind
(Reply'd the prince)! nor be our fates deplor'd,
From death and treason to thy arms restor'd.
Go bathe, and, rob'd in white, ascend the towers;
With all thy handmaids thank th' immortal powers;
To every god vow hecatombs to bleed,
And call Jove's vengeance on their guilty deed.

While to th' assembled council I repair;
A stranger sent by heaven attends me there;
My new accepted guest I haste to find,
Now to Peirus's honour'd charge consign'd.

The matron heark'd, nor was his word in vain.
She bath'd; and robb'd in white with all her train,
To every god vow'd hecatombs to bleed,
And call'd Jove's vengeance on the guilty deed.

Arm'd with his lance, the prince then pass'd the gate;
Two dogs behind, a faithful guard, await;
Pallas his form with grace divine improves;
The gasping crowd admires him as he moves:
Him, gathering round, the haughty suitors greet
With semblance fair, but inward deep defect.
Their false addresses generous he denied,
Pass'd on, and sate by faithful Mentor's side;
With Antiphus, and Halitheres sage (His father's counsellors, revered for age).
Of his own fortunes, and Ulysses' fame,
Much ask'd the seniors; till Peiræus came.
The stranger-guest pursu'd him close behind;
Whom when Telemachus beheld, he join'd.
He (when Peiræus ask'd for slaves to bring
The gifts and treasures of the Spartan king)
Thus thoughtful answer'd: Those we shall not move,
Dark and unconscious of the will of Jove:
We know not yet the full event of all:
Stabb'd in his palace if your prince must fall,
Us, and our house, if treason must o'erthrow,
Better a friend possess them than a foe;
If death to these, and vengeance Heaven decree,
Riches are welcome then, not else, to me.
Till then, retain the gifts.—The hero said,
And in his hand the willing stranger led.
Then disarray'd, the shining bath they sought
(With ungents smooth) of polish'd marble wrought;
Obedient handmaids with assistant toil
Supply the limpid wave, and fragrant oil:
Then o'er their limbs refulgent robes they threw,
And fresh from bathing to their seats withdrew.
The golden, ever a nymph attendant brings,
Replenish'd from the pure translucent springs;
With copious streams that golden ewer supplies
A silver laver of capacious size.
They wash: the table, in fair order spread,
Is pil'd with viands and the strength of bread.
Full opposite, before the folding-gate,
The pensive mother sits in humble state;
Lowly she sate, and with dejected view
The fleecy threads her ivory fingers drew.
The prince and stranger shar'd the genial feast,
Till now the rage of thirst and hunger cease.
BOOK XXII. THE ODYSSEY. 277

Doubtful, or with his staff to strike him dead, 276
Or greet the pavement with his worthless head.
Short was that doubt, to quell his rage, unru'd,
The hero stood self-conquer'd, and endar'd.
But hateful of the wretch, Humes hear'd 239
His hands objecting, and this prayer conceiv'd.
Daughters of Jove! who from the etherial bowers
Descend to swell the springs, and feed the flowers?
Nymphs of this fountain! to whose sacred names
Our rural victim mount, in blazing flames! 226
To whom Ulysses' piety preserv'd
The yearly firstlings of his flock, and herd;
Succed my wish, your votary restore:
Oh, be some god his convoy to our shore!
Due pains shall punish then this slave's offence, 290
And humble all his airs of insolence,
Who, proudly stalking, leaves the herds at large,
Commences counten, and neglects his charge.
What matters he? (Melanthius sharp rejoins);
This crafty miscreant big with dark designs? 295
The day shall come; 'tis already near,
When, slave! to sell thee at a price too dear,
Must be my care; and hence transport thee o'er,
A load and scandal to this happy shore.
Oh! that as surely great Apollo's dart,
Or some brave suitor's sword, might pierce the heart
Of the proud son; as that we stand this hour
In lasting safety from the father's power!

So spoke the wretch, but, shunning further fray,
Turn'd his proud step, and left them on their way.
Straight to the feastful palace he repair'd, 306
Familiar enter'd, and the banquet shar'd;
Beneath Eurymachus, his patron lord,
He took his place, and plenty heap'd the board.

Metime they heard, soft-circling in the sky, 310
Sweet airs ascend, and heavenly minstrelsy
(For Phemius to the lyre attend'd the strain):
Ulysses heav'n'd, then address the swain:
Well may this palace admiration claim,
Great, and respondent to the master's fame! 315
Stage above stage th’ imperial structure stands,
Holds the chief honours, and the town commands:
High walls and battlements the courts inclose,
And the strong gates defy an host of foes.
For other cares its dwellers now employ;
The throng’d assembly and the feast of joy:
I see the smokes of sacrifice aspire,
And hear (what graces every feast,) the lyre.

Then thus Eumæus. Judge we which were best;
Amidst yon revellers a sudden guest
Choose you to mingle, while behind I stay?
Or first entering introduce the way?
Wait for a space without, but wait not long;
This is the house of violence and wrong:
Some rude insult thy reverend age may bear;
For like their lawless lords the servants are.

Just is, oh friend! thy caution, and address
(Reply’d the chief) to no unheedful breast;
The wrongs and injuries of base mankind
Fresh to my sense, are always in my mind.
The bravely-patient to no fortune yields:
On rolling oceans, and in fighting fields,
Storms have I past, and many a stern debate;
And now in humbler scene submit to fate.
What cannot want? The best she will expose,
And I am learn’d in all her train of woes;
She fills with navies, hosts, and loud alarms
The sea, the land, and shakes the world with arms!

Thus, near the gates conferring as they drew,
Argus, the dog, his ancient master knew;
He, not unconscious of the voice and tread,
Lifts to the sound his ear, and rears his head;
Bred by Ulysses, nourish’d at his board,
But, ah! not fated long to please his lord!
To him, his swiftness and his strength were vain;
The voice of glory call’d him o’er the main.
Till then in every sylvan chase renown’d,
With Argus, Argus rung the woods around;
With him the youth pursu’d the goat or fawn,
Trac’d the mazy leveret o’er the lawn.
BOOK XVII. THE ODYSSEY.

Now left to man's ingratitude he lay,
Unhous'd, neglected in the public way;
And where on heape the rich manure was spread,
Obcene with reptiles, took his sordid bed.

He knew his lord; he knew, and strove to meet;
In vain he strove, to crawl, and kiss his feet;
Yet (all he could) his tail, his ears, his eyes,
Salute his master, and confess his joys.
Soft pity touch'd the mighty master's soul;
Adown his cheek a tear unbidden stole,
Stole unperceiv'd; he turn'd his head and dry'd
The drop humane; then thus impassion'd cry'd.

What noble beast in this abandon'd state
Lies here all helpless at Ulysses' gate?
His bulk and beauty speak not vulgar praise:
If, as he seems, he was in better days,
Some care his age deserves; or was he pris'd
For worthless beauty? therefore now despis'd;
Such dogs and men there are, mere things of state;
And always cherish'd by their friends, the great.

Not Argus so, (Eumæus thus rejoin'd),
But serv'd a master of a nobler kind,
Who never! never shall behold him more!
Long, long since perish'd on a distant shore!
Oh, had you seen him, vigorous, bold, and young,
Swift as a stag, and as a lion strong:

Him no fell savage on the plain withstood,
None 'scap'd him bosom'd in the gloomy wood;
His eye how piercing, and his scent how true,
To wind the vapour in the tainted dew!

Such, when Ulysses left his natal coast;
Now years annerve him, and his lord is lost!
The women keep the generous creature bare,
A sleek and idle race is all their care:
The master gone, the servants what restrains?
Or dwells humanity where riot reigns?
Jove fix'd it certain, that whatever day
Makes man a slave, takes half his worth away.

This said, the honest herdsmen strode before:
The musing monarch pauses at the door:
The dog, whom Fate had granted to behold
His lord, when twenty tedious years had roll'd;
Takes a last look, and, having seen him, dies;
So clos'd for ever faithful Argus' eyes!

And now Telemachus, the first of all,
Observ'd Eumæus entering in the hall;
Distant he saw, across the shady dome;
Then gave a sign, and beckon'd him to come:
There stood an empty seat, where late was plac'd,
In order due, the steward of the feast
(Who now was busied carving round the board)!
Eumæus took, and plac'd it near his lord.
Before him instant was the banquet spread,
And the bright basket pil'd with leaves of bread.

Next came Ulysses lowly at the door,
A figure despisable, old, and poor;
In squalid vesture, with many a gaping rent,
Propt on a staff, and trembling as he went.
Then, resting on the threshold of the gate,
Against a cypress pillar lean'd his weight
(Smooth'd by the workman to a polish'd plain);
The thoughtful son beheld, and call'd his swain:

These viands, and this bread, Eumæus! bear,
And let your mendicant our plenty share:
Then let him circle round the suitors' board,
And try the bounty of each gracious lord.
Bold let him ask, encourag'd thus by me;
How ill, alas! do want and shame agree!

His lord's command the faithful servant bears:
The seeming beggar answers with his prayers.
Blest be Telemachus! in every deed
Inspire him, Jove! in every wish succeed!
This said, the portion from his son convey'd
With smiles receiving on his scrip he lay'd.
Long as the minstrel sweep'd the sounding wire,
He fed, and ceas'd when silence held the lyre.
Soon as the suitors from the banquet rose,
Minerva prompts the man of mighty woes
To tempt their bounties with a suppliant's art,
And learn the generous from th' ignoble heart
BOOK XVII. THE ODYSSEY.

(Not but his soul, resentful as humane,
Dooms to full vengeance all th' offending train);
With speaking eyes, and voice of plaintive sound,
Humble he moves, imploring all around.
The proud feel pity, and relief bestow,
With such an image touch'd of human woe;
Inquiring all, their wonder they confess,
And eye the man, majestic in distress.

While thus they gaze and question with their eyes,
The bold Melanthius to their thought replies.
My lords! this stranger of gigantic port
The good Eumæus usher'd to your court.
Full well I mark'd the features of his face,
Though all unknown his clime, or noble race.
And is this present, swineherd! of thy hand? Bring'st thou those vagrants to infest the land;
(Returns Antinoüs with retorted eye),
Objects uncouth, to check the genial joy.
Enough of these our court already grace,
Of giant stomach, and of famish'd face.
Such guests Eumæus to his country brings,
To share our feast, and lead the life of kings.

To whom the hospitable swain rejoin'd:
Thy passion, prince, belies thy knowing mind.
Who calls, from distant nations to his own,
The poor, distinguish'd by their wants alone?
Round the wide world are sought those men divine
Who public structures raise, or who design;
Those to whose eyes the gods their ways reveal,
Or bless with salutary arts to heal.
But chief to poets such respect belongs,
By rival nations courted for their songs;
These states invite, and mighty kings admire,
Wide as the sun displays his vital fire.
It is not so with want! how few that feed
A wretch unhappy, merely for his need!
Unjust to me, and all that serve the state,
To love Ulysses, is to raise thy hate.
For me, suffice the approbation won
Of my great mistress, and her godlike son.
To him Telemachus. No more incense
The man by nature prone to insolence:
Injurious minds just answers but provoke—
Then turning to Antinous, thus he spoke.
Thanks to thy care! whose absolute command
Thus drives the stranger from our court and land.
Heaven bless its owner with a better mind!
From envy free, to charity inclin’d.
This death Penelope and I afford:
Then, prince! be bounteous of Ulysses’ board.
To give another’s is thy hand so slow?
So much more sweet to spoil them than to bestow?
Whence, great Telemachus! this lofty strain?
(Antinous cries with insolent disdain);
Portents like mine if every suitor gave,
Our walls this twelvemonth should not see the slave.
He spoke, and lifting high above the board
His ponderous footstool, shook it at his lord.
The rest with equal hand conferred the bread;
He fill’d his scrip, and to the threshold sped;
But first before Antinous stoop’d and said,
Bestow, my friend! thou dost not seem the worst
Of all the Greeks; but prince-like and the first;
Then, as in dignity, be first in worth,
And I shall praise thee through the boundless earth.
Once I enjoy’d in luxury of state
Whatso’er gives man the envied name of great;
Wealth, servants, friends, were mine in better days;
And hospitality was then my praise;
In every borrowing soul I pour’d delight,
And poverty stood smiling in my sight.
But Jove, all-governing, whose only will
Determines fate, and mingles good with ill,
Sent me (to punish my pursuit of gain)
With roving pirates o’er th’ Egyptian main:
By Egypt’s silver flood our ships we moor;
Our spies commission’d straight the coast explore;
But impotent of mind, with lawless will
The country ravage, and the natives kill.
The spreading clamour to their city flies,
And horse and foot in mingled tumult rise.
The reddening dawn reveals the hostile fields,
Horrid with bristly spears, and gleaming shields:
Jove thunder'd on their side: our guilty head
We turn'd to flight; the gathering vengeance spread
On all parts round, and heaps on heaps lay dead.
Some few the foe in servitude remain;
Death ill-exchange'd for bondage and for pain?
Unhappy me a Cyprian took a board,
And gave to Daedal, Cyprus' haughty lord:
Hither, to escape his chains, my course I steer,
Still curse by fortune, and insulted here!

To whom Antimachus thus his rage express'd.
What god has plagu'd us with this gormand guest?
Unless at distance, wretch! thou keep behind,
Another isle, than Cyprus more unkind;
Another Egypt shalt thou quickly find.
From all thou beg'st, a bold audacious slave;
Nor all can give so much as thou canst crave.
Nor wonder, if such profusion shown;
Shameless they give, who give what's not their own.

The chief, retiring. Souls like that in thee,
Ill suit such forms of grace and dignity.
Nor will that hand to utmost need afford
The smallest portion of a wasteful board,
Whose luxury whole patrimonies sweeps,
Yet starving want, amidst the riot, weeps.

The haughty sov'reign with resentment burns,
And, sourly smiling, this reply returns.
Take that, ere yet thou quit this princely throng;
And dumb for ever be thy slanderous tongue!
He said, and high the whirling tripod flung.
His shoulder-blade receiv'd th'ungentle shock;
He stood, and mov'd not, like a marble rock;
But shock his thoughtful head, nor more complain'd,
Sedate of soul, his character sustain'd,
And duly form'd revenge: then back withdrew;
Before his feet the well-fil'd scrip he threw,
And thus with semblance mild address the crew.

May what I speak your princely minds approve,
Ye peers and rivals in this noble love!
Not for the hurt I grieve, but for the cause.
If, when the sword our country's quarrel draws,
Or if, defending what is justly dear,
From Mars impartial some broad wound we bear;
The generous motive dignifies the scar. 561
But for mere want, how hard to suffer wrong!
Want brings enough of other ills along!
Yet, if injustice never be secure,
If fiends revenge, and gods assert the poor,
Death shall lay low the proud aggressor's head,
And make the dust Antinoüs' bridal bed.

Peace, wretch! and eat thy bread without offence
(The suitor cry'd), or force shall drag thee hence,
Scourge thro' the public street, and cast thee there,
A mangled carcass for the hounds to tear. 571

His furious deed the general anger mov'd,
All, ev'n the worst, condemn'd: and some reprov'd.
Was ever chief for wars like these renown'd?
Ill fits the stranger and the poor to wound. 575
Unblest thy hand! if in this low disguise
Wander, perhaps, some inmate of the skies;
They (curious oft of mortal actions) deign
In forms like these, to round the earth and main,
Just and unjust, recording in their mind,
And with sure eyes inspecting all mankind.

Telemachus, absorpt in thought severe,
Nourish'd deep anguish, though he shed no tear;
But the dark brow of silence sorrow shook:
While thus his mother to her virgins spoke. 585
"On him and his may the bright god of day
That base, inhospitable blow repay!"
The nurse replies: "If Jove receives my prayer,
Not one survives to breathe to-morrow's air."

All, all are foes, and mischief is their end; 590
Antinoüs most to gloomy death a friend
(Replies the queen); the stranger begg'd their grace,
And melting pity soften'd every face;
From every other hand redress he found,
But fell Antinoüs answer'd with a wound. 595

Amidst her maids thus spoke the prudent queen,
Then bade Eumæus call the pilgrim in.
BOOK XVII. THE ODYSSEY.

Much of th' experience'd man I long to hear,
If or his certain eye, or listening ear,
Have learn'd the fortunes of my wandering lord?
Thus she, and good Eumæus took the word. 601

A private audience if thy grace impart,
The stranger's words may ease the royal heart.
His sacred eloquence in balm distils,
And the sooth'd heart with secret pleasure fills. 606
Three days have spent their beams, three nights have run

Their silent journey, since his tale begun,
Unfinish'd yet! and yet I thirst to hear!
As when some heaven-taught poet charms the ear
(Suspending sorrow with celestial strain
Breath'd from the gods to soften human pain);
Time steals away with unregarded wing,
And the soul bears him, though he cease to sing.

Ulysses late he saw, on Cretan ground
(His father's guest), for Minos' birth renown'd. 615
He now but waits the wind, to waft him o'er,
With boundless treasure, from Thesprotia's shore.

To this the queen. The wanderer let me hear,
While you luxurious race indulge their cheer,
Devour the grazing ox, and browsing goat, 620
And turn my generous vintage down their throat.
For where's an arm, like thine, Ulysses! strong,
To curb wild riot, and to punish wrong?

She spoke. Telemachus then sneez'd aloud;
Constrain'd, his nostril echo'd thro' the crowd. 625
The smiling queen the happy omen blest:
"So may these impious fall, by Fate oppress!"
Then to Eumæus: Bring the stranger, fly!
And if my questions meet a true reply,
Grac'd with a decent robe, he shall retire, 630
A gift in season which his wants require.

Thus spoke Penelope. Eumæus flies
In duteous haste, and to Ulysses cries.
The queen invites thee, venerable guest!
A secret instinct moves her troubled breast,
Of her long absent lord from thee to gain
Some light, and soothe her soul's eternal pain.
If true, if faithful then; her grateful mind
Of decent robes a present has design'd:
So finding favour in the royal eye,
Thy other wants her subjects shall supply.
Fair truth alone (the patient man reply'd)
My words shall dictate, and my lips shall guide.
To him, to me, one common lot was given,
In equal woes, alas! involv'd by heaven.
Much of his faces I know; but check'd by fear
I stand; the hand of violence is here:
Here boundless wrongs the starry skies invade,
And injur'd suppliants seek in vain for aid.
Let for a space the pensive queen attend,
Nor claim my story till the sun descend;
Then in such robes as suppliants may require,
Compos'd and cheerful by the genial fire,
When loud uproar and lawless riot cease,
Shall her pleas'd ear receive my words in peace.

Swift to the queen returns the gentle swain:
And say (she cries), does fear, or shame, detain
The cautious stranger? With the begging kind
Shame suits but ill. Eumæus thus rejoin'd:
He only asks a more propitious hour,
And shuns (who would not?) wicked men in power;
At evening mild (meet season to confer)
By turns to question, and by turns to hear.
Whoe'er this guest (the prudent queen replies)
His every step and every thought is wise.

For men like these on earth he shall not find
In all the miscreant race of human kind.

Thus she. Eumæus all her words attends,
And, parting, to the suitor powers descends;
There seeks Telemachus, and thus apart
In whispers breathes the fondness of his heart.

The time, my lord, invites me to repair
Hence to the lodge, my charge demands my care.
These sons of murder thirst thy life to take;
O guard it, guard it for thy servant's sake!
Thanks to my friend, he cries, but now the hour
Of night draws on, go seek the rural bower:
BOOK XVII. THE ODYSSEY.

But first refresh: and at the dawn of day
Hither a victim to the gods convey.
Our life to heaven's immortal powers we trust,
Safe in their care, for heaven protects the just.

Observant of his voice, Eumæus sate
And fed recumbent on a chair of state,
Then instant rose, and as he mov'd along,
Twas riot all amid the suitor throng,
They feast, they dance, and raise the mirthful song.
Till now, declining toward the close of day,
The sun obliquely shot his dewy ray.
THE

ODYSSEY.

BOOK XVIII.

ARGUMENT.

The Fight of Ulysses and Irus.

The beggar Irus insults Ulysses; the suitors promote the quarrel, in which Irus is worsted, and miserably handled. Penelope descends, and receives the presents of the suitors. The dialogue of Ulysses with Eurymachus.
BOOK XVIII.

WHILE fix’d in thought the pensive hero sate,
A mendicant approach’d the royal gate;
A surly vagrant of the giant kind,
The stain of manhood, of a coward mind:
From feast to feast, insatiate to devour
He flew, attendant on the genial hour.
Him on his mother’s knees, when babe he lay,
She nam’d Arnaeus on his natal day:
But Irus his associates call’d the boy,
Practis’d the common messenger to fly;
Irus, a name expressive of th’employ.

From his own roof, with meditated blows,
He strove to drive the man of mighty woes.

Hence, dotard! hence, and timely speed thy way.
Lest dragg’d in vengeance thou repent thy stay;
See how with nods assent you princely train!
But honouring age, in mercy I refrain;
In peace away! lest, if persuasions fail,
This arm with blows more eloquent prevail.
To whom, with stern regard: O insolence,
Indecently to rail without offence!
What bounty gives without a rival share;
I ask, what harms not thee, to breathe this air?
Alike on alms we both precarious live:
And canst thou envy when the great relieve?

Know, from the bounteous heavens all riches flow,
And what man gives, the gods by man bestow;
Proud as thou art, henceforth no more be proud,
Lest I imprint my vengeance in thy blood;
Old as I am, should once my fury burn,
How would’st thou fly, nor ev’n in thought return!

Mere woman-glutton! (thus the churl reply’d);
A tongue so flippant, with a throat so wide!
Why cease I, gods! to dash those teeth away,
Like some vile boar’s, that greedy of his prey.
Uproots the bearded corn! Rise, try the fight,
Gird well thy loins, approach and feel my might:
Sure of defeat, before the peers engage;
Unequal fight, when youth contends with age!
Thus in a wordy war their tongues display
More fierce intents, preluding to the fray;
Antinoüs bears, and in a jovial vein,
Thus with loud laughter to the suitor-train.
This happy day in mirth, my friends, employ,
And lo! the gods conspire to crown our joy.
See ready for the fight, and hand to hand,
Yon surly mendicants contentious stand:
Why urge we not to blows? Well pleas'd they spring
Swift from their seats, and thickening form a ring.
'To whom Antinoüs. Lo! enrich'd with blood,
A kid's well-fatted entrails (tasteful food)
On glowing embers lie; on him bestow
The choicest portion who subdues his foe;
Grant him unrivall'd in these walls to stay,
The sole attendant on the genial day.
The lords applaud: Ulysses then with art,
And fears well-feign'd, disguis'd his dauntless heart:
Worn as I am with age, decay'd with woe;
Say, is it baseness to decline the foe?
Hard conflict! when calamity and age
With vigorous youth, unknown to cares, engage!
Yet, fearful of disgrace, to try the day
Imperious hunger bids, and I obey;
But swear, impartial arbiters of right,
Swear to stand neutral, while we cope in fight.
The peers assent; when straight his sacred head
Telemachus uprais'd, and sternly said.
Stranger, if prompted to chastise the wrong
Of this bold insolent; confide, be strong!
Th' injurious Greek that dares attempt a blow,
That instant makes Telemachus his foe;
And these my friends shall guard the sacred ties
Of hospitality, for they are wise.
Then, girding his strong loins, the king prepares
To close in combat, and his body bares;
BOOK XVIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Broad spread his shoulders, and his nervous thighs
By just degrees, like well-turn'd columns rise:
Ample his chest, his arms are round and long,
And each strong joint Minerva knits more strong
(Attendant on her chief): the suitor-crowd
With wonder gaze, and gazing speak aloud:

Irus! alas! shall Irus be no more?
Black fate impends, and this th' avenging hour!
Gods! how his nerves a matchless strength proclaim,
Swell o'er his well-strung limbs and brace his frame!

Then pale with fears, and sickening at the sight, 86
They dragg'd th' unwilling Irus to the fight;
From his blank visage fled the coward blood,
And his flesh trembled as aghast he stood:

O that such baseness should disgrace the sight! 90
O hide it, death, in everlasting night!
(Exclaims Antinotis); can a vigorous foe
Meanly decline to combat age and woe?
But hear me, wretch! if recreant in the fray
That huge bulk yield this ill-contested day;

Instant thou sail'st, to Echetus resign'd;
A tyrant, fiercest of the tyrant kind,
Who casts thy mangled ears and nose a prey
To hungry dogs, and lops the man away.

While with indignant scorn he sternly spoke, 100
In every joint the trembling Irus shook.
Now front to front each frowning champion stands,
And poises high in air his adverse hands.
The chief yet doubts, or to the shades below
To fell the giant at one vengeful blow,

Or save his life; and soon his life to save
The king resolves, for mercy sways the brave.
That instant Irus his huge arm extends,
Full on the shoulder the rude weight descends;
The sage Ulysses, fearful to disclose 110
The hero latent in the man of woes,
Check'd half his might; yet raising to the stroke,
His jaw-bone dash'd, the crashing jaw-bone broke:
Down dropt he stupid from the stunning wound;
His feet extended, quivering beat the ground;
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK XVIII.

His mouth and nostrils spout a purple flood;
His teeth, all shatter'd, rush inmix'd with blood.

The peers transported, as outstretch'd he lies,
With bursts of laughter rend the vaulted skies;

Then dragg'd along, all bleeding from the wound,
His length of carcass trailing prints the ground; 191
Rais'd on his feet, again he reels, he falls,
Till propt, reclining on the palace walls:
Then to his hand a staff the victor gave,
And thus with just reproach address'd the slave. 133

There terrible, affright the dogs, and reign
A dreaded tyrant o'er the bestial train!
But mercy to the poor and stranger show,
Lest Heaven in vengeance send some mightier woe.

Scornful he spoke, and o'er his shoulder flung 130
The broad-patch'd scrip, the scrip in tatters hung
Ill join'd, and knotted to a twisted thong.
Then, turning short, disdain'd a further stay;
But to the palace measur'd back the way.

There as he rested, gathering in a ring 135
The peers with smiles address their unknown king:

Stranger, may Jove and all th' aerial powers,
With every blessing crown thy happy hours!
Our freedom to thy prowess'd arm we owe.

From bold intrusion of thy coward foe,
Instant the flying sail the slave shall wing
To Echecus, the monster of a king.

While pleas'd he hears, Antinoüs bears the food,
A kid's well-fatted entrails, rich with blood:
The bread from canisters of shining mold 145
Amphinomus; and wines that laugh in gold:
And oh! (he mildly cries), may heaven display
A beam of glory o'er thy future day!
Alas, the brave too oft is doom'd to bear
The gripes of poverty and stings of care.

To whom with thought mature the king replies:
The tongue speaks wisely, when the soul is wise;
Such was thy father! in imperial state,
Great without vice, that oft attends the great:
Nor from the sire art thou, the son, declin'd; 155
Then hear my words, and grave them in thy mind!
BOOK XVIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Of all that breathes, or grovelling creeps on earth,
Most vain is man! calamitous by birth:
To-day, with power elate, in strength he blooms;
The haughty creature on that power presumes: 160
Anon from heaven a sad reverse he feels;
Untaught to bear, 'gainst heaven the wretch rebels.
For man is changeful, as his bliss or woe;
Too high when prosperous, when distrest too low.
There was a day, when with the scornful great 165
I swell'd in pomp and arrogance of state;
Proud of the power that to high birth belongs;
And us'd that power to justify my wrongs.
Then let not man be proud; but firm of mind,
Bear the best humbly, and the worst resign'd; 170
Be dumb when heaven afflicts! unlike you train
Of haughty spoilers, insolently vain;
Who make their queen and all her wealth a prey;
But vengeance and Ulysses wing their way.
O may'st thou; favour'd by some guardian power, 175
Far, far be distant in that deathful hour!
For sure I am, if stern Ulysses breathe,
These lawless riots end in blood and death.

Then to the gods the rosy juice he pours,
And the drain'd goblet to the chief restores. 180
Stung to the soul, o'ercast with holy dread,
He shook the graceful honours of his head;
His boding mind the future woe forestalls!
In vain! by great Telemachus he falls,
For Pallas seals his doom: all sad he turns 185
To join the peers; resumes his throne, and mourns.

Meanwhile Minerva with instinctive fires
Thy soul, Penelope, from heaven inspires:
With flattering hopes the suitors to betray,
And seem to meet, yet fly the bridal day: 190
Thy husband's wonder, and thy son's, to raise;
And crown the mother and the wife with praise.
Then, while the streaming sorrow dims her eyes,
Thus with a transient smile the matron cries:

Eurynome! to go where riot reigns
I feel an impulse, though my soul disdains;
To my lov'd son the shapes of death to show,
And in the traitor-friend unmask the foe;
Who, smooth of tongue, in purpose insincere,
Hides fraud in smiles, while death is ambush'd there.

Go, warn thy son, nor be the warning vain
(Reply'd the sagest of the royal train);
But bath'd, anointed, and adorn'd, descend;
Powerful of charms, bid every grace attend;
The tide of flowing tears awhile suppress;
Tears but indulge the sorrow, not repress.
Some joy remains; to thee a son is given,
Such as, in fondness, parents ask of Heaven.

Ah me! forbear, returns the queen, forbear,
Oh! talk not, talk not of vain beauty's care;
No more I bathe, since he no longer sees
Those charms, for whom alone I wish to please.
The day that bore Ulysses from this coast,
Blasted the little bloom these cheeks could boast.
But instant bid Antemnæ descend,
Instant Hippocampe our steps attend;
Ill suits it female virtue, to be seen
Alone, indecent, in the walks of men.

Then while Eurynome the mandate bears,
From heaven Minerva shoots with guardian care;
O'er all her senses, as the couch she prest,
She pours a pleasing, deep, and death-like rest,
With every beauty every feature arms,
Bids her cheeks glow, and lights up all her charms,
In her love-darting eyes awakes the fires
(Immortal gifts! to kindle soft desires);
From limb to limb an air majestic sheds,
And the pure ivory o'er her bosom spreads.
Such Venus shines, when with a measur'd bound
She smoothly gliding sways th' harmonious round;
When with the Graces in the dance she moves,
And fires the gazing gods with ardent loves.

Then to the skies her flight Minerva sendes,
And to the queen the damsel-train descends:
Wak'd at their steps, her flowing eyes unclose:
The tear she wipes, and thus removes her weep.
BOOK XVIII. THE ODYSSEY.

How'er 'tis well; that sleep awhile can free,
With soft forgetfulness, a wretch like me;
Oh! were it given to yield this transient breath,
Send, oh! Diana, send the sleep of death!
Why must I waste a tedious life in tears,
Nor bury in the silent grave my cares?
O my Ulysses! ever-honour'd name!
For thee I mourn till death dissolves my frame.

Thus wailing, slow and sadly she descends,
On either hand a damsel train attends:
Full where the dome its shining valves expands,
Radiant before the gazing peers she stands;
A veil translucent o'er her brow display'd,
Her beauty seems, and only seems to shade;
Sudden she lightens in their dazled eyes,
And sudden flames in every bosom rise;
They send their eager souls with every look,
Till silence thus th' imperial matron broke:

O why! my son, why now no more appears
That warmth of soul that urg'd thy younger years?
Thy riper days no growing worth impart,
A man in stature, still a boy in heart!
Thy well-knit frame unprofitably strong,
Speaks thee an hero from an hero sprung:
But the just gods in vain those gifts bestow,
O wise alone in form, and brave in show!
Heavens! could a stranger feel oppression's hand
Beneath thy roof, and couldst thou tamely stand?
If thou the stranger's righteous cause decline,
His is the sufferance, but the shame is thine.

To whom, with filial awe, the prince returns:
That generous soul with just resentment burns;
Yet, taught by time, my heart has learn'd to glow,
For others' good, and melt at others' woe;
But, impotent these riots to repel,
I bear their outrage, though my soul rebel;
Helpless amid the snares of death I tread,
And numbers leagu'd in impious union dread;
But now no crime is theirs: this wrong proceeds
From Iove, and the guilty Iove bleeds.
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK XVII.

O would to Jove; or her whose arms display
The shield of Jove, or him who rules the day!
That you proud suitors, who licentious tread
These courts, within these courts like Iris bled: 280
Whose loose head tottering, as with wine opprest,
Obliquely drops, and nodding knocks his breast;
Powerless to move, his staggering feet deny
The coward wretch the privilege to fly.

Then to the queen Eurymachus replies:

O justly lov'd, and not more fair than wise!
Should Greece through all her hundred states survey
Thy finish'd charms, all Greece would own thy sway,
In rival crowds contest the glorious prize.
Dispeopling realms to gaze upon thy eyes:

O woman! loveliest of the lovely kind,
In body perfect, and complete in mind.

Ah me, returns the queen, when from this shore
Ulysses sail'd, then beauty was no more!
The gods decreed these eyes no more should keep
Their wonted grace, but only serve to weep
Should he return, whate'er my beauties prove,
My virtues last; my brightest charm is love.
Now, grief, thou art mine! the gods o'ercast
My soul with woes, that long, ah long must last!

Too faithfully my heart retains the day
That sadly tore my royal lord away:
He grasp'd my hand, and, Oh my spouse I leave
Thy arms (he cry'd), perhaps to find a grave:
Fame speaks the Trojans bold, they boast the skill
To give the feather'd arrow wings to kill,
To dart the spear, and guide the rushing car
With dreadful inroad through the walks of war.
My sentence is gone forth, and 'tis decreed
Perhaps by righteous heaven that I must bleed!
My father, mother, all I trust to thee;
To them, to them transfer the love of me:
But, when my son grows man, the royal sway
Resign, and happy be thy bridal day!

Such were his words; and Hymen now prepares
To light his torch, and give me up to cares!
BOOK XVIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Th' afflicting hand of wrathful Jove to bear:
A wretch the most complete that breathes the air!
Fall'n ev'n below the rights to woman due!
Careless to please, with insolence ye woo!

The generous lovers, studious to succeed,
Bid their whole herds and flocks in banquets bleed:
By precious gifts the vow sincere display:
You, only you, make her ye love your prey.

Well-pleas'd Ulysses hears his queen deceive
The suitor-train and raise a thirst to give:
False hopes she kindles, but those hopes betray,
And promise, yet eluded, the bridal day.

While yet she speaks, the gay Antinoüs cries.
Offspring of kings, and more than woman wise!
'Tis right; 'tis man's prerogative to give,
And custom bids thee without shame receive;
Yet never, never, from thy doom we move,
Till Hymen lights the torch of spousal love.

The peace dispatch'd their heralds to convey
The gifts of love; with speed they take the way.
A robe Antinoüs gives of shining dye,
The varying hues in gay confusion rise.
Rich from the artist's hand! Twelve clasps of gold
Close to the lessening waist the vest infold!
Down from the swelling loins the vest unbound
Floats in bright waves redundant o'er the ground.
A bracelet rich with gold, with amber gay,
That shot effulgence like the solar ray,
Eurymachus presents: and ear-rings bright,
With triple stars that cast a trembling light.
Pisander bears a necklace wrought with art:
And every peer, expressive of his heart,
A gift bestows: this done, the queen ascends,
And slow-behind her damsel-train attends.

Then to the dance they form the vocal strain,
Till Hesperus leads forth the starry train;
And now he raises, as the day-light fades,
His golden circlet in the deepening shades;
Three vases heap'd with copious fires display
O'er all the palace a fictitious day.
From space to space the torch wide-beaming burns,
And sprightly damsels trim the rays by turns.

To whom the king: Ill suits your sex to stay
Alone with men! ye modest maids, away!
Go, with the queen the spindle guide; or cull
(The partners of her cares) the silver wool;
Be it my task the torches to supply
Ev'n till the morning lamp adorns the sky;
Ev'n till the morning, with unwearied care,
Sleepless I watch; for I have learn'd to bear.

Scornful they heard: Melantho, fair and young (Melantho, from the loins of Dolius sprung,
Who with the queen her years an infant led,
With the soft fondness of a daughter bred)
Chiefly derides: regardless of the cares
Her queen endures, polluted joys she shares
Nocturnal with Eurymachus! with eyes
That speak disdain, the wanton thus replies.
Oh! whither wanders thy distemper'd brain,
Thou bold intruder on a princely train?
Hence to the vagrants' rendezvous repair;
Or shun in some black forge the midnight air.
Proceeds this boldness from a turn of soul,
Or flows licentious from the copious bowl?
Is it that vanquish'd Jrus swells thy mind?
A foe may meet thee of a braver kind,
Who, shortening with a storm of blows thy stay,
Shall send thee bowling all in blood away!

To whom with frowns: O impudent in wrong!
Thy lord shall curb that insolence of tongue;
Know, to Telemachus I tell th' offence;
The scourge, the scourge shall lash thee into sense.

With conscious shame they hear the stern rebuke,
Nor longer durst sustain the sovereign look.

Then to the servile task the monarch turns
His royal hands, each torch refugent burns
With added ray; meanwhile in museful mood,
Absorpt in thought on vengeance fix'd he stood.
And now the martial maid, by deeper wrongs
To rouse Ulysses points the suitors' tongues,
Scornful of age, to taunt the virtuous man;
Thoughtless and gay, Eurymachus began.

Hear me (he cries), confederates and friends!
Some god, no doubt, this stranger kindly sends;
The shining baldness of his head survey,
It aids our torch-light and reflects the ray.—

Then to the king that level'd haughty Troy.
Say, if large hire can tempt thee to employ
Those hands in work; to tend the rural trade,
To dress the walk, and form th' embowering shade?
So food and raiment constant will I give:
But idly thus thy soul prefers to live,
And starve by strolling, not by work to thrive.

To whom incens'd: Should we, O prince, engage
In rival tasks beneath the burning rage
Of summer suns; were both constrain'd to wield
Fool'dless the scythe along the burden'd field;
Or should we labour, while the ploughshare wounds
With steers of equal strength, th' allotted grounds:
Beneath my labours, bow thy wondering eyes
Might see the sable field at once arise!

Should Jove dire war unloose, with spear and shield,
And nodding helm, I tread th' ensanguin'd field,
Fierce in the van: then would'zt thou, would'zt thou,
—say,—

Misname me, glutton, in that glorious day?
No, thy ill-judging thoughts the brave disgrace;
'Tis thou injurious art, not I am base.
Proud to seem brave among a coward train!
But know, thou art not valorous but vain.

 Gods! should the stern Ulysses rise in might,
These gates would seem too narrow for thy flight.

While yet he speaks, Eurymachus replies,
With indignation flashing from his eyes.

Slave, I with Justice might deserve the wrong,
Should I not punish that opprobrious tongue.
Irreverent to the great, and uncontroul'd,
Art thou from wine, or innate folly, bold?
Perhaps, these outrages from truest flow,
A worthless triumph o'er a worthless foe!
He said: and with full force a footstool threw:
Whirl'd from his arm, with erring rage it flew:
Ulysses, cautious of the vengeful foe,
Stoops to the ground, and disappoints the blow.
Not so a youth who deals the goblet round.

Full on his shoulder it inflicts a wound,
Dash'd from his hand the sounding goblet flies,
He shrinks, he reels, he falls, and breathless lies.

Then wild uproar and clamour mounts the sky,
Till mutual thus the peers indignant cry;
O had this stranger sunk to realms beneath,
To the black realms of darkness and of death,
Ere yet he trod these shores! to strife he draws
Peer against peer; and what the weighty cause?
A vagabond! for him the great destroy,
In vile ignoble jars, the feast of joy.

To whom the stern Telemachus uprose:
Gods! what wild folly from the goblet flows!
Whence this unguarded openness of soul,
But from the licence of the copious bowl?
Or Heaven delusion sends: but hence, away!
Force I forbear, and without force obey.

Silent, abash'd, they hear the stern rebuke,
Till thus Amphipemos the silence broke.

True are his words, and he whom truth offends.
Not with Telemachus, but truth contends;
Let not the hand of violence invade
The reverend stranger, or the spotless maid;
Retire we hence! but crown with rosy wine
The flowing goblet to the powers divine!
Guard he his guest beneath whose roof he stands,
This justice, this the social rite demands.

The peers assent; the goblet Mutilus crown'd
With purple juice, and borne in order round;
Each peer successive his libation pours
To the blest gods who fill th' aerial bowers;
Then swill'd with wine, with noise the crowds obey,
And rushing forth tumultuous reel away.
ARGUMENT.

The Discovery of Ulysses to Euryclea.

Ulysses and his son remove the weapons out of the armoury. Ulysses, in conversation with Penelope, gives a fictitious account of his adventures; then assures her he had formerly entertained her husband in Crete; and describes exactly his person and dress, affirms to have heard of him in Phœacia and Thespontia, and that his return is certain, and within a month. He then goes to bathe, and is attended by Euryclea, who discovers him to be Ulysses by the scar upon his leg, which he formerly received in hunting the wild boar on Parnassus. The poet inserts a digression, relating that accident, with all its particulars.
CONSULTING secret with the blue-ey'd maid,
Still in the dome divine Ulysses stay'd:
Revenge mature for act inflam'd his breast;
And thus the son the fervent sire address'd.
Instant convey those steely stores of war
To distant rooms, dispos'd with secret care:
The cause demanded by the suitor train,
To soothe their fears, a specious reason feign:
Say, since Ulysses left his natal coast,
Obscene with smoke, their beamy lustre lost,
His arms deform the roof they wont adorn:
From the glad walls inglorious lumber torn.
Suggest, that Jove the peaceful thought inspir'd,
Lest, they by sight of swords to fury fir'd,
Dishonest wounds, or violence of soul,
Defame the bridal feast and friendly bowl.
The prince obedient to the sage command,
To Euryclea thus: the female band
In their apartments keep; secure the doors;
These swarthy arms among the covert stores
Are seemlier hid; my thoughtless youth they blame,
Imbrowned with vapour of the smouldering flame.

In happy hour (pleas'd Euryclea cries),
Tutor'd by early woes, grow early wise!
Inspect with sharpen'd sight, and frugal care,
Your patrimonial wealth, a prudent heir.
But who the lighted taper will provide
(The female train retir'd) your toils to guide?

Without infringing hospitable right,
This guest (he cried) shall bear the guiding light:
I cheer no lazy vagrants with repast;
They share the meal that earn it, ere they taste.
He said; from female ken she straight secures
The purpos'd deed, and guards the bolted doors:
Auxiliar to his son, Ulysses bears
The plumy-crested helmets and pointed spears,
With shields indent'd deep in glorious war.
BOOK XIX. THE ODYSSEY.

Minerva viewless on her charge attends,
And with her golden lamp his toil befriends.
Not such the sickly beams, which unsincere
Gild the gross vapour of this nether sphere!
A present deity the prince confess'd,
And wrapt with ecstacy the sire address'd.
What miracle thus dazzles with surprise!
Distinct in rows the radiant columns rise:
The walls, where'er my wondering sight I turn,
And roofs, amidst a blaze of glory burn!
Some visitant of pure etherial race,
With his bright presence deigns the dome to grace.
Be calm, replies the sire, to none impart,
But oft revolve the vision in thy heart;
Celestials, mantled in excess of light;
Can visit unapproach'd by mortal sight.
Seek thou repose; whilst here I sole remain,
T' explore the conduct of the female train:
The pensive queen, perchance, desires to know
The series of my toils, to soothe her woes.
With tapers flaming day his train attends,
His bright alcove 'th obsequious youth ascends,
Soft slumberous shades his drooping eyelids close,
Till on her eastern throne Aurora glows.
Whilst, forming plans of death, Ulysses stay'd,
In council secret with the martial maid;
Attendant nymphs in beauteous order wait
The queen, descending from her bower of state.
Her cheeks the warmer blush of Venus wear,
Chasten'd with coy Diana's pensive air.
An ivory seat with silver ringlets grac'd,
By fam'd Icmalius wrought, the menials plac'd:
With ivory silver'd thick the footstool shone,
O'er which the panther's various hide was thrown.
The sovereign seat with graceful air she press'd;
To different tasks their toil the nymphs address'd:
The golden goblets some, and some restor'd
From stains of luxury the polish'd board;
These to remove th' expiring embers came,
While those with unctuous fir foment the flame.
'Twas then Melantho with imperious mien
Renew'd th' attack, incontinent of spleen;
Avaunt, she cried, offensive to my sight!
Deem not in ambush here to lurk by night.
Into the woman-state assuunt to pry;
A day-devourer, and an evening spy!
Vagrant, begone! before this blazing brand
Shall urge—and wav'd it hissing in her hand.

Th' insulted hero rolls his wrathful eyes,
And, Why so turbulent of soul? he cries;
Can these lean shrivell'd limbs unnerv'd with age,
These poor but honest rags, enkindle rage?
In crowds; we wear the badge of hungry fate?
And beg, degraded from superior state!
Constrain'd a rent-charge on the rich I live;
Reduc'd to crave the good I once could give:
A palace, wealth, and slaves, I late possess'd,
And all that makes the great be call'd the bless'd:
My gate, an emblem of my open soul,
Embrace'd the poor, and dealt a bounteous dole.
Scorn not the sad reverse, injurious maid!
'Tis Jove's high will, and be his will obey'd!
Nor think thyself exempt: that rosy prime
Must share the general doom of withering time;
To some new channel soon, the changeful tide
Of royal grace, th' offended queen may guide;
And her lov'd lord unplume thy towering pride.
Or were he dead, 'tis wisdom to beware:
Sweet blooms the prince beneath Apollo's care;
Your deeds with quick impartial eye surveys,
Potent to punish what he cannot praise.

Her keen reproach had reach'd the sovereign's ear;
Loquacious insolent! she cries, forbear:
To thee the purpose of my soul I told;
Venial discourse, unblam'd, with him to hold;
The storied labours of my wandering lord,
To soothe my grief he haply may record:
Yet him, my guest, thy venom'd rage hath stung:
Thy head shall pay the forfeit of thy tongue!
But thou on whom my palace cares depend,
Eurynomé, regard the stranger-friend:
BOOK XIX: THE ODYSSEY

A seat, soft spread with furry spoils, prepare;
Due-distant, for us both to speak, and hear.

The menial fair obeys with duteous haste:
A seat adorn'd with furry spoils she plac'd:
Due-distant for discourse the hero sate;
When thus the sovereign from her chair of state:
Reveal, obsequious to my first demand,
Thy name, thy lineage, and thy natal land.

He thus: O queen! whose far-resounding fame
Is bounded only by the starry frame,
Consummate pattern of imperial sway,
Whose pious rule a warlike race obey!

In wavy gold thy summer vales are dress'd;
Thy autumns bend with copious fruit oppress'd;
With flocks and herds each grassy plain is stor'd;
And fish of every fin thy seas afford;
Their affluent joys the grateful realms confess;
And bless the Power that still delights to bless.

Gracious permit this prayer, imperial dame!
Forbear to know my lineage, or my name:
Urge not this breast to heave, these eyes to weep;
In sweet oblivion let my sorrows sleep!

My woes awak'd will violate your ear;
And to this gay censorious train appear
A winy vapour melting in a tear.

Their gifts the gods resum'd (the queen rejoin'd),
Exterior grace, and energy of mind;
When the dear partner of my nuptial joy,
Auxiliar troops combin'd, to conquer Troy.

My lord's protecting hand alone would raise
My drooping verdure, and extend my praise!
Peers from the distant Samian shore resort;
Here with Dulichians join'd, besiege the court:
Zacynthus, green with ever-shady groves,
And Ithaca, presumptuous boast their loves:
Obtruding on my choice a second lord,
They press the Hymenian rite abhor'd.

Misrule thus mingling with domestic cares,
I live regardless of my state affairs;
Receive no stranger-guest, no poor relieve;
But ever for my lord in secret grieve! —
This art, instinct by some celestial power,
I try'd, elusive of the bridal hour:
"Ye peers, I cry, who press to gain a heart,
Where dead Ulysses claims no future part;
"Rebate your loves, each rival suit suspend,
Till this funereal web my labours end:
"Cease, till to good Leérites I bequeath
A pall of state, the ornament of death.
"For when to Fates he bow'd, each Grecian dame
With just reproach were licens'd to defame;
"Should he, long honour'd in supreme command,
Want the last duties of a daughter's hand."
The fiction pleas'd! their loves I long elude;
The night still ravell'd what the day renew'd:
Three years successful in my art conceal'd,
My ineffectual fraud the fourth reveal'd:
Befriended by my own domestic spies,
The woof unwrought the suitor-train surprise.
From nuptial rites they now no more recede,
And fear forbids to falsify the brake.
My anxious parents urge a speedy choice,
And to their suffrage gain the filial voice.
For rule mature, Telemachus deplores
His dome dishonour'd, and exhausted stores—
But, stranger! as thy days seem full of fate,
Divide disourse, in turn thy birth relate:
Thy port asserts thee of distinguish'd race;
No poor unfather'd product of disgrace.
Princess! he cries, renew'd by your command,
The dear remembrance of my native land,
Of secret grief unseals the fruitful source;
And tears repeat their long-forgetten course!
So pays the wretch whom Fate constrains to roam,
The dues of nature to his natal home!—
But invyrd on my soul let sorrow prey,
Your sovereign will my duty bids obey.
... Crete awes the circling waves, a fruitful soil!
And ninety cities crown the sea-born isle:
Mix'd with her genuine sons, adopted names
In various tongues array their various claims.
BOOK X.  THE ODYSSEY.

Cyonianos dreadful with the bended yew,
And bold Pelasgi boast a native's due:
The Dorians, plumed amid the files of war,
Her foodful globe with fierce Achaians share;
Cnossus, her capital of high command;
Where sceptrod Minos with impartial hand
Divided right; each ninth revolving year,
By Jove receiv'd in council to confer.
His son Denealian bore successive away;
His son, who gave me first to view the day!
The royal bed an elder issue blest,
Idomeneus, whom Ithon fields attest
Of matchless deeds: untrain'd to martial toil
I liv'd inglorious in my native isle,
Studious of peace, and Æthon is my name.
'Twas then to Crete the great Ulysses came;
For elemental war, and wintery Jove,
From Malea's gusty cape his navy drove
To bright Lucina's fane; the shelvy coast
Where loud Amnisus in the deep is lost.
His vessels moor'd (an incommodious port!)
The hero speeded to the Cnossian court:
Ardent the partner of his arms to find,
In leagues of long commutual friendship join'd.
Vain hope! ten suns had warm'd the western strand,
Since my brave brother with his Cretan band
Had sail'd for Troy: but to the genial feast
My honour'd roof receiv'd the royal guest:
Beoves for his train the Cnossian peers assign,
A public treat, with jars of generous wine.
Twelve days while Boreas vex'd th' aerial space,
My hospitable dome he deign'd to grace:
And when the north had ceas'd the stormy roar,
He wing'd his voyage to the Phrygian shore.
'Thus the fam'd hero, perfected in wits,
With fair admittance of truth beguiles
The queen's attentive ear: dissolv'd in woe,
From her bright eyes the tears unbounded flow.
As snows collected on the mountain frowns;
When milder genii breathe a vernal breeze,
The fleecy pile obeys the whispering gales,
Ends in a stream, and murmurs through the vales:
So, melted with the pleasing tale he told,
Down her fair cheek the copious torrent roll'd:
She to her present lord laments him lost,
And views that object which she wants the most! 246
Withering at heart to see the weeping fair,
His eyes look stern, and cast a gloomy stare;
Of horn the stiff relentless balls appear,
Or globes of iron fix'd in either sphere;
Firm wisdom interdicts the softening tear.
A speechless interval of grief ensues,
Till thus the queen the tender theme renew'd.

Stranger! that e'er thy hospitable roof
Ulysses grac'd, confirm by faithful proof;
Delineate to my view my warlike lord,
His form, his habit, and his train record.
'Tis hard, he cries, to bring to sudden sight
Ideas that have wing'd their distant flight;
Rare on the mind those images are trace'd,
Whose footsteps twenty winters have defac'd:
But what I can, receive—In ample mode,
A robe of military purple flow'd
O'er all his frame: illustrious on his breast,
The double-clasping gold the king confest.
In the rich woof a hound, Mosaic drawn,
Bore on full stretch, and sein'd a dappled fawn;
Deep in the neck his fangs indent their hold;
They pant and struggle in the moving gold.
Fine as a filmy web beneath it shone
A vest, that dazzled like a cloudless sun:
The female train who round him throng'd to gaze,
In silent wonder sigh'd unwilling praise.
A sabre, when the warrior prest to part,
I gave, enamell'd with Vulcanian art:
A mantle purple-ting'd, and radiant vest,
Dimension'd equal to his size, express
Affection grateful to my honour'd guest,
A favourite herald in his train I knew,
His visage solemn sad, of sable hue:
Short woolly curls o'erflee'd his bending head, 280
O'er which a promontory shoulder spread;
Eurybates! in whose large soul alone
Ulysses view'd an image of his own.

His speech the tempest of her grief restor'd, 283
In all he told she recognis'd her lord:
But when the storm was spent in plenteous showers;
A pause inspiriting her languish'd powers:
O thou, she cry'd, whom first inclement fate
Made welcome to my hospitable gate;
With all thy wants the name of poor shall end: 290
Henceforth live honour'd, my domestic friend!
The vest much envy'd on your native coast,
And regal robe with figur'd gold emboss,
In happier hours my artful hand employ'd,
When my lov'd lord this blissful bower enjoy'd: 295
The fall of Troy erroneous and forlorn
Doom'd to survive, and never to return!
Then he, with pity touch'd: O royal dame!
Your ever-anxious mind, and beauteous frame,
From the devouring rage of grief reclaim. 300
I not the fondness of your soul reprove
For such a lord! who crown'd your virgin-love
With the dear blessing of a fair increase;
Himself adorn'd with more than mortal grace:
Yet while I speak, the mighty woe suspend; 305
Truth forms my tale; to pleasing truth attend.
The royal object of your dearest care,
Breathes in no distant clime the vital air:
In rich Thesprotia, and the nearer bound
Of Thessaly, his name I heard renown'd:
Without retinue, to that friendly shore
Welcom'd with gifts of price, a sumless store!
His sacrilegious train, who dar'd to prey
On herds devoted to the god of day,
Were doom'd by Jove, and Phoebus' just decree, 315
To perish in the rough Trinacrian sea.
To better fate the blameless chief ordain'd,
A floating fragment of the wreck regain'd,
And rode the storm; till, by the billows toss'd,
He landed on the fair Phaeacian coast, 303
That race who emulate the life of gods,
Receive him joyous to their blest abodes:
Large gifts confer, a ready sail command,
To speed his voyage to the Grecian strand.
But your wise lord (in whose capacious soul 325
High schemes of power in just succession roll)
His Ithaca refus'd from favouring Fate,
Till copious wealth might guard his regal state.
Phedon the fact affirm'd, whose sovereign sway
Thesprotian tribes, a dutous race, obey: 330
And bade the gods this added truth attest
(While pure libations crown the genial feast),
That anchor'd in his port the vessel stand,
To waft the hero to his natal land.
I for Dulichium urge the watery way, 335
But first the Ulyssenan wealth survey:
So rich the value of a store so vast
Demands the pomp of centuries to waste!
The darling object of your royal love,
Was journey'd thence to Dodonean Jove; 340
By the sure precept of the sylvan shrine,
To form the conduct of his great design:
Irresolute of soul, his state to shroud
In dark disguise, or come, a king avow'd?
Thus lives your lord; nor longer doom'd to roam:
Soon will he grace this dear paternal dome. 345
By Jove, the source of good, supreme in power!
By the blest genius of this friendly bower!
I ratify my speech, before the sun
His annual longitude of heaven shall run; 350
When the pale empress of yon starry train
In the next month renews her faded wane,
Ulysses will assert his rightful reign.
What thanks! what boon! reply'd the queen, are due,
When time shall prove the storied blessing true? 355
My lord's return should fate no more retard,
Envy shall sicken at thy vast reward.
BOOK XIX.  THE ODYSSEY.

But my prophetic fears, alas! presage,
The wounds of Destiny's relentless rage.
I long must weep, nor will Ulysses come,
With royal gifts to send you honour'd home!—
Your other task, ye menial train, forbear:
Now wash the stranger, and the bed prepare:
With splendid palls the downy fleece adorn:
Uprising early with the purple morn,
His sinews shrunk with age, and stiff with toil,
In the warm bath foment with fragrant oil.
Then with Telemachus the social feast
Partaking free, my sole invited guest;
Whoe'er neglects to pay distinction due,
The breach of hospitable right may rue.
The vulgar of my sex I most exceed
In real fame, when most humane my deed;
And vainly to the praise of queen aspire,
If, stranger! I permit that mean attire
Beneath the feastful bower. A narrow space
Confines the circle of our destin'd race;
'Tis ours with good the scanty round to grace,
Those who to cruel wroug their state abuse,
Dreaded in life the mutter'd curse pursues;
By death disrob'd of all their savage powers,
Then, licens'd rage her hateful prey devours.
But he whose in-born worth his acts commend,
Of gentle soul, to human race a friend;
The wretched he relieves diffuse his fame,
And distant tongues extol the patron-name.
Princess, he cry'd, in vain your bounties flow
On me, confirm'd and obstinate in woe.
When my lov'd Crete receiv'd my final view,
And from my weeping eyes her cliffs withdrew;
These tatter'd weeds (my decent robe resign'd)
I chose, the livery of a woeful mind!
Nor will my heart-corroding cares abate
With splendid palls, and canopies of state:
Low couch'd on earth, the gift of sleep I scorn,
And catch the glances of the waking morn;
The delicacy of your courtly train
To wash a wretched wanderer would disdain;
But if, in tract of long experience try'd,
And sad similitude of woes ally'd,
Some wretch reluctant views aerial light,
To her mean hand assign the friendly rite.

Plea'd with his wise reply, the queen rejoin'd:
Such gentle manners, and so sage a mind,
In all who gra'd this hospitable bower
I ne'er discern'd, before this social hour.
Such servant as your humble choice requires,
'To light receiv'd the lord of my desires,
New from the birth: and with a mother's hand
His tender bloom to manly growth sustain'd:
Of matchless prudence, and a duteous mind:
Though now to life's extremest verge declin'd
Of strength superior to the toil assign'd.—

Rise, Euryclea, with officious care
For the poor friend the cleansing bath prepare:
This debt his correspondent fortunes claim,
Too like Ulysses, and perhaps the same!
Thus, old, with woes, my fancy paints him now!
For age untimely marks the careful brow.

Instant, obsequious to the mild command,
Sad Euryclea rose: with trembling hand
She veils the torrent of her tearful eyes;
And thus impassion'd to herself replies:

Son of my love, and monarch of my cares!
What pangs for thee this wretched bosom bears;
Are thus by Jove who'constant beg his aid
With pious deed, and pure devotion, paid?
He never dar'd defraud the sacred fane,
Of perfect hecatombs in order slain:
There oft implor'd his tutelary power,
Long to protract the sad sepulchral hour;
That, form'd for empire with paternal care,
His realm might recognise an equal heir,
O destin'd head! The pious vows are lost;
His God forgets him on a foreign coast!—
Perhaps, like thee, poor guest! in wanton pride
The rich insult him, and the young deride!
Conscious of worth revil'd, thy generous mind
The friendly rite of purity declin'd;
My will concurring with my queen’s command, Accept the bath from this obsequious hand. A strong emotion shakes my anguish’d breast: In thy whole form Ulysses seems express’d: Of all the wretched harbour’d on our coast, None imag’d here like thee my master lost. Thus half discover’d through the dark disguise, With cool composure feign’d, the chief replies: You join your suffrage to the public vote; The same you think, have all beholders thought.

He said: replenish’d from the purest springs, The layer straight with busy care she brings: In the deep vase, that shone like burnish’d gold, The boiling fluid temperates the cold. Meantime revolving in his thoughtful mind The scar, with which his manly knee was sign’d; His face averting from the crackling blaze, His shoulders intercept th’ unfriendly rays: Thus cautious in the obscure he hop’d to fly The curious search of Euryclea’s eye. Cautious in vain! nor ceas’d the dame to find The scar with which his manly knee was sign’d.

This on Parnassus (combating the boar) With glancing rage the tusky savage tore. Attended by his brave maternal race, His grandsire sent him to the sylvan chase, Autolycus the bold (a mighty name) For spotless faith and deeds of martial fame: Hermes his patron-god, those gifts bestow’d, Whose shrine with weanling lambs he wont to load). His course to Ithaca this hero sped; When the first product of Laërtes’ bed Was new disclos’d to birth; the banquet ends, When Euryclea from the queen descends, And to his fond embrace the babe commends. “Receive, she cries, your royal daughter’s son; “And name the blessing that your pray’rs have won.” Then thus the hoary chief, “My victor arms “Have aw’d the realms around with dire alarms: O
A surc memorial of my dreaded fame
The boy shall bear; Ulysses be his name!
And when with filial love the youth shall come
To view his mother’s soil, my Delphic dome
With gifts of price shall send him joyous home.”
Lur’d with the promis’d boon, when youthful prime
Ended in man, his mother’s natal clime
Ulysses sought; with fond affection dear
Amphithea’s arms receiv’d the royal heir:
Her ancient lord* an equal joy possest;
Instant he bade prepare the genial feast:
A steer to form the sumptuous banquet bled,
Whose stately growth five flowery summers fed:
His sons divide, and roast with artful care
The limbs; then all the tasteful viands share.
Nor ceas’d discourse, (the banquet of the soul)
Till Phoebus wheeling to the western goal
Resign’d the skies, and night involv’d the pole.
Their drooping eyes the slumberous shade opprest,
Sated they rose, and all retir’d to rest.

Soon as the morn, new-rob’d in purple light,
Pierc’d with her golden shafts the rear of night,
Ulysses, and his brave maternal race
The young Autolyce, assay the chase.
Parnassus, thick perplex’d with horrid shades,
With deep-mouth’d hounds, th’ hunter-troop invades;
What time the sun, from ocean’s peaceful stream,
Darts o’er the lawn his horizontal beam.
The pack impatient sniff the tainted gale;
The thorny wilds the woodmen fierce assail:
And, foremost of the train, his cornel spear
Ulysses wav’d, to rouse the savage war.

Deep in the rough recesses of the wood,
A lofty copse, the growth of ages, stood;
Nor winter’s boreal blast, nor thunderous shower,
Nor solar ray, could pierce the shady bower.
With wither’d foliage strew’d, a heapy store!
The warm pavilion of a dreadful boar.
Rous’d by the hounds’ and hunters’ mingling cries,
The savage from his leafy shelter flies:

* Autolyce.
With fiery glare his sanguine eye-balls shine,
And bristles high impale his horrid chine.
Young Ithacus advance'd, deifies the foe,
Poising his lifted lance in act to throw;
The savage renders vain the wound decreed,
And springs impetuous with opponent speed;
His tusks oblique he aim'd, the knee to gore;
Asleep they glance'd, the sinewy fibres tore,
And bar'd the bone: Ulysses undismay'd,
Soon with redoubted force the wound repay'd;
To the right shoulder-joint the spear apply'd:
His further flanks with streaming purple dy'd:
On earth he rush'd with agonising pain;
With joy and vast surprise, th' applauding train
View'd his enormous bulk extended on the plain.
With bandage firm Ulysses' knee they bound;
Then, chanting mystic lays, the closing wound
Of sacred meleony confess'd the force;
The tides of life regain'd their o'er course.
Then back they led the youth with loud acclaim;
Autolycus, enamour'd with his fame,
Confirm'd the cure: and from the Delphic stone
With added gifts return'd him glorious home.
He safe at Ithaca with joy receiv'd,
Relates the chase, and early praise achieve'd.
Deep o'er his knee inseam'd, remain'd the scar:
Which noted token of the woodland war
When Euryclea found, th' ablation cease'd:
Down dropp'd the leg, from her slack hand releas'd;
The mingled fluids from the vase rebound;
The vase reclining floats the floor around!
Smiles dew'd with tears the pleasing strife express
Of grief and joy, alternate in her breast.
Her fluttering words in melting murmurs died;
At length abrupt—My son!—my king!—she cried.
His neck with fond embrace infolding fast,
Full on the queen her raptur'd eye she cast;
Ardent to speak the monarch safe restor'd:
But studious to conceal her royal lord,
Minerva fix'd her mind on views remote,
And from the present bliss abstracts her thought.
His hand to Euryclea's mouth apply'd;
Art thou foredoom'd my pest? the hero cry'd:
Thy milky founts my infant lips have drain'd:
And have the Fates thy babbling age ordain'd
To violate the life thy youth sustain'd?
An exile have I told, with weeping eyes,
Full twenty annual suns in distant skies:
At length return'd, some god inspires thy breast
To know thy king, and here I stand confest.
This heaven-discover'd truth to thee consign'd,
Reserve the treasure of thy inmost mind:
Else, if the gods my vengeful arm sustain,
And prostrate to my sword the suitors-tain;
With their lewd mates, thy undistinguish'd age
Shall bleed a victim to vindictive rage.

Then thus rejoind the dame, devoid of fear:
What words, my son, have pass'd thy lips severe?
Deep in my soul the trust shall lodge secure;
With ribs of steel, and marble heart, immur'd.
When Heaven, suspicous to thy right avow'd,
Shall prostrate to thy sword the suitors-crowd;
The deeds I'll blazon of the menial fair;
The lewd to death devote, the virtuous spare.

Thy aid avails me not, the chief reply'd;
My own experience shall their doom decide;
A witness-judge precludes a long appeal:
Suffice it thee thy monarch to conceal.

He said: obsequious, with redoubled pace,
She to the fount conveys th' exhausted vase:
The bath renew'd, she ends the pleasing toil
With plenteous unction of ambrosial oil.
Adjusting to his limbs the tatter'd vest,
His former seat receiv'd the stranger-guest;
Whom thus with pensive air the queen address.

Though night, dissolving grief in grateful ease,
Your drooping eyes with soft oppression seize:
Awhile, reluctant to her pleasing force,
Suspend the restful hour with sweet discourse.
The day (ne'er brighten'd with a beam of joy!)
My mental, and domestic cares employ:
And, unattended by sincere repose,
The night assists my ever-wakeful woes:
When nature's hush'd beneath her brooding shade,
My echoing griefs the starry vault invade.
As when the months are clad in flowery green,
Sad Philomel, in bowery shades unseen,
Te-vernial airs attunes her varied strains;
And Itylus sounds warbling o'er the plains:
Young Itylus, his parent's darling joy!
Whom chance misled the mother to destroy;
Now doom'd a wakeful bird to wait the beauteous boy.
So in nocturnal solitude forlorn,
A sad variety of woes I mourn!
My mind, reflective, in a thorny maze
Devises from care to care incessant strays.
Now, wavering doubt succeeds to long despair;
Shall I my virgin-nuptial-love revere?
And, joining to my son's my menial train,
Partake his councils, and assist his reign?
Or, since, mature in manhood, he deplores
His dome dishonour'd, and exhausted stores;
Shall I, reluctant! to his will accord;
And from the peers select the noblest lord;
So by my choice avow'd, at length decide
These wasteful love-debates, a mourning bride?
A visionary thought I'll now relate.
Illustrate; if you know, the shadow'd fate.
A team of twenty geese (a snow-white train!)
Fed near the limpid lake with golden grain,
Amuse my pensive hours. The bird of Jove
Fierce from his mountain-skyrie downward drove;
Each favourite fowl he pounce'd with deathful sway,
And back triumphant wing'd his airy way,
My pitying eyes effus'd a plenteous stream,
To view their death thus imag'd in a dream:
With tender sympathy to soothe my soul,
A troop of matrons, fancy-form'd, condole.
But whilst with grief and rage my bosom burn'd,
Sudden the tyrant of the skies return'd:
Perch'd on the battlements he thus began
(In form an eagle, but in voice a man):
O queen! no vulgar vision of the sky
I come, prophetic of approaching joy:
View in this plumpy form thy victor-lord;
The geese (a glutton race) by thee deplored,
Portend the suitors fated to my sword.

This said, the pleasing feather'd queen ceased.
When, from the doowy bands of sleep released,
Fast by the limpid lake my swan-like train
I found, insatiate of the golden grain.

The vision self-explain'd (the chief replies)
Sincere reveals the sanction of the skies:
Ulysses speaks his own return decreed;
And by his sword the suitors sure to bleed.
Hard is the task, and rare, the queen rejoin'd,
Impending destinies in dreams to find:
Immur'd within the silent bower of sleep,
Two portals firm the various phantoms keep:
Of ivory one; whence flit, to mock the brain,
Of winged lies a light fantastic train:
The gate oppos'd pellucid valves adorn,
And columns fair incas'd with polish'd horn:
Where images of truth for passage wait,
With visions manifest of future fate.
Not to this troop, I fear, that phantom soar'd,
Which spok'd Ulysses to his realm restor'd:
Delusive semblance!—but my remnant life
Heaven shall determine in a gameful strife:
With that fam'd bow Ulysses taught to bend,
For me the rival archers shall contend
As on the listed field he use'd to place
Six beams, oppos'd to six, in equal space:
Elanc'd afar by his unerring art,
Sure through six circlers flew the whissing dart.
So, when the sun restores the purple day,
Their strength and skill the suitors shall assay:
To him the spousal honour is decreed,
Who through the rings directs the feather'd reed.
Torn from these walls (where long the blind powers
With pomp and joy have wing'd my youthful hours!)
BOOK XIX. THE ODYSSEY.

On this poor breast no dawn of bliss shall beam;
The pleasure past supplies a copious theme
For many a dreary thought, and many a doleful dream!

Propose the sportive lot, the chief replies,
Nor dread to name yourself the bowyer's prize:
Ulysses will surprise th' unfinished game
Avow'd, and falsify the suitors' claim.

To whom with grace serene, the queen rejoind:
In all thy speech what pleasing force I find!
O'er my suspended woe, thy words prevail,
I part reluctant from the pleasing tale.

But Heaven, that knows what all terrestrials need,
Repose to night, and toil to day decreed;
Grateful vicissitude! yet me withdrawn,
Wakeful to weep and watch the tardy dawn
Establish'd use enjoins; to rest and joy
Estrang'd, since dear Ulysses sail'd to Troy!
Meantime instructed is the menial tribe
Your couch to fashion as yourself prescribe.

Thus affable, her bower the queen ascends;
The sovereign step a beauteous train attends;
There imag'd to her soul Ulysses rose;
Down her pale cheek new-streaming sorrow flows;
Till soft oblivious shade Minerva spread,
And o'er her eyes ambrosial slumber shed.
ARGUMENT.

While Ulysses lies in the vestibule of the palace, he is witness to the disorders of the women. Minerva comforts him and casts him asleep. At his waking he desires a favourable sign from Jupiter, which is granted. The feast of Apollo is celebrated by the people, and the suitors banquet in the palace. Telemachus exerts his authority amongst them, notwithstanding which, Ulysses is insulted by Ctesippus, and the rest continue in their excesses. Strange prodigies are seen by Theoclymenus the augur, who explains them to the destruction of the wooers.
BOOK XX.

An ample hide divine Ulysses spread,
And form'd of fleecy skins his humble bed
(The remnants of the spoil the saunter-crowd
In festival devour'd, and victims vow'd),
Then o'er the chief, Eurysemè the chaste
With duteous care a downy carpet cast:
With dire revenge his thoughtful bosom glows,
And, ruminating wrath, he scarce reposeth.

As thus pavilion'd in the porch he lay,
Scenes of lewd loves his wakeful eyes survey,
Whilst to nocturnal joys impure, repair,
With wanton glee, the prostituted fair.
His heart with rage this new dishonour stung,
Waverings his thoughts in dubious balance hung;
Or instant should he quench the guilty flame
With their own blood, and intercept the shame;
Or to their lust indulge a last embrace,
And let the peers consummate the disgrace;
Round his swain heart the murmurous fury rolls;
As o'er her young the mother-mastiff growls,
And bays the stranger-groom: so wrath compest
Recoiling, mutter'd thunder in his breast.
Poor suffering heart! he cry'd, support the pain
Of wounded honour, and thy rage restrain.
Not fiercer woes thy fortitude could feel,
When the brave partners of thy ten years' toil
Dire Polyphemè devour'd: I then was freed
By patient prudence from the death decreed.

Thus anchor'd safe on reason's peaceful coast;
Tempests of wrath his soul no longer test;
Restless his body rolls, to rage resign'd:
As one who longs with pale-eyed famine pined,
The savoury cates on glowing embers cast
Incessant turns, impatient for repast;
Ulysses so, from side to side devolv'd,
In self-debate the suitors' doom resolv'd.

O 2
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK XX.

When, in the form of mortal nymph array'd,
From heaven descends the Jove-born martial maid;
And hovering o'er his head in view confess'd,
The goddess thus her favourite care address'd:

Oh thou, of mortals most inur'd to woes!
Why roll those eyes unfriend'd of repose?
Beneath thy palace roof forget thy care;
Blest in thy queen! blest in thy blooming hair!
Whom, to the gods when suppliant fathers bow,
They name the standard of their dearest vow.

Just is thy kind reproach (the chief rejoin'd),
Deeds full of fate distract my various mind,
In contemplation wrapt. This hostile crew
What single arm hath prowess to subdue?
Or if, by Jove's and thy auxiliar aid,
They're doom'd to bleed; O say, celestial maid!
Where shall Ulysses shun, or how sustain,
Nations embattled to revenge the slain?

Oh impotence of faith! Minerva cries,
If man on frail unknowing man relies.
Doubt you the gods? Lo Pallas' self descends,
Inspires thy counsels, and thy toils attends.
In me affianc'd, fortify thy breast,
Though myriads leagu'd thy rightful claim contest:
My sure divinity shall bear the shield,
And edge thy sword to reap the glorious field.
Now, pay the debt to craving nature due,
Her faded powers with balmy rest renew.
She cease'd, ambrosial slumbers seal his eyes;
His care dissolves in visionary joys:
The goddess, pleas'd, regains her natal skies.

Not so the queen: the downy bands of sleep
By grief relax'd, she wak'd again to weep:
A gloomy pause ensu'd of dumb despair;
Then thus her fate invok'd with fervent prayer.

Diana! speed thy deathful ebon dart,
And cure the pangs of this convulsive heart.
Snatch me, ye whirlwinds! far from human race,
Tost through the void illimitable space:
Or if, dismounted from the rapid cloud,
Me with his whelming wave let Ocean shroud;
BOOK XX.  THE ODYSSEY.

So, Pandarus, thy hopes, three orphan-fair,
Were doom'd to wander through the devious air;
Thyself untimely, and thy consort dy'd,
But four celestials both your cares supply'd:
Venus in tender delicacy rears
With honey, milk, and wine, their infant years:
Imperial Juno to their youth assign'd
A form majestic, and sagacious mind:
With shapely growth Diana grac'd their bloom;
And Pallas taught the texture of the loom.
But whilst, to learn their lots in nuptial love,
Bright Cytherea sought the bower of Jove
(The god supreme, to whose eternal eye
The registers of fate expanded lie);
Wing'd Harpies snatch th' unguarded charge away,
And to the Furies bore a grateful prey.
Be such my lot! Or thou, Diana, speed
Thy shaft, and send me joyful to the dead;
To seek my lord among the warrior-train,
Ere second vows my bridal faith profane.
When woes the waking sense alone assail;
Whilst night extends her soft oblivious veil,
Of other wretches care the torture ends:
No truce the warfare of my heart suspends!
The night renews the day distracting theme,
And airy terrors sable every dream.
The last alone a kind illusion wrought,
And to my bed my lov'd Ulysses brought,
In manly bloom, and each majestic grace,
As when for Troy he left my fond embrace;
Such raptures in my beating bosom rise,
I deem it sure a vision of the skies.

Thus, whilst Aurora mounts her purple throne,
In audible laments she breathes her moan;
The sounds assault Ulysses' wakeful ear:
Misjudging of the cause, a sudden fear
Of his arrival known, the chief alarms;
He thinks the queen is rushing to his arms.
Upspringing from his couch, with active haste
The fleece and carpet in the dome he plac'd—
THE ODYSSEY.

BOOK XX.

(The hide, without, imbib'd the morning air);
And thus the gods invok'd with ardent prayer.

Jove, and ethereal thrones! with Heaven to friend
If the long series of my woes shall end;

Of human race now rising from repose,
Let one a blissful omen here disclose;

And, to confirm my faith, propitious Jove!
Vouchsafe the sanction of a sign above.

Whilst lowly thus the chief adoring bows,
The pitying god his guardian aid avows.

Loud from a sapphire sky his thunder sounds;
With springing hope the hero's heart rebounds.

Soon, with consummate joy to crown his prayer,
An omen'd voice invades his ravish'd ear.

Beneath a pile that close the dome adjoin'd,
Twelve female slaves the gift of Ceres grind;

Task'd for the royal board to bolt the bran
From the pure flour (the growth and strength of man).

Discharging to the day the labour due,

Now early to repose the rest withdrew;
One maid, unequal to the task assign'd.

Still turn'd the toilsome mill with anxious mind;
And thus in bitterness of soul divin'd.

Father of gods and men, whose thunders roll
O'er the cerulean vault, and shake the pole:

Who'er from Heaven has gain'd this rare ostent
(Of granted vows a certain signal sent)

In this blest moment of accepted prayer,

Piteous, regard a wretch consum'd with care!

Instant, O Jove! confound the suitor-train,

For whom o'ertool'd, I grind the golden grain:

Far from this dome the lewd devourers cast,

And be this festival decreed their last!

Big with their doom denounc'd in earth and sky,

Ulysses' heart dilates with secret joy.

Meantime the menial train with unctuous wood
Heap'd high the genial hearth, Vulcanian food:

When, early dress'd, advanc'd the royal heir:

With manly grasp he wav'd a martial spear,

A radiant sabre grac'd his purple zone,

And on his foot the golden sandal shone.
BOOK XV.  THE ODYSSEY.

His steps impetuous to the portal press'd;
And Eurycles thus he there address'd:

"Say thou, to whom my youth its nurture owes,
Was care for due refection and repose
Bestow'd the stranger-guest? Or waits he griev'd,
His age not honour'd, nor his wants reliev'd?
Promiscuous grace on all the queen confers
(In woes bewilder'd, oft the wisest errs).
The wordy vagrant to the dole aspires,
And modest worth with noble scorn retires.

She thus: 'O cease that ever-honour'd name
To blench now: it ill deserves your blame;
A bowl of generous wine suffic'd the guest;
In vain the queen the night-reflection prest;
Nor would he court repose in downy state,
Unblest'd, abandon'd to the rage of Fate!
A hide beneath the portico was spread,
And sœcy skins compos'd an humble bed:
A downy carpet cast with duteous care,
Secur'd him from the keen nocturnal air.

His cornel javelin pois'd, with regal port,
To the sage Greeks conven'd in Themis' court,
Forth-issuing from the dome the prince repair'd;
Two dogs of chase, a lion-hearted guard,
Behind him sourly stalk'd. Without delay
The dame divides the labour of the day;
Thus urging to the toil the menial train.
What marks of luxury the marble stain!
Its wonted lustre let the floor regain;
The seats with purple clothe in orderDue;
And let th' abstervative sponge the board renew?
Let some refresh the vase's sullied mold:
Some bid the goblets boast their native gold:
Some to the spring, with each a jar, repair,
And copious waters pure for bathing bear:
Dispatch! for soon the suitors will assay
The lunar feast-rites to the god of day.

She said; with duteous haste a bevy fair
Of twenty virgins to the spring repair:
With varied toils the rest adorn the dome.
Magnificent and blithe, the suitors come.
Some wield the sounding ax; the dodder'd oaks divide, obedient to the forceful strokes.
Soon from the fount, with each a brimming urn (Eumaeus in her train), the maids return.
Three porkers for the feast, all brawny-chin'd,
He brought; the choicest of the tusky kind:
In lodgements first secure his care he view'd,
Then to the king his friendly speech renew'd:
Now say sincere, my guest! the suitor-train.
Still treat thy worth with lordly dull disdain:
Or speaks their deed a bounteous mind humane?
Some pitying god (Ulysses sad reply'd)
With vellied vengeance blast their towering pride!
No conscious blush, no sense of right, restrains
The tides of lust that swell their boiling veins:
From vice to vice their appetites are lost,
All cheaply sated at another's cost!
While thus the chief his woes indignant told,
Melanthius, master of the bearded fold,
The goodliest goats of all the royal herd
Spontaneous to the suitors' feast preferr'd:
Two grooms assistant bore the victims bound;
With quavering cries the vaulted roofs resound:
And to the chief austere aloud began
The wretch unfriendly to the race of man.
Here, vagrant, still? offensive to my lords!
Blows have more energy than airy words;
These arguments I'll use: nor conscious shame,
Nor threats, thy bold intrusion will reclaim.
On this high feast the meanest vulgar boast
A plenteous board! hence! seek another host!
Rejoinder to the churl the king disdain'd,
But shook his head, and rising wrath restrain'd.
From Cephalenia cross the surgy main
Philistins late arriv'd, a faithful swain.
A steer ungrateful to the bull's embrace,
And goats he brought, the pride of all their race;
Imported in a shallop not his own:
The dome re-echoed to their mingled moan.
Straight to the guardian of the bristly kind
He thus began, benevolent of mind.
BOOK XX. THE ODYSSEY.

What guest is he, of such majestic air?
His lineage and paternal clime declare:
Dim through the eclipse of fate, the rays divine
Of sovereign state with faded splendor shine,
If monarchs by the gods are plunged in woe,
To what abyss are we foredoom'd to go!
Then affable he thus the chief address'd,
Whilst with pathetic warmth his hand he press'd.

Stranger, may fate a milder aspect shew,
And spin thy future with a whiter clue!
O Jove! for ever deaf to human cries;
The tyrant, not the father of the skies!
Unpitiful of the race thy will began!
The fool of fate, thy manufacture, man,
With penury, contempt, repulse, and care,
The galling load of life is doom'd to bear.
Ulysses from his state a wanderer still,
Upbraids thy power, thy wisdom, or thy will!
O monarch ever dear!—O man of woe!—
Fresh flow my tears, and shall for ever flow!
Like thee, poor stranger-guest, deny'd his home!
Like thee, in rags obscene decreed to roam!
Or, haply perish'd on some distant coast,
In Stygian gloom the glides, a pensive ghost!
O, grateful for the good his bounty gave,
'Til grieve, till sorrow sink me to the grave!
His kind protecting hand my youth preferr'd,
The regent of his Cephalenian herd:
With vast increase beneath my care it spreads:
A stately breed! and blackens far the meads.
Constrain'd, the choicest beves I thence import,
To cram these cormorants that crowd his court;
Who in partition seek his realm to share;
Nor human right, nor wrath divine reverse:
Since here resolv'd oppressive these reside,
Contending doubts my anxious heart divide:
Now to some foreign clime inclin'd to fly,
And with the royal herd protection buy:
Then, happier thoughts return the nodding scale,
Light mounts despair, alternate hopes prevail.
In opening prospects of ideal joy,
My king returns; the proud usurpers die.
To whom the chief: In thy capacious mind
Since daring seal with cool debate is join'd;
Attend a deed already ripe in fate;
Attest, oh Jove! the truth I now relate!
This sacred truth attest, each genial power,
Who bless the board, and guard this friendly bower!
Before thou quit the dome (nor long delay)
Thy wish produc'd in act, with pleas'd survey,
Thy wondering eyes shall view: his rightful reign
By arms avow'd Ulysses shall regain,
And to the shades devote the suitor-train.
O Jove supreme! the raptur'd swain replies,
With deeds consummate soon the promis'd joys!
These aged nerves, with new-born vigour strung,
In that blest cause should emulate the young—
Assents Eumæus to the prayer addrest;
And equal ardours fire his loyal breast.
Meantime the suitors urge the prince's fate,
And deathful arts employ the dire debate:
When in his airy tour, the bird of Jove
Truss'd with his sinewy pounce a trembling dove;
Sinister to their hope! This omen ey'd
Amphinomus, who thus presaging cry'd.
The gods from force and fraud the prince defend;
O peers! the sanguinary scheme suspend:
Your future thought let sable fate employ;
And give the present hour to genial joy.

From council straight th' assenting,
And in the dome prepar'd the genial feast.
Distract'd, their vests apart in order lay.
Then all with speed succinct the victims play,
With sheep and shaggy goats the porkers blest.
And the proud steer was on the marble spread.
With fire prepar'd, they deal the morsels round.
Wine rosy-bright the brimming goblets crown'd,
By sage Eumæus borue; the purple tide
Melanthius from an ample jar supply'd:
High canisters of bread th' histianus plac'd;
And eager all devour the rich repast.
Dispos'd apart, Ulysses shares the treat;
A crivet table, and ignobler seat,
The prince appoints; but to his sire assigns
The tasteful inwards, and nectarous wines.

Partake, my guest, he cry'd, without control
The social feast, and drain the cheering bowl:
Dread not the raider's laugh, nor ruffian's rage;
Nor vulgar roof protects thy honour'd age;
This dome a refuge to thy wrongs shall be,
From my great sire too soon devolv'd to me!
Your violence and scorn, ye suitors, cease,
Lest arms avenge the violated peace.

Aw'd by the prince, so haughty, brave, and young,
Rage 'gan w'd the lip, amazement chain'd the tongue.
Be patient, peers! at length Antinœus cries;
The threats of vain imperious youth despise:
Would Jove permit the meditated blow,
That stream of eloquence should cease to flow.

Without reply vouchsaf'd, Antinœus ceas'd:
Meanwhile the pomp of festival increas'd:
By heralds rank'd, in marshall'd order move
The city tribes, to pleas'd Apollo's grove:
Beneath the verdure of which awful shade,
The lunar hecatomb they grateful laid;
Partook the sacred feast, and ritual honours paid.
But the rich banquet, in the dome prepar'd
(An humble sideboard set) Ulysses shar'd.
Observant of the prince's high behest,
His menial train attend the stranger-guest:
Whom falling with unpardoning fury fir'd,
By lordly pride and keen reproach inspir'd.
A Samian peer, more studious than the rest
Of vice, who seem'd with many a dead-born jest;
And cry'd, for title to a consort queen,
Unumber'd acres arable and green
(Ceasippus nam'd); this lord Ulysses ey'd,
And thus burst out th' imposthumes with pride.

The sentence I propose, ye peers, attend:
Since due regard must wait the prince's friend
Let each a token of esteem bestow;
This gift acquits the dear respect I owe;
With which he nobly may discharge his seat,
And pay the menials for the master's treat.
He said: and of the steer before him plac'd,
That sinewy fragment at Ulysses cast,
Where to the pastera-bone, by nerves combin'd,
The well-born'd foot, indissolubly join'd;
Which whisssing high the wall unseemly sign'd.
The chief indignant grins a ghastly smile;
Revenge and scorn within his bosom boil:
When thus the prince with pious race inflam'd:
Had not ta' inglorious wound thy malice aim'd
Fall'n guiltless of the mark, my certain spear.
Had made thee buy the brutal triumph dear:
Nor should thy sire, a queen his daughter boast;
The suitor, now, had vanish'd in a ghost:
No more, ye lewd compers, with lawless power
Invade my dome, my harts and flocks devour:
For genuine worth, of age mature to know,
My grape shall redden, and my harvest grow.
Or, if each other's wrongs ye still support,
With rapes and riot to profane my court;
What single arm with numbers can contend?
On me let all your lifted swords descend,
And with my life such vile dishonours end.
A long cessation of discourse ensu'd,
By gentler Agelaüs thus renew'd.
A just reproof, ye peers! your rage restrain
From the protected guest, and menial train:
And, prince! to stop the source of future ill,
Assent yourself, and gain the royal will,
Whilst hope prevail'd to see your sire restor'd,
Of right the queen refus'd a second lord;
But who so vain of faith, so blind to fate?
To think he still survives to claim the state?
Now press the sovereign dame with warm desire
To wed, as wealth or worth her choice inspire:
The last selected to the nuptial joys,
For hence will lead the long-contested prize:
Whilst in paternal pomp with plenty blest,
You reign, of this imperial dome possess.
Sage and severe Telemachus replies:
By him, at whose behest the thunder rolls,
And by whose counsel wise he most revere,
By great Ulysses and his woe I swear!
(Who never must review his dear domain;
Earl of Yd, perhaps, in Plato’s dreary train).
Wherever her choice the royal damsel awa,
My bridal gift shall load the future spouse:
But from this doing my parent queen to cease!
From me, ye gods! avert such dire disgrace.
But Pallas clouds with intellectual gloom.
The suitors’ souls, incessant of their doom!
A mirthful phrenzy saith’st the fretted crowd;
The roofs resound with caustic laughter loud:
Floating in gore, portentous to survey;
In each dis-colour’d vase the viands lay:
Then down each cheek the tears spontaneous flow,
And sudden sighs precede approaching woe.
In vision wrapt, the Hyperborean sees?
Uprose, and thus divin’d the vengeance near.
O race, to death devote! with Stygian shade
Each destin’d peer impending fates invade:
With tears your wan distorted cheeks are drownded;
With sanguine drops the walls are rubbed round:
Thick swarms the spacious hall with howling ghosts;
To people Orcus, and the burning coasts:
Nor gives the sun his golden orb to roll,
But universal night usurps the pole!
Yet warn’d in vain, with laughter loud elate
The peers reproach the sure divine of Fate;
And thus Eurymachus: the dotard’s mind
To every sense is lost, to reason blind:
Swift from the dome conduct the slave away;
Let him in open air behold the day.
Tax not (the Heaven-illumin’d seer rejoind’d)
Of rage, or folly, my prophetic mind.
No clouds of error dim th’ ethereal rays,
Her equal power each faithful sense obeys.
Unguided hence my trembling steps I bend,
Far hence, before you bovering deaths descend;
Theoclymenus.
Lost the ripe harvest of revenge begun,
I share the doom ye suitor: cannot shun.

This said, to sage Phœbus sped the seer,
His honour'd host, a welcome inmate there.
O'er the protracted feast the suitors sit,
And aim to wound the prince with pointless wit:
Cries one, with scornful leer and mimic voice,
Thy charity we praise, but not thy choice;
Why such profusion of indulgence shown
To this poor, timorous, toil-detesting drone!
That others feed on planetary schemes,
And pays his host with hideous noon-day dreams.
But, prince! for once at least believe a friend,
To some Sicilian mart these courtiers send,
Where, if they yield their freight across the main,
Dear sell the slaves! demand no greater gain.

Thus jovial they! but nought the prince replies;
Full on his sire he roll'd his ardent eyes;
Impatient straight to flash his virgin-sword;
From the wise chief he waits the deathful word.
Nigh in her bright alcove, the pensive queen
To see the circlet sate, of all unseen.
Set at length they rise, and bid prepare
An eve-repeat with equal cost and care:
But vengeful Pallas, with preventing speed,
A feast proportion'd to their crimes, decreed;
A feast of death, the feasters doom'd to bleed!
ARGUMENT.

The Bending of Ulysses's Bow.

Penelope, to put an end to the solicitation of the suitors, proposes to marry the person who shall first bend the bow of Ulysses, and shoot through the ringlets. After their attempts have proved ineffectual, Ulysses, taking Eumæus and Philætius apart, discovers himself to them; then returning, desires leave to try his strength at the bow, which, though refused with indignation by the suitors, Penelope and Telemachus cause it to be delivered to his hands. He bends it immediately, and shoots through all the rings. Jupiter at the same instant thunders from heaven; Ulysses accepts the omen, and gives a sign to Telemachus, who stands ready armed at his side.
BOOK XXI.

AND Pallas now, to raise the rival fires,
   With her own art Penelope inspires:
Who now can bend Ulysses' bow, and wing
   The well-aim'd arrow through the distant ring,
Shall end the strife, and win th' imperial dame; 6
But discord and black death await the game!

The prudent queen the lofty stair ascends,
At distance due, a virgin-train attends;
A brazen key she held, the handle turn'd,
With steel and polish'd elephant adorn'd: 10
Swift to the inmost room she bent her way,
Where, safe repos'd, the royal treasures lay;
There shone high hepp'd the labour'd brass and ore,
And there the bow which great Ulysses bore;
And there the quiver, where now guiltless slept 15
Those winged deaths that many a matron wept.

This gift, long since when Sparta's shores he trod,
On young Ulysses Iphitus bestow'd:
Beneath Orsilochus's roof they met;
One loss was private, one a public debt; 20
Messena's state from Ithaca detain'd
Three hundred sheep, and all the shepherd swains;
And to the youthful prince to urge the laws,
The king and elders trust their common cause.
But Iphitus employ'd on other cares,
Search'd the wide country for his wandering mares,
And mules, the strongest of the labouring kind;
Hapless to search! more hapless still to find!
For journeying on to Hercules, at length
That lawless wretch, that man of brutal strength, 30
Deaf to Heaven's voice, the social rite transgress;
And for the beauteous mares destroy'd his guest.
He gave the bow; and 'on Ulysses' part
Receiv'd a pointed sword, and missile dart:
Of luckless friendship on a foreign shore 35
Their first, last pledges! for they met no more.
The bow, bequeath'd by this unhappy hand,
Ulysses bore not from his native land;
Nor in the front of battle taught to bend,
But kept in dear memorial of his friend.

Now gently winding up the fair ascent,
By many an easy step the matron went;
Then o'er the pavements glides with grace diviné
(With polish'd oak the level pavements shine);
The folding gates a dazzling light display'd,
With pomp of various architrave o'erlaid.
The bolt, obedient to the silken string,
Forsakes the staple as she pulls the ring;
The wards respondant to the key turn round;
The bars fall back; the flying valves resound;
Loud as a bull makes hill and valley ring,
So roar'd the lock when it releas'd the spring.
She moves majestic through the wealthy room,
Where treasure'd garments cast a rich perfume;
There from the column where aloft it hung,
Reach'd, in its splendid case, the bow unstrung;
Across her knees she laid the well-known bow,
And pensive sate, and tears began to flow.
To full satiety of grief she mourns,
Then silent to the joyous hall returns,
To the proud suitors bears in pensive state
Th' unbended bow, and arrows wing'd with fate.

Behind, her train the polish'd coffers brings,
Which held th' alternate brass and silver rings,
Full in the portal the chaste queen appears,
And with her veil conceals the coming tears:
On either side awaits a virgin fair;
While thus the matron, with majestic air,
Say you, whom these forbidden walls inclose,
For whom my victims bleed, my vintage flows;
If these neglected faded charms can move?
Or is it but a vain pretence, you love?
If I the prize, if me you seek to win,
Hear the conditions, and commence the strife.
Who first Ulysses' wondrous bow shall bend,
And through twelve ringlets the fleet arrow send,
Him will I follow, and forsake my home,
For him forsake this lov'd, this wealthy dome,
Long, long the scene of all my past delight,
And still to last the vision of my night!
Graceful she said, and bade Eumæus show
The rival peers the ringlets and the bow.
From his full eyes the tears unbidden spring,
Touch'd at the dear memorials of his king.
Philætius too relents, but secret shed
The tender drops. Antinoüs saw, and said.

Hence to your fields, ye rustics! hence away,
Nor stain with grief the pleasures of the day:
Nor to the royal heart recall in vain
The sad remembrance of a perish'd man.
Enough her precious tears already flow—
Or share the feast with due respect, or go
To weep abroad, and leave to us the bow:
No vulgar task! Ill suits this courtly crew,
That stubborn horn which brave Ûlysses drew.
I well remember (for I gaz'd him o'er
While yet a child,) what majesty he bore!
And still (all infant as I was) retain
The port, the strength, the grandeur of the man.

He said, but in his soul fond joys arise,
And his proud hopes already win the prize.
To speed the flying shaft through every ring,
Wretch! is not thine? the arrows of the king
Shall end those hopes, and fate is on the wing!

Then thus Telemachus: Some god I find
With pleasing phrenzy has possess'd my mind;
When a lov'd mother threatens to depart,
Why with this ill-tim'd gladness leaps my heart?
Come then, ye suitors! and dispute a prize
Richer than all th' Achaean state supplies,
Than all proud Argos, or Mycæna knows,
Than all our isles or continents inclose:
A woman matchless, and almost divine,
Fit for the praise of every tongue but mine.
No more excuses then, no more delay;
Haste to the trial!—Lo! I lead the way.
I too may try, and if this arm can wing
The feather'd arrow through the destin'd ring,
Then if no happier knight the conquest boast,
I shall not sorrow for a mother lost;
But, blest in her, possess these arms alone,
Heir of my father's strength, as well as throne.

He spoke, then, rising his broad sword unbound,
And cast his purple garment on the ground.
A trench he open'd; in a line he plac'd
The level axes, and the points made fast
(His perfect skill the wondering gazers ey'd,
The game as yet unseen, as yet untry'd).
Then, with a manly pace, he took his stand;
And grasp'd the bow, and twang'd it in his hand.
Three times, with beating heart, he made essay;
Three times, unequal to the task, gave way:
A modest boldness on his cheek appear'd:
And thrice he hop'd, and thrice again he fear'd.
The fourth had drawn it. 'The great sire with joy
Beheld, but with a sign forbade the boy.
His ardour straight' th' obedient prince suppress,
And, artful, thus the suitor-train addrest.

Oh lay the cause on youth yet immature!
(For Heaven forbid, such weakness should endure!)

How shall this arm, unequal to the bow,
Retort an insult, or repel a foe?
But you! whom Heaven with better nerves has blest,
Accept the trial, and the prize contest.

He cast the bow before him, and apart
Against the polish'd quiver propt the dart.
Resuming then his seat, Epithei's son
The bold Antinoüs to the rest begun.

"From where the goblet first begins to flow,
"From right to left in order take the bow;"

"And prove your several strengths."—The princes heard,

And first Leiodes, blameless priest, appear'd;
The eldest born of Ænops' noble race,
Who next the goblet held his holy place;
He, only he, of all the suitor-throng,
Their deeds detested, and abjur'd the wrong.
With tender hands the stubborn horn he strains,
The stubborn horn resisted all his pains!
Already in despair he gives it o'er:
Take it who will, he cries, I strive no more.
What numerous deaths attend this fatal bow!
What souls and spirits shall it send below!
Better, indeed, to die, and fairly give
Nature her debt, than disappointed live,
With each new sun to some new hope a prey,
Yet still to-morrow falser than to-day.
How long in vain Penelope we sought!
This bow shall ease us of that idle thought,
And send us with some humbler wife to live,
Whom gold shall gain, or destiny shall give.

Thus speaking, on the floor the bow he plac'd
(With rich inlay the various floor was grace'd);
At distance far the feather'd shaft he throws,
And to the seat returns from whence he rose.

To him Antinoüs thus with fury said:
What words ill-omen'd from thy lips have fled!
Thy coward-function ever is in fear;
Those arms are dreadful which thou canst not bear.
Why should this bow be fatal to the brave?
Because the priest is born a peaceful slave.

Mark then what others can—He ended there,
And bade Melanthius a vast pile prepare;
He gives it instant flame, then fast beside
Spreads o'er an ample board a bullock's hide.
With melted lard they soak the weapon o'er,
Chafe every knot, and supple every pore.

Vain all their art, and all their strength as vain;
The bow inflexible resists their pain.
The force of great Eurymachus alone
And bold Antinoüs, yet untry'd, unknown:
Those only now remain'd; but those confess
Of all the train the mightiest and the best.

Then from the hall, and from the noisy crew,
The masters of the herd and flock withdrew.
BOOK XXI. THE ODYSSEY.

The king observes them, he the ball forsakes,
And, past the limits of the court, o'ertakes,
Then thus with accent mild Ulysses spoke:
Ye faithful guardians of the herd and flock!
Shall I the secret of my breast conceal,
Or (as my soul now dictates) shall I tell?
Say, should some favouring god restore again
The lost Ulysses to his native reign,
How beat your hearts? what aid would you afford?
To the proud suitors, or your ancient lord?

Philætus thus. O were thy word not vain!
Would mighty Jove restore that man again!
These aged sinews with new vigour strangely
In his blest cause should emulate the young.
With equal vows Eumæus too implore'd
Each power above, with wishes for his lord.

He saw their secret souls, and thus began.
Those vows the gods accord, behold the man!
Your own Ulysses! twice ten years detain'd
By woes and wanderings from this hapless land:
At length he comes; but comes despis'd, unknown,
And finding faithful you, and you alone.
All else have cast him from their very thought,
Ev'n in their wishes, and their prayers forgot!

Hear then, my friends: If Jove this arm succeed
And give you impious revellers to bleed,
My care shall be to bless your future lives
With large possessions and with faithful wives;
Past by my palace shall your domes ascend,
And each on young Telemachus attend,
And each be call'd his brother and my friend.
To give you firmer faith, now trust your eye;
Lo! the broad scar indented on my thigh,
When with Autolycus's sons, of yore,
On Parnass' top I classthe tusky boar.

His ragged rest then drawn aside disclos'd
The sign conspicuous, and the scar expos'd:
Eager they view'd; with joy they stood amazed:
With tearful eyes o'er all their master gaz'd:
Around his neck their longing arms they cast,
His head, his shoulders, and his knees embrac'd.
Tears follow'd tears; no word was in their power;
In solemn silence fell the kindly shower.
The king too weeps, the king too grasps their hands,
And moveless, as a marble fountain, stands.
Thus had their joy wept down the setting sun,
But first the wise man ceas'd, and thus began.
Enough—on other cares your thought employ,
For danger waits on all untimely joy.
Full many foes, and fierce, observe us near;
Some may betray, and yonder walls may hear.
Re-enter then, not all at once, but stay
Some moments you, and let me lead the way.
To me, neglected as I am, I know
The haughty suitors will deny the bow;
But thou, Eumæus, as 'tis borne away,
Thy master's weapon to his hand convey.
At every portal let some matron wait,
And each lock fast the well-compacted gate:
Close let them keep, whate'er invades their ear;
Though arms, or shouts, or dying groans they hear.
To thy strict charge, Philætius! we consign
The court's main gate: to guard that pass be thine.
This said, he first return'd: the faithful swains
At distance follow, as their king ordains.
Before the flame Eurymachus now stands,
And turns the bow, and chases it with his hands:
Still the tough bow unmov'd. The lofty man
Sigh'd from his mighty soul, and thus began.
I mourn the common cause; for, oh, my friends!
On me, on all, what grief, what shame attends!
Not the lost nuptials can affect me more
(For Greece has beauteous dames on every shore),
But baffled thus! confess'd so far below
Ulysses' strength, as not to bend his bow!
How shall all ages our attempt deride!
Our weakness scorn. Antinoüs thus reply'd.
"Not so, Eurymachus: that no man draws
The wondrous bow, attend another cause.
Sacred to Phœbus is the solemn day,
Which thoughtless we in games would waste away:
Till the next dawn this ill-tim’d strife forgo, 276
And here leave fixt the ringlets in a row.
Now bid the sewer approach, and let us join
In due libations, and in rites divine,
So end our night: before the day shall spring,
The choicest offerings let Melanthius bring;
Let then to Phoebus’ name the fatted thighs
Feed the rich smokes, high curling to the skies.
So shall the patron of these arts bestow
(For his the gift) the skill to bend the bow.

They heard well pleas’d: the ready heralds bring
The cleansing waters from the limpid spring:
The goblet high with rosy wine they crown’d,
In order circling to the peers around.
That rite complete uprose the thoughtful man,
And thus his meditated scheme began.

If what I ask your noble minds approve,
Ye peers and rivals in the royal love!
Chief, if it hurt not great Antinoüs’ ear
(Whose sage decision I with wonder hear),
And if Eurymachus the motion please:
Give Heaven this day, and rest the bow in peace.
To-morrow let your arms dispute the prize,
And take it he, the favour’d of the skies!
But, since till then this trial you delay,
Trust it on, moment to my hands to-day:
Fain would I prove, before your judging eyes,
What once I was, whom wretched you despise;
If yet this arm its ancient force retain;
Or if my woes (a long-continued train)
And wants and insults, make me less than man.

Rage flash’d in lightning from the suitor’s eyes,
Yet mixt with terror at the bold emprise.
Antinoüs then: O miserable guest!
Is common sense quite banish’d from thy breast? 310
Suffic’d it not within the palace plac’d
To sit distinguish’d, with our presence grace’d;
Admitted here with princes to confer,
A man unknown, a needy wanderer?
To copious wine this insolence we owe,
And much thy betters wine can overthrow:
The great Eurytion when this phrensy stung,
Pirithous' roofs with frantic riot rung;
Boundless the Centaur rag'd; till one and all
The heroes rose, and dragg'd him from the hall;
His nose they shorten'd, and his ears they slit,
And sent him sober'd home, with better wit.
Hence with long war the double race was curst,
Fatal to all, but to th' aggressor first.
Such fate I prophecy our guest attends,
If here this interdicted bow he bends:
Nor shall these walls such insolence contain;
The first fair wind transports him o'er the main;
Where Echecus to death the guilty brings
(The worst of mortals, ev'n the worst of kings).
Better than that, if thou approve our cheer;
Cease the mad strife, and share our bounty here.

To this the queen her just dislike express'd:
'Tis impious, prince, to harm the stranger-guest,
Base to insult who bears a suppliant's name.
And some respect Telenachus may claim.
What if th' immortals on the man bestow
Sufficient strength to draw the mighty bow?
Shall I, a queen, by rival chiefs ador'd,
Accept a wandering stranger for my lord?
A hope so idle never touch'd his brain:
Then ease your bosoms of a fear so vain.
Far be he banish'd from this stately scene
Who wrongs his princess with a thought so mean.
O fair! and wisest of so fair a kind!

(Respectful thus Eurymachus rejoin'd),
Mov'd by no weak surmise, but sense of shame,
We dread the all-arraigning voice of Fame:
We dread the censure of the meanest slave,
The weakest woman: all can wrong the brave.

"Behold, what wretches to the bed pretend
"Of that brave chief, whose bow they could not bend!
"In came a beggar of the strolling crew,
"And did what all those princes could not do."
Thus will the common voice our deed defame,

And thus posterity upbraids our name,
BOOK XXI. THE ODYSSEY.

To whom the queen! If fame engage your views,
Forbear those acts which infamy pursues;
Wrong and oppression no renown can raise;
Know, friend! that virtue is the path to praise. 360
The stature of our guest, his port, his face,
Speak him descended from no vulgar race.
To him the bow, as he desires, convey;
And to his hand if Phoebus give the day,
Hence, to reward his merit, he shall bear
A two-edg'd falchion and a shining spear,
Embroider'd sandals, a rich cloak and vest,
And safe conveyance to his port of rest.

O royal mother! ever honour'd name!
Permit me (cries Telemachus), to claim
A son's just right. "No Grecian prince but I
Has power this bow to grant, or to deny.
Of all that Ithaca's rough hills contain,
And all wide Nis' cours'er-breading plain,
To me alone my father's arms descend;
And mine alone they are, to give or lend.
Retire, oh queen! thy household task resume,
Tend, with thy maids, the labours of the loom;
The bow, the darts, and arms of chivalry,
These cares to man belong, and most to me.

Mature beyond his years, the queen admir'd
His sage reply, and with her train retir'd;
There in her chamber as she sate apart,
Revolv'd his words, and plac'd them in her heart.
On her Ulysses then she fix'd her soul,
Down her fair cheek the tears abundant roll,
Till gentle Pallas, piteous of her cries,
In slumber clos'd her silver-streaming eyes.

Now through the press the bow Eumæus bore,
And all was riot, noise, and wild uproar.
Hold! lawless rustic! whither wilt thou go?
To whom, incensate, dost thou bear the bow?
Exil'd for this to some sequester'd den,
Far from the sweet society of men,
To thy own dogs a prey thou shalt be made;
If Heaven and Phoebus lend the suitors aid.
Thus they. Aghast he laid the weapon down,
But bold Telemachus thus urg'd him on.
Proceed, false slave, and slight their empty words;
What! hopes the fool to please so many lords? 400
Young as I am, thy prince's vengeful hand
Stretch'd forth in wrath shall drive thee from the land.
Oh! could the vigour of this arm as well
Th' oppressive suitors from my walls expel!
Then what a show of lawless men should go
To fill with tumult the dark courts below!

The suitors with a scornful smile survey
The youth, indulging in the genial day.
Eumæus, thus encourag'd, hastens to bring
The strifesful bow, and gives it to the king. 410
Old Euryclea calling, then aside,
Hear what Telemachus enjoins (he cry'd)
At every portal let some matron wait,
And each lock fast the well-compacted gate;
And if unusual sounds invade their ear,
If arms, or shouts, or dying groans they hear,
Let none to call or issue forth presume,
But close attend the labours of the loom.

Her prompt obedience on his order waits;
Clos'd in an instant were the palace-gates. 420
In the same moment forth Philætias flies;
Secures the court, and with a cable ties
The utmost gate (the cable strongly wrought
Of Byblos' reed, a ship from Egypt brought);
Then unperceiv'd and silent at the board
His seat he takes, his eyes upon his lord.

And now his well-known bow the master bors,
Turn'd on all sides, and view'd it o'er and o'er;
Lest time or worms had done the weapon wrong,
Its owner absent, and untry'd so long. 430
While some deriding—How he turns the bow!
Some other like it sure the man must know,
Or else would copy; or in bows he deals;
Perhaps he makes them, or perhaps he steals.—
Heaven to this wretch (another cry'd) be kind! 435
And bless, in all to which he stands inclin'd,
With such good fortune as he now shall find.
BOOK XIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Heedless he heard them: but disdain'd reply;
The bow perusing with exactest eye.
Then, as some heavenly minstrel, taught to sing
High notes responsive to the trembling string,
To some new strain when he adapts the lyre,
Or the dumb lute refits with vocal wire,
Relaxes, strains, and draws them to and fro;
So the great master drew the mighty bow:
And drew with ease. One hand aloft display'd
The bending horns, and one the string essay'd.
From his essaying hand the string let fly
Twang'd short and sharp like the shrill swallow's cry.
A general horror ran through all the race,
Sunk was each heart, and pale was every face.
Signs from above ensa'd: th' unfolding sky
In lightning burst; Jove thunder'd from on high.
First at the call of heaven's Almighty Lord,
He snatch'd the shaft that glitter'd on the board
(Fast by, the rest lay sleeping in the sheath,
But soon to fly the messengers of death).

Now sitting as he was, the cord he drew,
Through every ringlet levelling his view;
Then notch'd the shaft, releas'd, and gave it wing;
The whizzing arrow vanish'd from the string.
Sung on direct, and threaded every ring.
The solid gate its fury scarcely bounds;
Pierc'd through and through, the solid gate resounds.
Then to the prince. Nor have I wrought thee shame;
Nor err'd this hand unfaithful to its aim;
Nor prov'd the toil too hard; nor have I lost
That ancient vigour, once my pride and boast.
Ill I descriv'd these haughty peers' disdain;
Now let them comfort their dejected train,
In sweet repast their present hour employ,
Nor wait till evening for the genial joy:
Then to the lute's soft voice prolong the night;
Music, the banquet's most refin'd delight.

He said, then gave a nod; and at the word
Telemachus girds on his shining sword.
Fast by his father's side he takes his stand;
The beamy javelin lightens in his hand.
ARGUMENT.

The Death of the Suitors.

Ulysses begins the slaughter of the suitors by the death of Antinoüs. He declares himself, and lets fly his arrows at the rest. Telemachus assists, and brings arms for his father, himself, Eumæus, and Philætius. Melanthius does the same for the wooers. Minerva encourages Ulysses in the shape of Mentor. The suitors are all slain, only Medon and Phemius are spared. Melanthius and the unfaithful servants are executed. The rest acknowledge their master with all demonstrations of joy.
BOOK XXII.

THEN fierce the hero o'er the threshold strode;
Stript of his rags, he blaz'd out like a god.
Full in their face the lifted bow he bore,
And quiver'd-deaths, a formidable store;
Before his feet the rattling shower he threw,
And thus, terrific, to the suitors went.
One venturous game this hand has won to-day,
Another, princes! yet remains to play;
Another mark our arrow must attain.
Phæbus, assist! nor be the labour vain.
Swift as the word the parting arrow sings,
And bears thy fate, Antinous, on its wings:
Wretch that he was, of unprophetic soul!
High in his hands he rear'd the golden bowl!
Ev'n then to drain it lengthen'd out his breath;
Chang'd to the deep, the bitter draught of death:
For fate who fear'd amidst a steadfast hand?
And fate to numbers, by a single hand?
'Full through his throat Ulysses' weapon past,
And pierc'd the neck. He falls, and breathe's his last.
The tumbling goblet the wide floor o'erflows,
A stream of gore burst spouting from his nose;
Grim in convulsive agonies he sprawls:
Before him spurn'd the loaded table falls,
And spreads the pavement with a mingled flood
Of floating meats, and wine, and human blood.
Ama'd, confounded, as they saw him fall,
Uprose the throngs tumultuous round the hall;
O'er all the dome they cast a haggard eye,
Each look'd for arms: in vain; no arms were nigh.
Aim'st thou at princes? (all ama'd they said);
Thy last of games unhappy hast thou play'd;
Thy erring shaft has made our bravest bleed,
And death, unlucky guest, attends thy deed.
Vultures shall tear thee—Thus incens'd they spoke,
While each to chance ascrib'd the wondrous stroke,
Blind as they were: for death ev'n now invades
His destin'd prey, and wraps them all in shades.
Then, grimly frowning with a dreadful look,
That wither'd all their hearts, Ulysses spoke.

"Dog's, ye have had your day! ye fear'd no more
Ulysses vengeful from the Trojan shore;
While, to your fast and spoil a guardless prey,
Our house, our wealth, our helpless handmaids lay:
Not so content, with bolder phrenzy stir'd,
Ev'n to our bed presumptuous you aspire'd:
Laws or divine or human fail'd to move,
Or shame of man, or dread of gods above;
Needless alike of infamy or praise,
Or Fame's eternal voice in future days:
The hour of vengeance, wretches, now is come,
Impending fate is yours, and instant doom.

"Thus dreadful he. Confus'd the suitors stood,
From their pale cheeks recedes the flying blood:
Trembling they sought their guilty heads to hide,
Alone the bold Eurynomachus reply'd:
If, as thy words import (he thus began),
Ulysses lives, and thou the mighty man,
Great are thy wrongs, and much hast thou sustain'd
In thy spoil'd palace, and exhausted land;
The cause and author of those guilty deeds,
Lo! at thy feet unjust Autonoös bleeds.
Not love, but wild ambition was his guide;
To slay thy son, thy kingdoms to divide,
These were his aims; but juster Jove deny'd.
Since cold in death th' offender lies; oh spare
Thy suppliant people, and receive their prayer!
Brass, gold, and treasures, shall the spoil defray,
Two hundred oxen every prince shall pay:
The waste of years refanded in a day.
Till then thy wrath is just—Ulysses burn'd
With high disdain, and sternly thus return'd.
All, all the treasures that enrich'd our throne
Before your rapines, join'd with all your own,
If offer'd, vainly should for mercy call;
'Tis you that offer, and I scorn them all;
BOOK XXII. THE ODYSSEY.

Your blood is my demand, your lives the prize,
Till pale as yonder wretch each suitor lies.
Hence with those coward terms; or fight or fly;
This choice is left you, to resist or die;
And die I trust ye shall.—He sternly spoke:
With guilty fears the pale assembly shook.
Alone Eurymachus exhorts the train,
You archer, comrades, will not shoot in vain;
But from the threshold shall his darts be sped,
(Where's he be) till every prince lie dead?
Be mindful of yourselves, draw forth your swords,
And to his shafts obtain these ample boards
(So need compels). Then, all united strive
The bold invader from his post to drive;
The city rous'd shall to our rescue haste,
And this mad archer soon have shot his last:
Swift as he spoke, he drew his traitor sword,
And like a lion rush'd against his lord:
The wary chief the rushing foe represt,
Who met the point and forc'd it in his breast:
His falling hand deserts the lifted sword,
And prone he falls extended o'er the board!
Before him wide, in mixt effusion roll
Th' untasted viands, and the jovial bowl.
Full through his liver pass'd the mortal wound,
With dying rage his forehead beats the ground,
He spurn'd the seat with fury as he fell,
And the fierce soul to darkness div'd, and hell.
Next bold Amphiuomous his arms extends
To force the pass; the godlike man defends.
Thy spear, Telemachus! prevents th' attack,
The brazen weapon driving through his back,
Theence through his breast its bloody passage tore;
Flat falls he thundering on the marble floor,
And his crush'd forehead marks the stone with gore.
He left his javelin in the dead, for fear
The long incumbrance of the weighty spear
To the fierce foe advantage might afford,
To rush between and use the shorten'd sword.
With speedy arbour to his sire he flies,
And, Arm, great father! arm, (in haste he cries).
Lo hence I run for other arms to wield,
For missile javelins, and for helm and shield;
Fast by our side let either faithful swain
In arms attend us, and their part sustain.

Haste, and return (Ulysses made reply)
While yet th' auxilliary shafts this hand supply;
Lest thus alone, encounter'd, by an host,
Driven from the gate, th' important pass be lost.

With speed Telemachus obeys, and flies
Where pil'd in heaps the royal armour lies?
Four brazen helmets, eight resplendent spears,
And four broad bucklers to his sire he bears:
At once in brazen panoply they shine,
At once each servant brac'd his armour on;
Around their king a faithful guard they stand,
While yet each shaft flew deathful from his hand:
Chief after chief expir'd at every wound,
And swell'd the bleeding mountain on the ground.

Soon as his store of flying fates was spent,
Against the wall he set the bow unbent;
And now his shoulders bear the massy shield,
And now his hands two beamy javelins wield:
He frowns beneath his nodding plume, that play'd
O'er the high crest, and cast a dreadful shade.

There stood a window near, whence looking down
From o'er the porch appear'd the subject town.
A double strength of valves secour'd the place,
A high and narrow, but the only pass:
The cautious king, with all-preventing care,
To guard that outlet, plac'd Eumæus there:
When Agelaüs thus: Has none the sense
To mount yon window, and alarm from thence
The neighbour-town? the town shall force the door,
And this bold archer soon shall shoot no more.

Melanchius then: That outlet to the gate
So near adjoins, that one may guard the strait.
But other methods of defence remain,
Myself with arms can furnish all the train;
Stores from the royal magazine I bring,
And their own darts shall pierce the prince and king.
BOOK XXII. THE ODYSSEY

He said; and mounting up the lofty stairs,
Twelve shields, twelve lances, and twelve helmets
bears:
All arm, and sudden round the hall appears
A blaze of bucklers, and a wood of spears.
The hero stands oppress with mighty woe,
On every side he sees the labour grow;
Oh curst event! and oh unlook'd-for aid!
Melanthius or the women have betray'd—
Oh my dear son!—The father with a sigh!
Then ceas'd; the filial virtue made reply.
Falsehood is folly, and 'tis just to own
The fault committed: this was mine alone;
My haste neglected yonder door to bar,
And hence the villain has supply'd their war.
Run, good Eumæus, then, and (what before
I thoughtless err'd in) well secure that door:
Learn, if by female fraud this deed were done,
Or (as my thought misgives) by Dolius' son.

While yet they spoke, in quest of arms again
To the high chamber stole the faithless swain,
Not unobserv'd. Eumæus watchful ey'd,
And thus address'd Ulysses near his side.
The miscreant who suspected takes that way;
Him, if this arm be powerful, shall I slay?
Or drive him hither, to receive the meed
From thy own hand, of this dêtested deed?
Not so (reply'd Ulysses); leave him there,
For us sufficient is another care:
Within the structure of this palace wall
To keep inclos'd his masters till they fall.
Go you, and seize the felon; backward bind
His arms and legs, and fix a plank behind;
On this his body by strong cords extend,
And on a column near the roof suspend:
So study'd tortures his vile days shall end.
The ready swains obey'd with joyful haste,
Behind the felon unperceiv'd they past,
As round the room in quest of arms he goes
(The half-shut door conceal'd his lurking foes):
THE ODISSEY. BOOK XXYI.

One hand starled an helm, and one the shield
Which old Laertes wont in youth to wield,
Cover'd with dust, with dryness chapt and worn,
The brass corroded, and the leather torn.
Thus laden, o'er the threshold as he stept,
Fierce on the villain from each side they leapt.
Back by the hair the trembling dart'd drew,
And down reluctant on the pavement threw.
Active and pleas'd the zealous swains fulfil
At every point their master's rigid will:
First, fast behind, his hands and feet they bound,
Then straiten'd cords involv'd his body round;
So drawn aloft, athwart the column ty'd,
The howling felon swung from side to side.

Eumaeus scorn'd them with keen disdain:
There pass thy pleasing night, oh gentle swain!
On that soft pillow, from that envy'd height,
First may'st thou see the springing dawn of light;
So timely ris'd, when morning streaks the east,
To drive thy victims to the suitors' feast.

This said, they left him, tortur'd as he lay,
Secur'd the door, and hasty strode away:
Each, breathing death, resum'd his dangerous post
Near great Ulysses; four against an host.
When lo! descending to her hero's aid
Jove's daughter Pallas, War's triumphant maid:
In Mentor's friendly form she join'd his side:
Ulysses saw, and thus with transport cry'd.

Come, ever welcome, and thy succour lend;
Oh every sacred name in one! my friend!
Early we lov'd, and long our loves have grown;
Whate'er through life's whole series I have done
Or good, or grateful, now to mind recall,
And, aiding this one hour, repay it all.

Thus he; but pleasing hopes his bosom warm
Of Pallas latent in the friendly form.
The adverse host the phantom-warrior ey'd,
And first, loud threatening, Agelaus cry'd.
Mentor, beware, nor let that tongue persuade
Thy frantic arm to lend Ulysses aid;
BOOK XXII.  THE ODYSSEY.

Our force successful shall our threat make good,
And with the sire and son's commix thy blood.
What hop'st thou here? T'hee first the sword shall slay,
Then lop thy whole posterity away;
Far hence thy banish'd consort shall we send;
With his, thy forfeit lands and treasures blend;
Thus, and thus only, shalt thou join thy friend.
His barbarous insult ev'n the goddess fires,
Who thus the warrior to revenge inspires.

Art thou Ulysses? where then shall we find
The patient body and the constant mind?
That courage, once the Trojan's daily dread,
Known nine long years, and felt by heroes dead?
And where that conduct, which reveng'd the lust
Of Priam's race, and laid proud Troy in dust?
If this, when Helen was the cause, were done;
What for thy country now, thy-queen, thy son?
Rise then in combat, at my side attend;
Observe what vigour gratitude can lend,
And foes how weak, oppos'd against a friend!

She spoke; but willing longer to survey
The sire and son's great acts, withheld the day;
By farther toils decreed the brave to try,
And level pois'd the wings of victory;
Then with a change of form eludes their sight,
Perch'd like a swallow on a rafter's height,
And unperceiv'd enjoys the rising fight.

Damasus's son, bold Agelaus, leads
The guilty war, Euryonomus succeeds;
With these, Pisander great Polycrates's son,
Sage Polybus, and stern Amphimedes,
With Demoptolemus: these six survive;
The best of all, the shafts had left alive.
Amidst the carnage, desperate as they stand,
Thus Agelaus rous'd the lagging band.

The hour is come, when you fierce man no more
With bleeding princes shall bestrew the floor.
Lo! Mentor leaves him with an empty boast;
The four remain, but four against an host.
Let each at once discharge the deadly dart,
One sure of six shall reach Ulysses' heart;
The rest must perish, their great leader slay,
Thus shall one stroke the glory lost regain.

Then all at once their mingled fances threw,
And thirsty all of one man's blood they flew;
In vain! Minerva turn'd them with her breath,
And scatter'd short, or wide, the points of death;
With deadened sound one on the threshold fails,
One strikes the gate, one rings against the walls:
The storm past innocent. "The godlike man
Now loftier trod, and dreadful thus began.
'Tis now (brave friends) our turn, at once to throw
(So speed them Heaven) our javelins at the foe.

That impious race to all their past misdeeds
Would add our blood, injustice, still proceeds.

He spoke: at once their fiery lances flew:
Great Demoptolemus, Ulysses' slave,
Eurydæs receiv'd the prince's dart;
The goatherd's quiver'd in Heander's heart:
Fierce Elatus by thine, Eumeus, falls;
Their fall in thunder echoes round the walls.
The rest retreat: the victors now advance,
Each from the dead resumes his bloody lance.

Again the foe discharge the steely shower;
Again made frustrate by the virgin-power.
Some, turn'd by Pallas, on the threshold fall,
Some wound the gate, some ring against the wall;
Some weak, or ponderous with the brazen head,
Drop harmless on the pavement, sounding dead.

Then bold Amphimedon his javelin cast;
Thy hand, Telemachus, it lightly raz'd:
And from Ctesippus' arm the spear elanc'd
On good Eumaeus' shield and shoulder glance'd:
Not lessen'd of their force (so slight the wound)
Each sung along, and dropp'd upon the ground.
Fate doom'd thee next, Eurydamus, to bear
Thy death, ennobled by Ulysses' spear.

By the bold son Amphimedon was slain,
And Polybus renown'd the faithful swain.
BOOK XXII.  THE ODYSSEY.

Pierc'd through the breast the rude Ctesippus laid,
And thus Philætius gloried o'er the dead.
There and thy pompous vaunts, and high disdain;
Oh sharp in scandal, voluble; and vain!
How weak is mortal pride! To Heaven alone
Th' event of actions and our fates are known:
Scoffer, behold what gratitude we bear:
The victim's heel is answer'd with this spear.
Ulysses brandish'd high his vengeful steel,
And Damaserides that instant fell;
Fast by Leocritus expiring lay,
The prince's javelin tore its bloody way.
Through all his bowels down he tumbles prone,
His batter'd front and brains besmear the stope.
Now Pallas shipes confess'd! aloft she spreads.
The arm of vengeance o'er their guilty heads;
The dreadful agis blazes in their eye:
Amaz'd they see they tremble, and they fly;
Confus'd, distracted, through the rooms they fling,
Like oxen madden'd by the breeze's sting.
When sultry days, and long, succeed the gentle spring.
Not half so keen fierce vultures of the chace
Stoop from the mountains on the feather'd race,
When, the wide field extended snare betook.
With conscious dread they shun the quivering net;
No help, no flight; but wounded every way,
Headlong they drop, the fowlers seize the prey.
On all sides thus they double wound on wound,
In prostrate heaps the wretches beat the ground,
Urnmanly shrieks precede each dying groan,
And a red deluge floats the rocking stone.
Leiodes first before the victor falls:
The wretched augur thus for mercy calls.
Oh gracious hear, nor let thy suppliæ bleed:
Still undishonour'd, or by word or deed
Thy house, for me, remains; by me repres'd
Full oft was cheek'd th' injustice of the rest:
Averse they heard me when I counsel'd well,
Their hearts were harden'd, and they justly fell.
Oh, spare an augur's consecrate head,
Nor add the blameless to the guilty dead.
Priest as thou art! for that detested band
Thy lying prophecies deceiv'd the land:
Against Ulysses have thy vows been made,
For them, thy daily orisons were paid:
Yet more, ev'n to our bed thy pride aspirest:
One common crime, one common fate requires,
Thus speaking, from the ground the sword he took
Which Agelaüs' dying hand forsook:
Full through his neck the weighty falchion sped:
Along the pavement roll'd the muttering head.
Phemius alone the hand of vengeance spar'd,
Phemius the sweet, the heaven-instructed bard.
Beside the gate the reverend minstrel stands;
The lyre, now silent, trembling in his hands;
Doubtful to supplicate the chief, or fly
To Jove's inviolable altar nigh,
Where oft Laërtes holy vows had paid,
And oft Ulysses smoking victims laid.
His honour'd harp with care he first set down,
Between the laver and the silver throne;
Then prostrate stretch'd before the dreadful man,
Persuasive, thus, with accent soft began.
O king! to mercy be thy soul inclin'd,
And spare the poet's ever-gentle kind.
A deed like this thy future fame would wrong,
For dear to gods and men is sacred song.
Self-taught I sing; by Heaven, and Heaven alone,
The genuine seeds of poesy are sown:
And (what the gods bestow) the lofty lay,
To gods alone, and godlike worth, we pay.
Save then the poet, and thyself reward;
'Tis thine to merit, mine is to record.
That here I sung, was force, and not desire:
This hand reluctant touch'd the warbling wire;
And let thy son attest, nor sordid pay,
Nor servile flattery stain'd the moral lay.
The moving words Telemachus attends,
His sire approaches, and the bard defends.
Oh mix not, father, with those impious dead
The man divine; forbear that sacred head;
BOOK XXII. THE ODYSSEY.

Medon, the herald, too our arms may spare,
Medon, who made my infancy his care;
If yet he breathes, permit thy son to give
Thus much to gratitude, and bid him live.

Beneath a table, trembling with dismay,
Couch'd close to earth, unhappy Medon lay,
Wrapt in a new slain ox's ample hide;
Swift at the word he cast his screen aside,
Sprung to the prince, embrac'd his knee with tears,
And thus with grateful voice address'd his ears.

O prince! oh friend! lo here thy Medon stands;
Ah stop the hero's unreis'ted hands,
Incens'd too justly by that impious brood,
Whose guilty glories now are set in blood.

To whom Ulysses with a pleasing eye:
Be bold, on friendship and my son rely;
Live, an example for the world to read,
How much more safe the good than evil deed:
Thou, with the heaven-taught bard, in peace resort
From blood and carnage to you open court:

Me other work requires—With timorous awe
From the dire scene th' exempted two withdraw,
Scarce sure of life, look round, and trembling move
To the bright altars of Protector Jove.

Meanwhile Ulysses search'd the dome, to find
If yet there live of all th' offending kind.
Not one! complete the bloody tale he found,
All steep'd in blood, all gasping on the ground.
So, when by hollow shores the fisher-train
Sweep with their arching nets the hoary main,
And scarce the meshy toils the copious draught contain,

All naked of their element, and bare,
The fishes pant, and gasp in thinner air;
Wide o'er the sands are spread the stiffening prey,
Till the warm sun exhales their soul away.

And now the king commands his son to call
Old Euryclea to the deathful hall;
The son observant not a moment stays;
The aged governess with speed obeys;
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK XXI.

The sounding portals instant they display;
The matron moves, the prince directs the way.
On heaps of death the stern Ulysses stood,
All black with dust, and cover'd thick with blood.
So the grim lion from the slaughter comes,
Dreadful he glares, and terribly he foams,
His breast with marks of carnage painted o'er,
His jaws all dropping with the bull's black gore.

Soon as her eyes the welcome object met,
The guilty fall'n, the mighty deed complete;
A scream of joy her feeble voice essay'd:
The hero check'd her, and compos'dly said—

Woman, experience's as thou art, control
Indecent joy and feast thy secret soul.

T' insult the dead, is cruel and unjust;
Fate, and their crime, have sunk them to the dust.
Nor heeded these the censure of mankind,
The good and bad were equal in their mind.
Justly the price of worthlessness they paid,
And each now wails an unburied shade.
But thou sincere! O Eurycles, say,
What maids dishonour us, and what obey?

Then she. In these thy kingly walls remain
(My son) full fifty of the handmaid train,
Taught by my care, to cull the fleece, or weave,
And servitude with pleasing tasks deceive;
Of these, twice six pursue their wicked way,
Nor me, nor chaste Penelope obey;
Nor fits it that Telephus command
(Young as he is) his mother's female band.

Hence to the upper chambers let me fly,
Where slumbers soft now close the royal eye;
There wake her with the news—The matron cry'd;
Not so (Ulysses more sedate,) reply'd,
Bring first the crew who wrought these guilty deeds;
In haste the matron parts: the king proceeds.

Now to dispose the dead, the care remains
To you, my son, and you, my faithful swains;
Th' offending females to that task we doom,
To wash, to scant, and purify the room.
These (every table cleans'd, and every throne, And all the melancholy labour done) Drive to you court, without the palace-wall, There the revenging sword shall smite them all; So with the suitors let them mix in dust, Stretch'd in a long oblivion of their lust. He said: the lamentable train appear, Each vents a groan, and drops a tender tear: Each heav'd her mournful burden, and beneath The porch depos'd the ghastly heaps of death. The chief severe, compelling each to move, Urg'd the dire task imperious from above, With thirsty sponge they rub the tables o'er (The swains unite their toil); the walls, the floor Wash'd with th' effusive wave, are purg'd of gore. Once more the palace set in fair array, To the base court the females take their way; There compass'd close between the dome and wall (Their life's last scene) they trembling wait their fall. Then thus the prince. To these shall we afford A fate so pure, as by the martial sword? To these, the nightly prostitutes to shame, And base revilers of our house and name? Thus speaking, on the circling wall he strung A ship's tough cable, from a column hung; Near the high top he strain'd it strongly round, Whence no contending foot could reach the ground. Their heads above connected in a row, They beat the air with quivering feet below: Thus on some tree hung struggling in the snare, The doves or thristles flap their wings in air. Soon fled the soul impure, and left behind The empty corpse to waver with the wind. Then forth they led Melanthius, and began Their bloody work; they lopp'd away the man, Morsel for dogs! then trimm'd with brazen shears The wretch, and shorten'd of his nose and ears; His hands and feet last felt the cruel steel: He roar'd, and torments gave his soul to hell— They wash, and to Ulysses take their way, So ends the bloody business of the day.
To Euryclea then address'd the king:
Bring hither fire, and hither sulphur bring,
To purge the palace: then the queen attend,
And let her with her matron-train descend;
The matron-train with all the virgin-band
Assemble here, to learn their lord's command.

Then Euryclea. Joyful I obey,
But cast those mean dishonest rags away;
Permit me first the royal robes to bring:
Ill suits this garb the shoulders of a king.
"Bring sulphur straight, and fire," (the monarch cries);
She hears, and at the word obedient flies.
With fire and sulphur, cure of noxious fumes,
He purg'd the walls, and blood-polluted rooms.
Again the matron springs with eager pace,
And spreads her lord's return from place to place.
They hear, rush forth, and instant round him stand,
A gazing throng, a torch in every hand.
They saw, they knew him, and with fond embrace
Each humbly kiss'd his knee, or hand, or face;
He knows them all, in all such truth appears,
Ev'n he indulges the sweet joy of tears.
ARGUMENT.

Euryclea awakens Penelope with the news of Ulysses's return and the death of the suitors. Penelope scarcely credits her; but supposes some god has punished them, and descends from her apartment in doubt. At the first interview of Ulysses and Penelope, she is quite unsatisfied. Minerva restores him to the beauty of his youth; but the queen continues incredulous, till by some circumstances she is convinced, and falls into all the transports of passion and tenderness. They recount to each other all that has past during their long separation. The next morning Ulysses, arming himself and his friends, goes from the city to visit his father.
BOOK XXIII.

THEN to the queen, as in repose she lay,
The nurse with eager rapture speeds her way;
The transports of her faithful heart supply
A sudden youth, and give her wings to fly.
   And sleeps my child? the reverend matron cries:
Ulysses lives! arise, my child, arise!
At length appears the long-expected hour!
Ulysses comes! the suitors are no more!
No more they view the golden light of day!
Arise, and bless thee with the glad survey!

Touch'd at her words, the mournful queen rejoind,
Ah! whither wanders thy distemper'd mind?
The righteous powers, who tread the starry skies,
The weak enlighten, and confound the wise,
And human thought, with unresisted sway,
Depress or raise, enlarge or take away:
Truth, by their high decree, thy voice forsakes,
And folly with the tongue of wisdom speaks.
Unkind, the fond illusion to impose!
Was it to flatter or deride my woes?
Never did I a sleep so sweet enjoy,
Since my dear lord left Ithaca for Troy.
Why must I wake to grieve; and curse thy shore,
O Troy!—may never tongue pronounce thee more!
Begone! another might have felt our rage,
But age is sacred, and we spare thy age.

To whom with warmth: my soul a lie disdain:
Ulysses lives, thy own Ulysses reigns:
That stranger, patient of the suitors' wrongs,
And the rude license of ungovern'd tongues,
He, he is thine. Thy son his latent guest
Long knew, but lock'd the secret in his breast;
With well-concerted art to end his woes,
And burst at once in vengeance on the foes.

While yet she spoke, the queen in transport sprung
Swift from the couch, and round the matron hung;
BOOK XXIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Fast from her eye descends the rolling tear,
Say, once more say, is my Ulysses here?
How could that numerous and outrageous band
By one be slain, though by an hero's hand?

I saw it not; she cries, but heard alone,
When death was busy, a loud dying groan,
The damsel-train turn'd pale at every wound,
Immur'd we sate, and catch'd each passing sound;

When death had seiz'd her prey, thy son attends,
And at his nod the damsel-train descends:

There terrible in arms Ulysses stood,
And the dead suitors almost swam in blood:

Thy heart, had leapt the hero to survey,
Stern as the surly lion o'er his prey,
Glorious in gore, now with sulphureous fires
The dome he purges, now the flame aspires:

Hesp'd lie the dead without the palace walls—
Haste, daughter, haste, thy own Ulysses calls!
Thy every wish the bounteous gods bestow,

Enjoy the present good, and former woe;

Ulysses lives, his vanquish'd foes to see;
He lives to thy Telemachus and thee!

Ah, no! with sighs Penelope rejoin'd,
Excess of joy disturbs thy wandering mind;

How blest this happy hour, should he appear,
Dear to us all, to me supremely dear!

Ah, no! some god the suitor's deaths decreed,
Some god descends, and by his hand they bleed;

Blind! to contemn the stranger's righteous cause,
And violate all hospitable laws!

The good they hated, and the powers defy'd;
But Heaven is just, and by a god they dy'd.

For never must Ulysses view this shore;

Never! the lov'd Ulysses is no more!

What words (the matron cries) have reach'd my ears?

Doubt we his presence, when he now appears?

Then hear conviction: Ere the fatal day

That forc'd Ulysses o'er the watery way,

A boar fierce rushing in the sylvan war

Plough'd half his thigh; I saw, I saw the scar,
And wild with transport had reveal'd the wound;
But ere I spoke, he rose, and check'd the sound.
Then, daughter, haste away! and if a lie
Flow from this tongue, then let thy servant die! 80
To whom with dubious joy the queen replies,
Wise is thy soul, but errors seize the wise;
The works of gods what mortal can survey?
Who knows their motives, who shall trace their way?
But learn we instant how the suitors trod.
The paths of death, by man, or by a god.
Thus speaks the queen, and no reply attends,
But with alternate joy and fear descends;
At every step debates her lord to prove;
Or, rushing to his arms, confess her love!
Then gliding through the marble valves, in state
Oppos'd, before the shining sire she sate.
The monarch, by a column high enthron'd,
His eye withdrew, and fix'd it on the ground;
Curious to hear his queen the silence break:
Amaiz'd she sate, and impotent to speak;
O'er all the man her eyes she rolls in vain,
Now hopes, now fears, now knows, then doubts again.
At length Telemachus—Oh, who can find
A woman like Penelope unkind?
Why thus in silence? why with winning charms
Thus slow to fly with rapture to his arms?
Stubborn the breast that with no transport glows,
When twice ten years are past of mighty woes;
To softness lost, to spousal love unknown,
The gods have form'd that rigid heart of stone!
O my Telemachus! the queen rejoin'd,
Distracting fears confound my labouring mind;
Powerless to speak, I scarce uplift my eyes,
Nor dare to question; doubts on doubts arise.
Oh deign he, if Ulysses, to remove
These boding thoughts, and what he is, to prove!
Pleas'd with her virtuous fears, the king replies,
Indulge, my son, the cautions of the wise;
BOOK XXIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Time shall the truth to sure remembrance bring: 118
This garb of poverty belies the king;
No more.—This day our deepest care requires
Cautious to act what thought mature inspires.
If one man's blood, though mean, distain our hands,
The homicide retreats to foreign lands;
By us, in heaps th' illustrious peerage falls,
Th' important deed our whole attention calls.

Be that thy care, Telemachus replies,
The world conspires to speak Ulysses wise;
For wisdom all is thine! lo, I obey,
And dauntless follow where you lead the way;
Nor shalt thou in the day of danger find
Thy coward son degenerate lag behind.

Then instant to the bath (the monarch cries)
Bid the gay youth and sprightly virgins rise,
Thence all descend in pomp and proud array,
And bid the dome resound the mirthful lay;
While the sweet lyrist airs of rapture sings,
And forms the dance responsive to the strings.
That hence th' eluded passengers may say,
Lo! the queen weds! we hear the spousal lay!
The suitors' death, unknown, 'till we remove
Far from the court, and act inspir'd by Jove.

Thus spoke the king; th' observant train obey,
At once they bathe, and dress in proud array:
The lyrist strikes the string; gay youths advance,
And fair-son'd damsels form the sprightly dance.
The voice, attuned to instrumental sounds,
Ascends the roof, the vaulted roof rebounds;
Not unobserv'd: the Greeks eluded say,
Lo! the queen weds, we hear the spousal lay!
Inconstant! to admit the bridal hour
Thus they—but nobly chaste she weds no more.

Meanwhile the warried king the bath ascends!
With faithful cares Eurynome attends,
O'er every limb a shower of fragrance sheds;
Then, drest in pomp, magnificent he treads.
The warrior-goddess gives his frame to shine
With majesty enlarg'd, and grace divine,
Back from his brows in wavy ringlets fly
His thick large locks of hyacinthine dye.
As by some artist to whom Vulcan gives
His heavenly skill, a breathing image lives;
By Pallas taught, he frames the wondrous mould,
And the pale silver glows with fusile gold;
So Pallas his heroic form improves
With bloom divine, and like a god he moves;
More high he treades, and issuing forth in state,
Radiant before his gazing consort sate.
And, oh my queen! he cries; what power above
Has steel'd that heart, averse to spousal love?
Canst thou, Penelope, when Heaven restores
Thy lost Ulysses to his native shores,
Canst thou, oh cruel! unconcern'd survey
Thy lost Ulysses, on this signal day?
Haste, Eurycles, and dispatchful spread
For me, and me alone, th' imperial bed;
My weary nature craves the balm of rest;
But Heaven with adamant has arm'd her breast.

Ah no! she cries, a tender heart I bear,
A foe to pride; no adamant is there;
And now, ev'n now it melts! for sure I see
Once more Ulysses my belov'd in thee!
Fix'd in my soul, as when he sail'd to Troy,
His image dwells: then haste the bed of joy!
Haste, from the bridal bower the bed translate,
Fram'd by his hand, and be it drest in state!

Thus speaks the queen, still dubious, with disguise;
Touch'd at her words, the king with warmth replies.
Alas for this! what mortal strength can move
Th' enormous burden, who but Heaven above?
It mocks the weak attempts of human hands;
But the whole earth must move if Heaven commands.
Then hear sure evidence, while we display
Words seal'd with sacred truth, and truth obey
This hand the wonder fram'd; an olive spread
Full in the court its ever-verdant head.
Vast as some mighty column's bulk, on high
The huge trunk rose, and hea'v'd into the sky;
BOOK XXIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Around the tree I rais'd a nuptial bower,
And roof'd defensive of the storm and shower;
The spacious vault, with art inwrought, conjoins;
And the fair dome with polish'd marble shines.
I lopp'd the branchy head; aloft in twain
Sever'd the bole, and smooth'd the shining grain;
Then posts, capacious of the frame, I raise,
And bore it, regular, from space to space;
Asthwart the frame, at equal distance lie
Thongs of tough hides, that boast a purple dye;
Then polishing the whole, the finish'd mould
With silver shone, with elephant, and gold.
But if o'erturn'd by rude, un gover'n'd hands,
Or still inviolate the olive stands,
'Tis thine, oh queen, to say, and now impart,
If fears remain, or doubts distract thy heart?

While yet he speaks, her powers of life decay,
She sickens, trembles, falls, and faints away.
At length recovering, to his arms she flew,
And strain'd him close, as to his breast she grew.
The tears pour'd down amain; and, Oh, she cries,
Let not against thy spouse thine anger rise!
O vers'd in every turn of human art,
Forgive the weakness of a woman's heart!
The righteous powers, that mortal lots dispose,
Decree us to sustain a length of woes,
And from the flower of life the bliss deny
To bloom together, fade away, and die.
O let me, let me not thine anger move,
That I forbore, thus, thus to speak my love;
Thus in fond kisses while the transport wars,
Pour out my soul, and die within thy arms!
I dreaded fraud! Men, faithless men, betray
Our easy faith, and make the sex the prey:
Against the fondness of my heart I strove,
'Twas caution, oh, my lord! not want of love.
Like me had Heleu fear'd, with wanton charms
Ere the fair mischief set two worlds in arms;
Ere Greece rose dreadful in th' avenging day;
Thus had she fear'd, she had not gone astray.
THE ODYSSEY.  BOOK XXIII.

But Heaven, averse to Greece, in wrath decreed 235
That she should wander, and that Greece should bleed:
Blind to the ill that from injustice flow,
She colour'd all our wretched lives with woe.
But why these sorrows when my lord arrives?
I yield, I yield! my own Ulysses lives!
The secrets of the bridal bed are known
To thee, to me, to Actoris alone
(My father's present in the spousal hour,
The sole attendant on our genial bower).
Since what no eye hath seen thy tongue reveal'd, 245
Hard and distrustful as I am, I yield.

Touch'd to the soul the king with rapture hears,
Hangs round her neck, and speaks his joy in tears.
As to the shipwreck'd mariner, the shores
Delightful rise, when angry Neptune roars;
Then, when the surge in thunder mounts the sky,
And gulf'd in crowds at once the sailors die;
If one more happy, while the tempest raves,
Oultives the tumult of conflicting waves,
All pale, with oose deform'd, he views the strand,
And plunging forth with transport grasps the land:
The ravish'd queen with equal rapture glows,
Clasps her lov'd lord, and to his bosom grows.
Nor bad they ended till the morning ray;
But Pallas backward held the rising day,
The wheels of night retarding, to detain
The gay Aurora in the wavy main;
Whose flaming steeds, emerging through the night,
Beam o'er the eastern hills with streaming light.

At length Ulysses with a sigh replies:
Yet Fate, yet cruel Fate repose denies;
A labour long, and hard, remains behind;
By heaven above, by hell beneath enjoin'd:
For, to Tiresias through th' eternal gates
Of hell I trode, to learn my future fates. 260
But end we here—the night demands repose,
Be deck'd the couch! and peace awhile, my woes!
To whom the queen. Thy word we shall obey,
And deck the couch; far hence be woes away;
BOOK XXIII. THE ODYSSEY.

Since the just gods, who tread the starry plains, restore thee safe, since my Ulysses reigns. But what those perils Heaven decrees, impart; knowledge may grieve, but fear distracts the heart. To this the king. Ah, why must I disclose A dreadful story of approaching woes! Why in this howl of transport wound thy ears, When thou must learn what I must speak with tears? Heaven, by the Theban ghost, thy spouse decrees, Torn from thy arms, to sail a length of seas; From realm to realm, a nation to explore Who ne'er knew salt, or heard the billows roar, Nor saw gay vessel stem the surgy plain, A painted wonder, flying on the main: An oar my hand must bear; a shepherd eyes The unknown instrument with strange surprise, And calls a corn-van: this upon the plain I fix, and hail the monarch of the main; Then bathe his altars with the mingled gore Of victims vow'd, a ram, a bull, a boar; Thence swift re-sailing to my native shores, Due victims slay to all th' ethereal powers. Then Heaven decrees, in peace to end my days, And steal myself from life by slow decays; Unknown to pain, in age resign my breath, When late stern Neptune points the shaft of death; To the dark grave retiring as to rest; My people blessing, by my people blest. Such future scenes th' all-righteous powers display, By their dread seer, and such my future day. To whom thus firm of soul: If ripe for death, And full of days, thou gently yield thy breath; While Heaven a kind release from ills foreshows; Triumph, thou happy victor of thy woes! But Eurycleas with dispatchful care, And sage Eurynomé, the couch prepare: Instant they bid the blazing torch display Around the dome an artificial day; Tiresias.
Then to repose her steps the matron bends,
And to the queen Eurynome descends;
A torch she bears, to light with guiding fires
The royal pair; she guides them, and retires.
Then instant his fair spouse Ulysses led
To the chaste love-rites of the nuptial bed.
And now the blooming youths and sprightly fair
Geeze the gay dance, and to their rest repair;
But in discourse the king and consort lay,
While the soft hours stole unperceiv'd away;
Intent he hears Penelope disclose
A mournful story of domestic woes;
His servants' insults, his invaded bed,
How his whole flocks and herds exhausted bled,
His generous wines dishonour'd shed in vain,
And the wild riots of the suitor-train.
The king alternate a dire tale relates,
Of wars, of triumphs, and disastrous fates;
All he unfolds; his listening spouse turns pale
With pleasing horror at the dreadful tale;
Sleepless devours each word; and hears how slain
Cicons on Cicons swell th' ensanguin'd plain;
How to the land of Lote unblest he sails;
And images the rills, and flowery vales!
How dash'd like dogs his friends the Cyclops tore
(Not unreveng'd), and quaff'd the spouting gore;
How the loud storms in prison bound, he sails
From friendly Eolus with prosperous gales;
Yet fate withstands! a sudden tempest roars,
And whirls him groaning from his native shores;
How on the barbarous Læstrigonian coast,
By savage hands his fleet and friends he lost;
How scarce himself surviv'd: he paints the bower,
The spells of Circe, and her magic power;
His dreadful journey to the realms beneath,
To seek Tiresias in the vales of death;
How in the doleful mansions he survey'd
His royal mother, pale Anticlea's shade;
And friends in battle slain, heroic ghosts!
Then how, unharmed, he past the Syren-coasts,
BOOK XXIII. THE ODYSSEY.

The justling rocks where fierce Charybdis raves,
And howling Scylla whirls her thunderous waves,
The cave of death! How his companions slain
The oxen sacred to the god of day,
Till Jove in wrath the rattling tempest guides,
And whelms th' offenders in the roaring tides:
How struggling thro' the surge he reach'd the shores
Of fair Ogygia, and Calypso's bower;
Where the gay blooming nymph constrain'd his stay,
With sweet reluctant amorous delay;
And promis'd, vainly promis'd, to bestow
Immortal life, exempt from age and woe:
How sav'd from storms Phaeacia's coast he trod,
By great Alcinoüs honour'd as a god,
Who gave him last his country to behold,
With change of raiment, brass, and heaps of gold.

He ended, sinking into sleep, and shares
A sweet forgetfulness of all his cares.

Soon as soft slumber eas'd the toils of day,
Minerva rushes through th' aërial way,
And bids Aurora with her golden wheels
Flame from the ocean o'er the eastern hills:
Uprose Ulysses from the genial bed,
And thus with thought mature the monarch said,

My queen, my consort! through a length of years
We drank the cup of sorrow mix'd with tears;
Thou, for thy lord: while me th' immortal powers
Detain'd reluctant from my native shores.

Now, blest again by Heaven, the queen display,
And rule our palace with an equal sway.
Be it my care, by loans, or martial toils,
To throng my empty folds with gifts or spoils.
But now I haste to bless Laërtes' eyes
With sight of his Ulysses ere he dies;
The good old man, to wasting woes a prey,
Weeps a sad life in solitude away.
But hear, though wise! This morning shall unfold
The deathful scene, on heroes heroes roll'd;
Thou with thy maids within the palace stay,
From all the scene of tumult far awa!
He spoke, and sheath'd in arms incessant flies
To wake his son, and bid his friends arise.
To arms! aloud he cries: his friends obey,
With glittering arms their manly limbs array,
And pass the city-gate; Ulysses leads the way.
Now flames the rosy dawn, but Pallas shrouds
The latent warriors in a veil of clouds.
The souls of the suitors are conducted by Mercury to the infernal shades. Ulysses in the country goes to the retirement of his father Laërtes; he finds him busied in his garden all alone: the manner of his discovery to him is beautifully described. They return together to his lodge, and the king is acknowledged by Dolius and the servants. The Ithacensians, led by Eupithes, the father of Antinous, rise against Ulysses, who gives them battle, in which Eupithes is killed by Laërtes: and the goddess Pallas makes a lasting peace between Ulysses and his subjects, which concludes the Odyssey.
CYLLENIUS now to Pluto's dreary reign
Conveys the dead, a lamentable train!
The golden wand, that causes sleep to fly,
Or in soft slumber seals the wakeful eye,
That drives the ghosts to realms of night or day;
Points out the long uncomfortable way.
Trembling the spectres glide, and plaintive vent
Thin, hollow screams, along the deep descent.
As in the cavern of some rifted den,
Where flock nocturnal bats, and birds obscene;
Cluster'd they hang, till at some sudden shock
They move, and murmurs run through all the rock!
So cowering fled the sable heaps of ghosts,
And such a scream fill'd all the dismal coasts.
And now they reach'd the earth's remotest ends,
And now the gates where evening Sol descends,
And Leucas' rock, and Ocean's utmost streams,
And now pervade the dusky land of dreams,
And rest at last, where souls unbodied dwell
In ever-flowering meads of asphodel.
The empty forms of men inhabit there,
Impassive semblance, images of air!
Nought else are all that shin'd on earth before;
Ajax and great Achilles are no more!
Yet still a master-ghost, the rest he aw'd,
The rest ador'd him, towering as he trod;
Still at his side is Nestor's son survey'd,
And lov'd Patroclus still attends his shade.

New as they were to that infernal shore,
The suitors stopp'd, and gaz'd the hero o'er,
When, moving slow, the regal form they view'd
Of great Atrides: him in pomp pursu'd
And solemn sadness through the gloom of hell,
The train of those who by Ægysthus fell.

O mighty chief! (Pelides thus began)
Honour'd by Jove above the lot of man!
BOOK XXIV. THE ODYSSEY.

King of a hundred kings! to whom resign'd
The strongest, bravest, greatest of mankind,
Com'st thou the first, to view this dreary state?
And was the noblest, the first mark of Fate?
Condemn'd to pay the great arrear so soon,
The lot, which all lament, and none can shun!
Oh! better hadst thou sunk in Trojan ground,
With all thy full-blown honours cover'd round;
Then grateful Greece with streaming eyes might raise
Historic marbles to record thy praise:
Thy praise eternal on the faithful stone
Had with transmissive glories grac'd thy son,
But heavier fates were destin'd to attend:
What man is happy, till he knows his end?
O son of Peleus! greater than mankind!
(Thus Agamemnon's kingly shade rejoin'd)
Thrice happy thou, to press the martial plain
'Midst heaps of heroes in thy quarrel slain:
In clouds of smoke rais'd by the noble fray,
Great and terrific ev'n in death you lay,
And deluges of blood flow'd round you every way.
Nor ceas'd the strife till Jove himself oppos'd,
And all in tempests the dire evening clos'd.
Then to the fleet we bore thy honour'd load,
And decent on the fueral bed bestow'd.
Then unguents sweet and tepid streams we shed;
Tears flow'd from every eye, and o'er the dead
Each clipt the curling honours of his head.
Struck at the news thy asure mother came;
The sea-green sisters waited on the dame:
A voice of loud lament through all the main
Was heard; and terror seiz'd the Grecian train:
Back to their ships the frightened host had fled;
But Nestor spoke, they listen'd and obey'd
(From o'd experience Nestor's counsel springs,
And long vicissitudes of human things).

"Forbear your flight; fair Thetis from the main
To mourn Achilles leads her asure train."
Around thee stand the daughters of the deep,
Robe thee in heavenly vests, and round thee weep,
Round thee, the Muses, with alternate strain,
In ever-consecrating verse, complain.
Each warlike Greek the moving music hears,
And iron-hearted heroes melt in tears.
Till seventeen nights and seventeen days return'd,
All that was mortal or immortal mourn'd.
To flames we gave thee, the succeeding day,
And fatted sheep, and sable oxen slay;
With oils and honey blaze th' augmented fires,
And, like a god adorn'd, thy earthly part expires.
Unnumber'd warriors round the burning pile
Urge the fleet courser's or the racer's toil;
Thick clouds of dust o'er all the circle rise,
And the mix'd clamour thunders in the skies.
Soon as absorpt in all embracing flame
Sunk what was mortal of thy mighty name,
We then collect thy snowy bones, and place
With wines and unguents in a golden vase
(The vase to Thetis Bacchus gave of old,
And Vulcan's art enrich'd the sculptor's gold).
There, we thy relics, great Achilles! blend
With dear Patroclus, thy departed friend:
In the same urn a separate space contains
Thy next belov'd, Antilochoth's remains.
Now all the sons of warlike Greece surround
Thy destin'd tomb, and cast a mighty mound:
High on the shore the growing hill we raise,
That wide th' extended Hellespont surveys;
Where all, from age to age who pass the coast,
May point Achilles' tomb, and hail the mighty ghost.
Thetis herself to all our peers proclaims
Heroic prizes and exequial games;
The gods assented; and around thee lay
Rich spoils and gifts that blaze against the day.
Oft have I seen with solemn funeral games
Heroes and kings committed to the flames;
But strength of youth, or valour of the brave,
With nobler contest he'er renown'd a grave.
Such were the games by azure Thetis given,
And such thy honours, oh belov'd of Heaven!
Dear to mankind thy fame survives, nor fades
Its bloom eternal in the Stygian shades.
But what to me avail my honours gone,
Successful toils, and battles bravely won?
Doom'd by stern Jove at home to end my life,
By curst Egysthus, and a faithless wife!

Thus they: while Hermes o'er the dreary plain
Led the sad numbers by Ulysses slain.
On each majestic form they cast a view,
And timorous pass'd; and awfully withdrew.
But Agamemnon, through the gloomy shade,
His ancient host Amphimedon survey'd;
Son of Melanthus! (he began) O say!
What cause compell'd so many, and so gay,
To tread the downward, melancholy way?
Say, could one city yield a troop so fair?
Were all these partners of one native air?
Or did the rage of stormy Neptune sweep
Your lives at once, and whelm beneath the deep?
Did nightly thieves, or pirates' cruel bands,
Drench with your blood your pillag'd country's sands?

Or well-defending some beleaguer'd wall,
Say, for the public did ye greatly fall?
Inform thy guest: for such I was of yore
When our triumphant navies touch'd your shore;
Forc'd a long month the wintry seas to bear,
To move the great Ulysses to the war.

O king of men! I faithful shall relate
(Reply'd Amphimedon) our hapless fate.
Ulysses absent, our ambitious aim
With rival loves pursu'd his royal dame;
Her coy reserve, and prudence mixt with pride,
Our common suit nor granted, nor deny'd;
But close with inward hate our deaths design'd;
Vers'd in all arts of wily womankind.
Her hand, laborious, in delusion spread
A spacious loom, and mixt the various thread;
Ye peers (she cried) who press to gain my heart,
Where dead Ulysses claims no more a part.

BOOK XXIV. THE ODYSSEY.
Yet a short space your rival suit suspend,
Till this funereal web my labours end:
Cease, till to good Laertes I bequeath
A task of grief, his ornaments of death:
Lest, when the Fates his royal ashes claim,
The Grecian matrons taint my spotless fame;
Should he, long honour'd with supreme command,
Want the last duties of a daughter's hand.

The fiction pleas'd, our generous train complies,
Nor fraud mistrusts in virtue's fair disguise.
The work she ply'd, but studious of delay,
Each following night revers'd the toils of day.
Unheard, unseen, three years her arts prevail;
The fourth, her maid reveal'd th' amazing tale,
And show'd, as unperceiv'd we took our stand,
The backward labours of her faithless hand.
Forc'd, she completes it; and before us lay
The mingled web, whose gold and silver ray
Display'd the radiance of the night and day.

Just as she finish'd her illustrious toil,
Ill-fortune led Ulysses to our isle.
Far in a lonely nook, beside the sea,
At an old swine-herd's rural lodge he lay:
Thither his son from sandy Pyle repairs,
And speedy lands, and secretly confers.
They plan our future ruin, and resort
Confederate to the city and the court.
First came the son; the father next succeeds,
Clad like a beggar, whom Eumæus leads;
Propp'd on a staff, deform'd with age and care,
And hung with rags that flutter'd in the air.
Who could Ulysses in that form behold?
Scorn'd by the young, forgotten by the old,
Ill-us'd by all! to every wrong resign'd,
Patient he suffer'd with a constant mind.
But when, arising in his wrath t' obey
The will of Jove, he gave the vengeance way:
The scatter'd arms that hung around the dome
Careful he treasure'd in a private room:
Then to her suitors bade his queen propose
The archer's strife, the source of future woes,
And omen of our death! In vain we drew
The twanging string, and try'd the stubborn yew:
To none it yields but great Ulysses' hands;
In vain we threat; Telemachus commands:
The bow he snatch'd, and in an instant bent;
Through every ring the victor arrow went.
Fierce on the threshold then in arms he stood;
Pour'd forth the darts that thirsted for our blood,
And frown'd before us, dreadful as a god!
First bleeds Antinous: thick the shafts resound;
And heaps on heaps the wretches strew the ground;
This way, and that, we turn, we fly, we fall;
Some god assisted, and unman'd us all:
Ignoble cries proceed the dying groans;
And batter'd brains and blood besmear the stones.
Thus, great Atrides; thus Ulysses drove
The shades thou seest, from you fair realms above,
Our mangled bodies now deform'd with gore,
Cold and neglected, spread the marble floor.
No friend to bathe our wounds! or tears to shed
O'er the pale corpse! the honours of the dead.
Oh blest Ulysses! (thys the king exprest
His sudden rapture) in thy consort blest!
Not more thy wisdom than her virtue shin'd;
Not more thy patience than her constant mind.
Icarius' daughter, glory of the past,
And model to the future age, shall last:
The gods, to honour her fair fame shall raise
(Their great reward) a poet in her praise.
Not such, oh Tyndarus'! thy daughter's deed,
By whose dire hand her king and husband bled;
Her shall the Muse to infamy prolong,
Example dread; and theme of tragic song!
The general sex shall suffer in her shame,
And ev'n the best that bears a woman's name.
Thus in the regions of eternal shade
Conferr'd the mournful phantoms of the dead.
While from the town Ulysses, and his band,
Past to Laertes' cultivated land.
The ground himself had purchas'd with his pain,
And labour made the rugged soil a plain.
There stood his mansion of the rural sort,
With useful buildings round the lowly court;
Where the few servants that divide his care
Took their laborious rest, and homely fare;
And one Sicilian matron, old and sage,
With constant duty tends his drooping age.

Here now arriving, to his rustic band
And martial son, Ulysses gave command.
Enter the house, and of the bristly swine
Select the largest to the powers divine.
Alone, and unattended, let me try
If yet I share the old man's memory:
If those dim eyes can yet Ulysses know
Their light and dearest object long ago,
Now chang'd with time, with absence, and with woe.
Then to his train he gives his spear and shield;
The house they enter; and he seeks the field,
Thro' rows of shade with various fruitage crown'd,
And labour'd scenes of richest vordure round.
Nor aged Dolius, nor his sons were there,
Nor servants, absent on another care;
To search the woods for sets of flowery thorn,
Their orchard bounds to strengthen and adorn.

But all alone the hoary king he found;
His habit coarse, but warmly wrapt around;
His head, that bow'd with many a pensive care,
Fenc'd with a double cap of goatskin hair:
His buskins old, in former service torn,
But well repair'd; and gloves against the thorn.
In this array the kingly gardener stood,
And clear'd a plant, encumber'd with its wood.
Beneath a neighbour'ing tree, the chief divine
Gaz'd o'er his sire, retracing every line,
The ruins of himself! now worn away
With age, yet still majestic in decay!
BOOK XXIV. THE ODYSSEY.

Sudden his eyes releas'd their watery store;
The much-enduring man could bear no more.
Doubtful he stood, if instant to embrace
His aged limbs, to kiss his reverend face,
With eager transport to disclose the whole,
And pour at once the torrent of his soul.—
Not so: his judgment takes the winding way
Of question distast, and of soft essay;
More gentle methods on weak age employs:
And moves the sorrows, to enhance the joys.
Then, to his sire with beating heart he moves,
And with a tender pleasantry reproves;
Who digging round the plant still hangs his head,
Nor aught remits the work, while thus he said.
Great is thy skill, oh father! great thy toil,
Thy careful hand is stampt on all the soil,
Thy squadron'd vineyards well thy art declare,
The olive green, blue fig, and pendent pear;
And not one empty spot escapes thy care.
On every plant and tree thy cares are shown,
Nothing neglected, but thyself alone.
For live, father, if this fault I blame;
Age so advanc'd may some indulgence claim.
Not for the sloth, I deem thy lord unkind:
Nor speak, thy form a mean or servile mind;
I read a monarch in that princely air,
The same thy aspect, if the same thy care;
Soft sleep, fair garments, and the joys of wine,
These are the rights of age, and should be thine.
Who then thy master, say? and whose the land.
So dress'd and manag'd by thy skilful hand?
But chief, oh tell me! (what I question most)
Is this the far-fam'd Ithacensian coast?
For so reported the first man I view'd
(Some surly islander, of manners rude),
Nor farther conference vouchsaf'd to stay;
Headless he whistled, and pursu'd his way.
But thou, whom years have taught to understand,
Humanely hear, and answer my demand:
A friend I seek, a wise one and a brave,
Say, lives he yet, or moulders in the grave?
Time was (my fortunes then were at the best)
When at my house I lodg'd this foreign guest;
He said, from Ithaca's fair isle he came,
And old Laertes was his father's name.
To him, whatever to a guest is ow'd
I paid, and hospitable gifts bestow'd:
To him seven talents of pure ore I told,
Twelve cloaks, twelve vests, twelve tunics stiff with gold;
A bowl, that rich with polish'd silver flames,
And, skill'd in female works, four lovely dames.

At this the father, with a father's fears
(His venerable eyes bedimm'd with tears).
This is the land; but ah! thy gifts are lost,
For godless men, and rude, possess the coast:
Sink is the glory of this once-fam'd shore!
Thy ancient friend, oh stranger, is no more!
Full recompence thy bounty else had borne;
For every good man yields a just return:
So civil rights demand; and who begins
The track of friendship, not pursuing, sins.
But tell me, stranger, be the truth cou'est,
What years have circled since thou saw'st that guest?
That hapless guest, alas! for ever gone!
Wretch that he was! and that I am! my son!
If ever man to misery was born,
'Twas his to suffer and 'tis mine to mourn!
Far from his friends, and from his native reign,
He lies a prey to monsters of the main,
Or savage beasts his mangled relics tear,
Or screaming vultures scatter through the air:
Nor could his mother funeral unguents shed;
Nor wail'd his father o'er th' untimely dead:
Nor his sad consort, on the mournful bier,
Seal'd his cold eyes, or dropp'd a tender tear!
But, tell me who thou art? and what thy race?
Thy town, thy parents, and thy native place?
Or, if a merchant in pursuit of gain, 330
What port receiv'd thy vessel from the main?
Or com'st thou single, or attend thy train?
Then thus the son. From Alybas I came, 335
My palace there; Eperitus my name.
Not vulgar born; from Aphidas, the king
Of Polyphemus's royal line, I spring,
Some adverse deamon from Sicania bore
Our wandering course, and drove us on your shore;
Far from the town, an unfrequented bay
Reliev'd our wearied vessel from the sea.
Five years have circled since these eyes pursu'd
Ulysses parting through the sable flood;
Prosperous he sail'd, with dexter auguries,
And all the wing'd good omens of the skies.
Well hop'd we, then, to meet on this fair shore,
Whom Heaven, alas! decreed to meet no more.
Quick through the father's heart these accents ran;
Grief seiz'd at once, and wrap't up all the man:
Deep from his soul he sigh'd, and sorrowing spread
A cloud of ashes on his heary head.
Trembling with agonies of strong delight
Stood the great son, heart-wounded with the sight:
He ran, he seiz'd him with a strict embrace,
With thousand kisses wander'd o'er his face.
I, I am he; oh father, rise! behold
Thy son, with twenty winters now grown old;
Thy son, so long desir'd, so long detain'd,
Restor'd, and breathing in his native land:
These floods of sorrow, oh my sire restrain!
The vengeance is complete; the suitor-train,
Stretch'd in our palace, by these hands lie slain.
Amas'd, Laërtes. "Give some certain sign
"(If such thou art) to manifest thee mine."
Lo here the wound (he cries) receiv'd of yore,
The scar indented by the tusky boar,
When, by thyself, and by Anticlea sent,
To old Autolycus's realms I went.
Yet by another sign thy offspring know;
The several trees you gave me long ago,
While, yet a child, these fields I lov’d to trace,
And trod’thry footsteps with unequal pace;
To every plant in order as we came,
Well-pleas’d, you told its nature and its name,
Whate’er my childish fancy ask’d, bestow’d; 394
Twelve pear-trees bowing with their pendent load,
And ten, that red with blushing apples glow’d;
Full fifty purple figs; and many a row.
Of various vines that then began to blow,
A future vintage! when the Hours produce
Their latent buds, and Sol exalts the juice. 400

Smit with the sighs which all his doubts explain,
His heart within him melts; his knees sustain
Their feeble weight no more: his arms alone
Support him, round the lov’d Ulysses thrown;
He faints, he sinks, with mighty joys opprest: 405
Ulysses clasps him to his eager breast.
Soon as returning life regains its seat,
And his breath lengthens, and his pulses beat;
Yes, I believe (he cries) almighty Jove!
Heaven rules us yet, and gods there are above. 410
’Tis so—the suitors for their wrongs have paid—
But what shall guard us, if the town invade?
If, while the news through every city flies,
All Ithaca and Cephalenia rise?

To this Ulysses: As the gods shall please 415
Be all the rest; and set thy soul at ease.
Haste to the cottage by this orchard’s side,
And take the banquet which our cares provide:
There wait thy faithful band of rural friends,
And there the young Telemachus attends. 420

Thus having said, they trac’d the garden o’er,
And stooping enter’d at the lowly door.
The swains and young Telemachus they found,
The victim portion’d, and the goblet crown’d.
The hoary king, his old Sicilian maid 425
Perfum’d and wash’d, and gorgeously array’d.
Pallas attending gives his frame to shine
With awful port, and majesty divine;
BOOK XXIV. THE ODYSSEY.

His gazing son admires the godlike grace,
And air celestial dawning o'er his face.

What god, he cry'd, my father's form improves?
How high he treads, and how enlarg'd he moves!

Oh! would to all the deathless powers on high,
Pallas and Jove, and him who gilds the sky!
(Reply'd the king elated with his praise)

My strength were still, as once in better days:
When the bold Cephalans the leaguer form'd,
And proud Neritus trembled as I storm'd.
Such were I now, not absent from your deed
When the last sun beheld the suitors bleed,

This arm had aided yours, this hand bestrown
Our shores with death, and push'd the slaughter on;
Nor had the sire been separate from the son.

They commun'd thus; while homeward bent their way

The swains, fatigu'd with labours of the day:
Dolius the first, the venerable man;
And next his sons, a long succeeding train.
For due refection to the bower they came,
Call'd by the careful old Sicilian dame,

Who nurs'd the children, and now tends the sire;
They see their lord, they gaze, and they admire.
On chairs and beds in order seated round,
They share the gladsome board; the roofs resound,
While thus Ulysses to his ancient friend:

"Forbear your wonder, and the feast attend;
"The rites have waited long." The chief commands
Their loves in vain; old Dolius spreads his hands,
Springs to his master with a warm embrace,
And fastens kisses on his hands and face;
Then thus broke out? Oh long, oh daily mourn'd!
Beyond our hopes, and to our wish return'd!
Conducted sure by Heaven! for Heaven alone
Could work this wonder: welcome to thy own!
And joys and happiness attend thy throne!
Who knows thy blest, thy wish'd return? oh say.
To the chaste queen shall we the news convey?
Or hears she, and with blessings load the day?
THE ODYSSEY. BOOK XXIV.

Dismiss that care, for to the royal bridle
Already is it known, (the king reply'd,
And straight resum'd his seat); while round him bows
Each faithful youth, and breathes out ardent vows:
Then all beneath their father take their place,
Rank'd by their ages, and the banquet grace.

Now flying Fame the swift report had spread
Through all the city, of the suitors dead.
In throngs they rise, and to the palace crowd;
Their sighs were many, and the tumult loud.
Weeping they bear the mangled heaps of slain,
Inhume the natives in their native plain,
The rest in ships are wafted o'er the main.
Then sad in council all the seniors sate,
Frequent and full, assembled to debate,
Amid the circle first Eupithes rose,
Big was his eye with tears, his heart with woes:
The bold Antinous was his age's pride,
The first who by Ulysses' arrow died.
Down his wan cheek the trickling torrent ran,
As mixing words with sighs, he thus began.

Great deeds, oh friends! this wondrous man has wrought,
And mighty blessings to his country brought!
With ships he parted, and a numerous train,
Those, and their ships, he bury'd in the main.
Now he returns, and first essays his hand
In the best blood of all his native land.
Haste then, and ere to neighbouring Pyle he flies,
Or sacred Elis, to procure supplies;
Arise (or ye for ever fall), arise!
Shame to this age, and all that shall succeed!
If unreveng'd your sons and brothers bleed.
Prove that we live, by vengeance on his head,
Or sink at once forgotten with the dead.

Here ceas'd he, but indignant tears let fall
Spoke when he ceas'd: dumb sorrow touch'd them all.
When from the palace to the wondering throng
Sage Medon came, and Phemius came along.
BOOK XXIV. THE ODYSSEY.

(Restless and early sleep's soft hands they broke); Aud Medon first th' assembled chiefs bespoke.

Hear me, ye peers and elders of the land,
Who deem this act the work of mortal hand;
As o'er the heaps of death Ulysses strode,
These eyes, these eyes beheld a present god,
Who now before him, now beside him stood,
Pought as he sought, and mark'd his way with blood:
In vain old Mentor's form the god belied;
'Twas Heaven that struck, and Heaven was on his side.

A sudden horror all th' assembly shook,
When slowly rising, Halitherses spoke (Reverend and wise, whose comprehensive view
At once the present and the future knew):
Me too, ye fathers, hear! from you proceed
The ills ye mourn; your own the guilty deed,
Ye gave your sons, your lawless sons the rein
(Oft warn'd by Mentor and myself in vain);
An absent hero's bed they sought to soil,
An absent hero's wealth they made their spoil;
Immoderate riot, and intemperate lust!
Th' offence was great, the punishment was just.
Weigh then my counsels in an equal scale,
Nor rush to ruin. Justice will prevail.

His moderate words some better minds persuade:
They part, and join him; but the number stay'd.
They storm, they shout, with hasty phrenzy fir'd,
And second all Eupithes' rage inspir'd.
They case their limbs in brass; to arms they run;
The broad effulgence blazes in the sun.
Before the city, and in ample plain,
They meet: Eupithes heads the frantic grain.
Fierce for his son, he breathes his threats in air;
Fate hears them not, and Death attends him there.
This pass'd on earth, while in the realms above
Minerva thus to cloud-compelling Jove,
May I presume to search thy secret soul?
Oh Power supreme, oh Ruler of the whole!
Say, hast thou doom'd to this divided state
Or peaceful amity, or stern debate?
Declare thy purpose, for thy will is fate.
Is not thy thought my own? (the god replies)
Who rolls the thunder o'er the vaulted skies?
Hath not long since thy knowing soul decreed,
The chief's return should make the guilty bleed?
'Tis done, and at thy will the Fates succeed.
Yet hear the issue; since Ulysses' hand
Has slain the suitors. Heaven shall bless the land.
None now the kindred of th' unjust shall own;
Forgot the slaughter'd brother and the son:
Each future day increase of wealth shall bring,
And o'er the past Oblivion stretch her wing.
Long shall Ulysses in his empire rest,
His people blessing, by his people blest.
Let all be peace—He said, and gave the nod
That binds the Fates; the sanction of the god:
And, prompt to execute th' eternal will,
Descended Pallas from th' Olympian hill.
Now sat Ulysses at the rural feast,
The rage of hunger and of thirst repress:
To watch the foe a trusty spy he sent:
A son of Dolius on the message went,
Stood in the way, and at a glance beheld
The foe approach, embattled on the field,
With backward step he hastens to the bower,
And tells the news. They arm with all their power.
Four friends alone Ulysses' cause embrace,
And six were all the sons of Dolius' race:
Old Dolius too his rusted arms put on;
And, still more old, in arms Laërtes shone.
Trembling with warmth, the hoary heroes stand,
And brazen panoply invests the band.
The opening gates at once their war display:
Fierce they rush forth: Ulysses leads the way.
That moment joins them with celestial aid,
In Mentor's form, the Jove-descended maid:
The suffering hero felt his patient breast
Swell with new joy, and thus his son addrest.
Behold, Telemachus! (nor fear the sight),
The brave embattled, the grim front of fight!
The valiant with the valiant must contend:
Shame not the line whencee glorious you descend,
Wide o'er the world their martial fame was spread;
Regard thyself, the living, and the dead.
Thy eyes, great father! on this battle cast,
Shall learn from me Penelope was chaste.

So spoke Telemachus! the gallant boy
Good old Laërtes heard with panting joy;
And bleat! thrice blest this happy day! he cries,
The day that shows me, ere I close my eyes,
A son and grandson of th' Arcesian name
Strive for fair virtue, and contest for fame!

Then thus Minerva in Laërtes' ear:
Son of Arcesius, reverend warrior, hear!
Jove and Jove's daughter first implore in prayer,
Then, whirling high, discharge thy lance in air.
She said, infusing courage with the word.
Jove and Jove's daughter then the chief implor'd,
And, whirling high, dismiss'd the lance in air.
Full at Eupithes drove the deathful spear:
The brass-cheek'd helmet opens to the wound;
He falls, earth thunders, and his arms resound.

Before the father and the conquering son
Heaps rush on heaps, they fight, they drop, they run.
Now by the sword, and now the javelin fall
The rebel race, and death had swallow'd all;
But from on high the blue-ey'd virgin cry'd;
Her awful voice detain'd the headlong tide.
"Forbear, ye nations, your mad hands forbear"
"From mutual slaughter; Peace descends to spare."
Fear shook the nations: at the voice divine
They drop their javelins, and their rage resign.
All scatter'd round their glittering weapons lie;
Some fall to earth, and some confus'dly fly.
With dreadful shouts Ulysses pour'd along,
Swift as an eagle, as an eagle strong.
But Jove's red arm the burning thunder aims;
Before Minerva shot the livid flames;
THE ODYSSEY.   BOOK XXIV.

Blazing they fell, and at her feet expir'd;
Then stopt the goddess, trembled, and retir'd.  625
Descended from the gods! Ulysses, cease;
Offend not Jove: obey, and give the peace.
So Pallas spoke: the mandate from above
The king obey'd. The virgin-seed of Jove,
In Mentor's form confirm'd the full accord,  630
"And willing nations knew their lawful lord."

POSTSCRIPT.

BY MR. POPE.

I CANNOT dismiss this work without a few observations on the character and style of it. Whoever reads the Odyssey with an eye to the Iliad, expecting to find it of the same character, or of the same sort of spirit, will be grievously deceived; and err against the first principle of criticism, which is, to consider the nature of the piece, and the intent of its author. The Odyssey is a moral and political work, instructive to all degrees of men, and filled with images, examples, and precepts of civil and domestic life. Homer is here a person,

"Qui didicit, patriæ quid debet, & quid amicis,
"Quo sit amore parens, quo frater amandus, & hospes;
"Qui quid sit pulchrum, quid turpe, quid utile, quid
"non,
"Plenius & melius Chrysippo & Crantore dicit."

The Odyssey is the reverse of the Iliad, in moral, subject, manner, and style; to which it has no sort of relation, but as the story happens to follow in order of time, and as some of the same persons are actors in it. Yet from this incidental connection many have been misled to regard it as a continuation or second part, and thence to expect a parity of character inconsistent with its nature.

It is no wonder that the common reader should fall into this mistake, when so great a critic as Longinus seems not wholly free from it; although what he has said has been generally understood to import a severer censure of the Odyssey than it really does, if we consider the occasion on which it is introduced, and the circumstances to which it is confined.

"The Odyssey (says he) is an instance how natural it is to a great genius, when it begins to grow old and decline, to delight itself in narrations and fables. For that Homer composed the Odyssey after the Iliad, many proofs may be given, &c. From hence, in my judgment, it proceeds, that as the Iliad was written while his spirit was in its greatest vigour, the whole structure of that work, is dramatic and full of action; whereas the greater part of the Odyssey is employed in narration, which is the taste of old age: so that in this latter piece we may compare him to the setting sun, which has still the same greatness, but not the same ardour, or force. He speaks not in the same strain; we see no more that sublime of the Iliad, which marches on with a constant pace, without ever being stopped or retarded: there appears no more that hurry, and that strong tide of motions and passions, pouring one after another: there is no more the same fury, or the same volubility of diction, so suitable to action, and all along drawing in such innumerable images of nature. But Homer, like the ocean, is always great, even when he ebbs and retires; even when he is lowest, and loses himself most in narrations and incredible fictions: as instances of this, we cannot forget the descriptions of tempests, the adventures of Ulysses with the Cyclops, and many others. But, though all this be age, it is the age of Homer—And it may be said for the credit of these fictions, that they are beautiful dreams, or if you will, the dreams of Jupiter himself. I spoke of the Odyssey only to show, that the greatest poets, when their genius wants strength and warmth for the pathetic, for the most "part employ themselves in painting the manners.

"This Homer has done in characterising the suitors,
"and describing their way of life; which is properly
"a branch of comedy, whose peculiar business it is
"to represent the manners of men."

We must first observe, it is the sublime of which Longinus is writing: that, and not the nature of Homer's poem, is his subject. After having highly extolled the sublimity and fire of the Iliad, he justly observes the Odyssey to have less of those qualities, and to turn more on the side of moral, and reflections on human life. Nor is it his business here to determine, whether the elevated spirit of the one, or the just moral of the other, be the greater excellence in itself.

Secondly, that fire and fury of which he is speaking, cannot well be meant of the general spirit and inspiration which is to run through a whole epic poem, but of that particular warmth and impetuosity necessary in some parts, to image or represent actions or passions, of haste, tumult, and violence. It is on occasion of citing some such particular passages in Homer, that Longinus breaks into this reflection; which seems to determine his meaning chiefly to that sense.

Upon the whole, he affirms the Odyssey to have less sublimity and fire than the Iliad, but he does not say it wants the sublime, or wants fire. He affirms it to be narrative, but not that the narration is defective. He affirms it to abound in fictions, not that those fictions are ill invented, or ill executed. He affirms it to be nice and particular in painting the manners, but not that those manners are ill painted. If Homer has fully in these points accomplished his own design, and done all that the nature of his poem demanded or allowed, it still remains perfect in its kind, and as much a masterpiece as the Iliad.

The amount of the passage is this; that in his own particular taste, and with respect to the sublime,
Postscript.

Longinus preferred the Iliad: and because the Odyssey was less active and lofty, he judged it the work of the old age of Homer.

If this opinion be true, it will only prove, that Homer's age might determine him in the choice of his subject, not that it affected him in the execution of it; and that which would be a very wrong instance to prove the decay of his imagination, is a very good one to evince the strength of his judgment. For had he (as Madam Dacier observes) composed the Odyssey in his youth, and the Iliad in his age, both must in reason have been exactly the same as they now stand. To blame Homer for his choice of such a subject, as did not admit the same incidents and the same pomp of style as his former, is to take offence at too much variety, and to imagine, that when a man has written one good thing, he must ever after only copy himself.

The Battle of Constantine, and the School of Athens, are both pieces of Raphael: shall we censure the School of Athens as faulty, because it has not the fury and fire of the other? or shall we say that Raphael was grown grave and old, because he chose to represent the manners of old men and philosophers? There is all the silence, tranquillity, and composure in the one, and all the warmth, hurry, and tumult in the other, which the subject of either required: both of them had been imperfect, if they had not been as they are. And let the painter or poet be young or old, who designs or performs in this manner, it proves him to have made the piece at a time of life when he was master not only of his art, but of his discretion.

Aristotle makes no such distinction between the two poems: he constantly cites them with equal praise, and draws the rules and examples of epic writing equally from both. But it is rather to the Odyssey that Horace gives the preference, in the Epistle to Lollius, and in the Art of Poetry. It is remarkable how opposite his opinion is to that of
POSTSCRIPT.

Longinus; and that the particulars he chooses to ex-tol, are those very fictions, and pictures of the man-ers, which the other seems least to approve. Those fables and manners are of the very essence of the work: but even without that regard, the fables themselves have both more invention and more instruction, and the manners more moral and example than those of the Iliad.

In some points (and those the most essential to the epic poem) the Odyssey is confessed to excel
the Iliad; and principally in the great end of it, the moral. The conduct, turn, and disposition of the fable is also what the critics allow to be the better model for epic writers to follow; accordingly we find much more of the cast of this poem than of the other in the Æneid, and (what next to that is perhaps the greatest example) in the Telemachus. In the manners it is no way inferior;
Longinus is so far from finding any defect in these,
that he rather taxes Homer with painting them too minutely. As to the narrations, although they are more numerous as the occasions are more frequent, yet they carry no more the marks of old age, and are neither more prolix, nor more circumstantial, than the conversations and dialogues of the Iliad.
Not to mention the length of those of Phænix in the ninth book, and of Nestor in the eleventh (which may be thought in compliance to their characters), those of Glaucus in the sixth, of Æneas in the twentieth, and some others, must be allowed to exceed any in the whole Odyssey. And that the propriety of style, and the numbers, in the narrations of each are equal, will appear to any who compare them.

To form a right judgment, whether the genius of Homer had suffer'd any decay; we must consider, in both his poems, such parts as are of a similar nature, and will bear comparison. And it is certain we shall find in each the same vivacity and fecundity of invention, the same life and strength of imaging and colouring, the particular descriptions as highly.
POSTSCRIPT.

Painted, the figures as bold, the metaphors as animated, and the numbers as harmonious, and as various.

The Odyssey is a perpetual source of poetry: the stream is not the less full for being gentle; though it is true (when we speak only with regard to the sublime) that a river, foaming and thundering in cataracts from rocks and precipices, is what more strikes,ames, and fills the mind, than the same body of water, flowing afterwards through peaceful vales and agreeable scenes of pasturage.

The Odyssey (as I have before said) ought to be considered according to its own nature and design, not with an eye to the Iliad. To censure Homer, because it is unlike what it was never meant to resemble, is as if a gardener, who had purposely cultivated two beautiful trees of contrary natures, as a specimen of his skill in the several kinds, should be blamed for not bringing them into pairs; when in root, stem, leaf, and flower, each was so entirely different, that one must have been spoiled in the endeavour to match the other.

Longinus, who saw this poem was "partly of the "nature of comedy," ought not, for that very reason, to have considered it with a view to the Iliad. How little any such resemblance was the intention of Homer, may appear from hence, that, although the character of Ulysses was there already drawn, yet here he purposely turns to another side of it, and shows him not in that full light of glory, but in the shade of common life, with a mixture of such qualities as are requisite for all the lowest accidents of it, struggling with misfortunes, and on a level with the meanest of mankind. As for the other persons, none of them are above what we call the higher comedy: Calypso, though a goddess, is a character of intrigue; the suitors yet more approaching to it; the Phaeacians are of the same cast; the Cyclops, Melanthius, and Irus, descend even to droll characters; and the scenes that appear throughout are ge-versally of the comic kind; banquets, revels, sports, loves, and the pursuit of a woman.

From the nature of the poem, we shall form an idea of the style. The diction is to follow the images, and to take its colour from the completion of the thoughts. Accordingly the Odyssey is not always clothed in the majesty of verse proper to tragedy, but sometimes descends into the plainer narrative, and sometimes even to that familiar dialogue essential to comedy. However, where it cannot support a sublimity, it always preserves a dignity, or at least a propriety.

There is a real beauty in an easy, pure, perspicuous description, even of a low action. There are numerous instances of this both in Homer and Virgil; and perhaps those natural passages are not the least pleasing of their works. It is often the same in history, where the representations of common, or even domestic things, in clear, plain, and natural words, are frequently found to make the liveliest impression on the reader.

The question is, how far a poet, in pursuing the description or image of an action, can attach himself to little circumstances, without vulgarity or trifling? what particulars are proper, and enliven the image; or what are impertinent, and clog it? In this matter painting is to be consulted, and the whole regard had to those circumstances which contribute to form a full, and yet not a confused, idea of a thing.

Epithets are of vast service to this effect, and the right use of these is often the only expedient to render the narration poetical.

The great point of judgment is to distinguish when to speak simply, and when figuratively: but whenever the poet is obliged by the nature of his subject to descend to the lower manner of writing, an elevated style would be affected, and therefore ridiculous; and the more he was forced upon figures and metaphors to avoid that lowness, the more the image would be broken, and consequently obscure.
POSTSCRIPT.

One may add, that the use of the grand style on little subjects, is not only ludicrous, but a sort of transgression against the rules of proportion and mechanics: it is using a vast force to lift a feather.

I believe, now I am upon this head, it will be found a just observation, that the low actions of life cannot be put into a figurative style, without being ridiculous; but things natural can. Metaphors raise the latter into dignity, as we see in the Georgics: but throw the former into ridicule, as in the Lutrin. I think this may very well be accounted for; laughter implies censure; inanimate and irrational beings are not objects of censure; therefore they may be elevated as much as you please, and no ridicule follows: but when rational beings are represented above their real character it becomes ridiculous in art, because it is vicious in morality. The bees in Virgil, were they rational beings, would be ridiculous by having their actions and manners represented on a level with creatures so superior as men; since it would imply folly or pride, which are the proper objects of ridicule.

The use of pompous expressions for low actions or thoughts is the true sublime of Don Quixote. How far unfit it is for epic poetry, appears in its being the perfection of the mock epic. It is so far from being the sublime of tragedy, that it is the cause of all bombast; when poets, instead of being (as they imagine) constantly lofty, only preserve throughout a painful equality of fustian; that continued swell of language (which runs indiscriminately even through their lowest characters, and rattles like some mightiness of meaning in the most indifferent subjects) is of a piece with that perpetual elevation of tone which the players have learnt from it; and which is not speaking, but vociferating.

There is still more reason for a variation of style in epic poetry than in tragic, to distinguish between that language of the gods proper to the muse who sings, and is inspired; and that of men, who are im-produced speaking only according to nature. Farther, there ought to be a difference of style observed in the speeches of human persons, and those of deities; and again, in those which may be called set harangues or orations, and those which are only conversation or dialogue. Homer has more of the latter than any other poet; what Virgil does by two or three words of narration, Homer still performs by speeches: not only replies, but even rejoinders are frequent in him, a practice almost unknown to Virgil. This renders his poems more animated, but less grave and majestic; and consequently necessitates the frequent use of a lower style. The writers of tragedy lie under the same necessity if they would copy nature; whereas that painted and poetical diction which they perpetually use, would be improper even in orations designed to move with all the arts of rhetoric: this is plain from the practice of Demosthenes and Cicero; and Virgil in those of Drances and Turnus gives an eminent example, how far removed the style of them ought to be from such an excess of figures and ornaments; which indeed fits only that language of the gods we have been speaking of, or that of a muse under inspiration.

To read through a whole work in this strain, is like travelling all along the ridge of a hill; which is not half so agreeable as sometimes gradually to rise, and sometimes gently to descend, as the way leads, and as the end of the journey directs.

Indeed the true reason that so few poets have imitated Homer in these lower parts, has been the extreme difficulty of preserving that mixture of ease and dignity essential to them. For it is as hard for an epic poem to stoop to the narrative with success, as for a prince to descend to be familiar, without diminution to his greatness.

The sublime style is more easily counterfeit than the natural: something that passes for it, or sounds like it, is common in all false writers: but nature, purity, perspicuity, and simplicity, never walk in the clouds; they are obvious to all capacities; and where they are not evident, they do not exist.

The most plain narration not only admits of these; and of harmony (which are all the qualities of style), but it requires every one of them to render it pleasing. On the contrary, whatever pretends to a share of the sublime, may pass, notwithstanding any defects in the rest; nay, sometimes without any of them, and gain the admiration of all ordinary readers.

Homer, in his lowest narrations or speeches, is ever easy, flowing, copious, clear, and harmonious. He shows not less invention in assembling the humbler, than the greater, thoughts and images; nor less judgment in proportioning the style and the versification to these, than to the other. Let it be remembered, that the same genius that soord the highest, and from whom the greatest models of the sublime are derived, was also he who stooped the lowest, and gave to the simple narrative its utmost perfection. Which of these was the harder task to Homer himself, I cannot pretend to determine; but to his translator I can affirm (however unequal all his imitations must be) that of the latter has been much more difficult.

Whoever expects here the same pomp of verse, and the same ornaments of diction, as in the Iliad, he will, and he ought to be, disappointed. Were the original otherwise, it had been an offence against nature; and were the translation so, it were an offence against Homer, which is the same thing.

It must be allowed that there is a majesty and harmony in the Greek language, which greatly contribute to elevate and support the narration. But I must also observe that this is an advantage grown upon the language since Homer's time: for things are removed from vulgarity by being out of use; and if the words we could find in any present language were equally sonorous or musical in themselves, they would still appear less poetical and uncommon than those of a dead one, from this only circumstance, of being in every man's mouth. I may add to this another disadvantage to a translator, from a different cause: Homer seems to have taken upon him the character of an historian, antiquary, divine, and professor of arts and sciences, as well as a poet. In one or other of these characters, he descends into many particularities, which as a poet only perhaps he would have avoided. All these ought to be preserved by a faithful translator, who in some measure takes the place of Homer; and all that can be expected from him is to make them as poetical as the subject will bear. Many arts therefore are requisite to supply these disadvantages, in order to dignify and solemnize these plainer parts, which hardly admit of any poetical ornaments.

Some use has been made to this end of the style of Milton. A just and moderate mixture of old words may have an effect like the working old abbey stones into a building, which I have sometimes seen to give a kind of venerable air, and yet not destroy the neatness, elegance, and equality, requisite to a new work; I mean, without rendering it too unfa- miliar, or remote from the present purity of writing, or from that ease and smoothness, which ought always to accompany narration or dialogue. In reading a style judiciously antiquated, one finds a pleasure not unlike that of travelling on an old Roman way: but then the road must be as good as the way is ancient: the style must be such in which me may evenly proceed, without being put to short stops by sudden abruptnesses, or puzzled by frequent turnings and transpositions. No man delights in furrows and stumbling-blocks: and let our love to antiquity be ever so great, a fine ruin is one thing, and a heap of rubbish another. The imitators of Milton, like most other imitators, are not copies but caricatures of their original; they are a hundred times more obsolete and cramp than he, and equally so in all places: whereas it should have been observed of Milton, that he is not lavish of his exotic words and phrases everywhere alike, but employs them much more where the subject is marvellous, vast, and strange, as in the scenes of heaven, hell, chaos, &c. than where it is turned to the natural and agreeable, as in the pictures of paradise, the loves of our first parents, entertainments of angels, and the like. In general, this unusual style better serves to awaken our ideas in the descriptions and in the imaging and picturesque parts, than it agrees with the lower sort of narrations, the character of which is simplicity and purity. Milton has several of the latter, where we find not an antiquated, affected, or uncouth word, for some hundred lines together; as in his fifth book, the latter part of the eighth, the former of the tenth and eleventh books, and in the narration of Michael in the twelfth. I wonder indeed that he, who ventured (contrary to the practice of all other epic poets) to imitate Homer's lownesses in the narrative, should not also have copied his plainness and perspicuity in the dramatic parts: since in his speeches (where clearness above all is necessary) there is frequently such transposition and forced construction, that the very sense is not to be discovered without a second or third reading, and in this certainly ought to be no example.

To preserve the true character of Homer's style in the present translation, great pains have been taken to be easy and natural. The chief merit I can pretend to, is, not to have been carried into a more plausible and figurative manner of writing, which would better have pleased all readers, but the judicious ones. My errors had been fewer, had each of those gentlemen who joined with me shown as much of the severity of a friend to me, as I did to them, in a strict animadversion and correction. What assistance I received from them, was made known in general to the public in the original proposals for this work, and the particulars are specified at the conclusion of it; to which I must add (to be punctually just) some part of the tenth and fifteenth books. The
POSTSCRIPT.

Reader will now be too good a judge, how much the greater part of it, and consequently of its faults, is chargeable upon me alone. But this I can with integrity affirm, that I have bestowed as much time and pains upon the whole, as were consistent with the indispensable duties and cares of life, and with that wretched state of health which God has been pleased to make my portion. At the least, it is a pleasure to me to reflect, that I have introduced into our language this other work of the greatest and most ancient of poets, with some dignity; and I hope, with as little disadvantage as the Iliad. And if, after the unmerited success of that translation, any one will wonder why I would undertake the Odyssey; I think it sufficient to say, that Homer himself did the same, or the world would never have seen it.

I designed to have ended this postscript here; but since I am now taking my leave of Homer, and of all controversy relating to him, I beg leave to be indulged if I make use of this last opportunity to say a very few words about some reflections which the late Madam Dacier bestowed on the first part of my preface to the Iliad, and which she published at the end of her translation of that poem.

To write gravely an answer to them, would be too much for the reflections; and to say nothing concerning them, would be too little for the author. It is owing to the industry of that learned lady, that our polite neighbours are become acquainted with many of Homer's beauties, which were hidden from them before in Greek and in Eustathius. She challenges on this account a particular regard from all the admirers of that great poet; and I hope that I shall be thought, as I mean, to pay some part of this debt to her memory, in what I am now writing.

Had these reflections fallen from the pen of an ordinary critic, I should not have apprehended their effect, and should therefore have been silent con-

PERTINENT.

Concerning them: but since they are Madam Dacier's, I imagine that they must be of weight; and in a case where I think her reasoning very bad, I respect her authority.

I have fought under Madam Dacier's banner, and have waged war in defence of the divine Homer against all the heretics of the age. And yet it is Madam Dacier who accuses me, and who accuses me of nothing less than betraying our common cause. She affirms that the most declared enemies of this author have never said anything against him more injurious or more unjust than I. What must the world think of me, after such a judgment passed by so great a critic; the world, who decides so often, and who examines so seldom; the world, who even in matters of literature is almost always the slave of authority? Who will suspect that so much learning should mistake, that so much accuracy should be misled, or that so much candour should be biassed?

All this however has happened, and Madam Dacier's Criticisms on my Preface flow from the very same error, from which so many false criticisms of her countrymen upon Homer have flowed, and which she has so justly and so severely reproved; I mean the error of depending on injurious and unskilful translations.

An indifferent translation may be of some use, and a good one will be of a great deal. But I think that no translation ought to be the ground of criticism, because no man ought to be condemned upon another man's explanation of his meaning: could Homer have had the honour of explaining his, before that august tribunal where Monsieur de la Motte presides, I make no doubt but he had escaped many of those severe animadversions with which some French authors have loaded him, and from which even Madam Dacier's translation of the Iliad could not preserve him.

How unhappy was it for me, that the knowledge of our island-tongue was as necessary to Madam Da-clear in my case, as the knowledge of Greek was to Monsieur de la Motte in that of our great author; or to any of those whom she styles blind censurers, and blames for condemning what they did not understand.

I may say with modesty, that she knew less of my true sense from that faulty translation of part of my Preface, than those blind censurers might have known of Homer’s even from the translation of la Valterie, which preceded her own.

It pleased me however to find, that her objections were not levelled at the general doctrine, or at any essentials of my Preface, but only at a few particular expressions. She proposed little more than (to use her own phrase) to combat two or three similes; and I hope that to combat a simile is no more than to fight with a shadow, since a simile is no better than the shadow of an argument.

She lays much weight where I laid but little, and examines with more scrupulosity than I writ, or than perhaps the matter requires.

These unlucky similes, taken by themselves, may perhaps render my meaning equivocal to an ignorant translator; or there may have fallen from my pen some expressions, which, taken by themselves, likewise, may to the same person have the same effect. But if the translator had been master of our tongue, the general tenor of my argument, that which precedes and that which follows the passages objected to, would have sufficiently determined him as to the precise meaning of them: and if Madam Dacier had taken up her pen a little more leisurely, or had employed it with more temper, she would not have answered paraphrases of her own, which even the translation will not justify, and which say, more than once, the very contrary to what I have said in the passages themselves.

If any person has curiosity enough to read the whole paragraphs in my Preface, on some mangled parts of which these reflections are made, he will easily discern that I am as orthodox as Madam Dacier herself in those very articles on which she treats me like an heretic; he will easily see that all the difference between us consists in this, that I offer opinions, and she delivers doctrines; that my imagination represents Homer as the greatest of human poets, whereas in hers he was exalted above humanity; infallibility and impeccability were two of his attributes. There was therefore no need of defending Homer against me, who (if I mistake not) had carried my admiration of him, as far as it can be carried, without giving a real occasion of writing in his defence.

After answering my harmless similes, she proceeds to a matter which does not regard so much the honour of Homer, as that of the times he lived in; and here I must confess she does not wholly mistake my meaning, but I think she mistakes the state of the question. She had said, the manners of those times were so much the better, the less they were like ours, I thought this required a little qualification. I confess that in my opinion the world was mended in some points, such as the custom of putting whole nations to the sword, condemning kings and their families to perpetual slavery, and a few others. Madam Dacier judges otherwise in this; but as to the rest, particularly in preferring the simplicity of the ancient world to the luxury of ours, which is the main point contended for, she owns we agree. This I thought was well, but I am so unfortunate that this too is taken amiss, and called adopting or (if you will) stealing her sentiment. The truth is, she might have said her words, for I used them on purpose, being then professedly citing from her; though I might have done the same without intending that compliment, for they are also to be found in Eustathius, and the sentiment I believe is that of all mankind. I cannot really tell what to say to this whole remark, only that in the first part of it, Madam Dacier is displeased that I do not agree with her, and in the last that I do: but this is a temper which every polite man should overlook in a lady.

To punish my ingratitude, she resolves to expose my blunders, and selects two which I suppose are the most flagrant, out of the many for which she could have chastised me. It happens that the first of these is in part the translator’s, and in part her own, without any share of mine; she quotes the end of a sentence, and he puts in French what I never wrote in English: “Homer (I said) opened a new and boundless walk for his imagination, and created a world for himself in the invention of a fable;” which he translates, Homere crea pour son usage un monde mouvant, en inventant la fable.

Madam Dacier justly wonders at this nonsense in me, and I, in the translator. As to what I meant by Homer’s invention of fable, it is afterwards particularly distinguished from that extensive sense in which she took it, by these words. “If Homer was not the first who introduced the deities (as Hero-dotus imagines) into the religion of Greece, he seems the first who brought them into a system of machinery for poetry.”

The other blunder she accuses me of is, the mistaking a passage in Aristotle, and she is pleased to send me back to this philosopher’s treatise of Poetry, and to her Preface on the Odyssey for my better instruction. Now though I am saucy enough to think that one may sometimes differ from Aristotle without blundering, and though I am sure one may sometimes fall into an error by following him servilely; yet I own, that to quote any author for what he never said, is a blunder; (but, by the way to correct an author for what he never said, is somewhat worse than a blunder). My words were these. “As there is a greater variety of characters in the Iliad, than in any other poem, so there is of speeches. Every thing in it has manners, as Aristotle expresses it; that is, every thing is acted or spoken; very little passes in narration.” She justly says, that "Every thing which is acted or spoken, has not necessarily manners, merely because it is acted or spoken." Agreed: but I would ask the question, whether any thing can have man-ers which is neither acted nor spoken? If not, then the whole Iliad being almost spent in speech and action, almost every thing in it has manners since Homer has been proved before, in a long paragraph of the Preface, to have extolled in drawing characters and painting manners, and indeed his whole poem is one continued occasion of showing this bright part of his talent.

To speak fairly, it is impossible she could read even the translation and take my sense so wrong as she represents it: but I was first translated igno-rantly, and then read partially. My expression indeed was not quite exact; it should have been,
"Every thing has manners, as Aristotle calls them."
But such a fault methinks might have been spared, since if one was to look with that disposition she discovers towards me, even on her own excellent writings, one might find some mistakes which no context can redress; as where she makes Eustathius call Cratisthenes the Phliasian, Callisthenes the Physician. What a triumph might some slips of this sort have afforded to Homer's, hers, and my enemies, from which she was only screened by their happy ignorance! How unlucky had it been, when she insulted Mr. de la Motte for omitting a material passage in the speech of Helen to Hector, Iliad vi. If some champion for the moderns had by chance understood so much Greek, as to whisper him, that there was no such passage in Homer!

Our concern, zeal, and even jealousy for our great author's honour were mutual, our endeavours to advance it were equal, and I have as often trembled

† De la Corruption du Gout.
It was one of the many reasons I had to wish the longer life of this lady, that I must certainly have regained her good opinion, in spite of all misrepresenting translators whatever. I could not have expected it on any other terms than being approved as great, if not as passionate, an admirer of Homer as herself. For that was the first condition of her favour and friendship; otherwise not one's taste alone, but one's morality had been corrupted, nor would any man's religion have been unsuspected, who did not implicitly believe in an author whose doctrine is so conformable to Holy Scripture. However, as different people have different ways of expressing their belief, some purely by public and general acts of worship, others by a reverend sort of reasoning and inquiry about the grounds of it; it is the same in admiration, some prove it by exclamations, others by respect. I have observed that the loudest huzzas given to a great man in a triumph, proceed not from his friends, but the rabble; and as I have fancied it the same with the rabble of critics, a desire to be distinguished from them has turned me to the more moderate, and, I hope, more rational method. Though I am a poet, I would not be an enthusiast; and though I am an Englishman, I would not be furiously of a party. I am far from thinking myself that genius, upon whom, at the end of these remarks, Madam Dacier congratulates my country; one capable of "correcting Homer, and consequently of:" reforming mankind, and amending this constitut- tion." It was not to Great Britain this ought to have been applied, since our nation has one happiness for which she might have preferred it to her own, that as much as we abound in other miserable misguided sects, we have at least none of the blasphemers of Homer. We stedfastly and unanimously believe, both his poem, and our constitution, to be the best that ever human wit invented: that the one is not more incapable of amendment than the other; and (old as they both are) we despise any French or Englishman whatever, who shall presume to retrench, to innovate, or to make the least alteration in either. Far therefore from the genius for which Madam Dacier mistook me, my whole desire is but to preserve the humble character of a faithful translator, and a quiet subject.
THE BATTLE OF THE FROGS AND MICE.

BY MR. ARCHDEACON PARNEL.

Corrected by Mr. POPE.
 NAMES OF THE MICE.

Pycetarpax, one who plunders granaries.
Troxartes, a bread-eater.
Lychomylo, a licker of meal.
Pternotroctas, a bacon-eater.
Lychopinax, a licker of dishes.
Embaschytros, a creeper into pots.
Lychenor, a name from licking.
Trogodytes, one who ruins into holes.
Artophagus, who feeds on bread.
Tyroglyphus, a cheese-scooper.
Pteronoglyphus, a bacon-scooper.
Pteronophagus, a bacon-eater.
Cnissodictes, one who follows the steam of kitchens.
Sitophagus, an eater of wheat.
Meridarpax, one who plunders his share.

 NAMES OF THE FROGS.

Physignathus, one who swells his cheeks.
Peleus, a name from mud.
Hydromeduse, a ruler in the waters.
Hypsiboas, a loud bawler.
Pelion, from mud.
Seutiaxus, called from the beets.
Polyphonous, a great babbler.
Lymphnocharis, one who loves the lake.
Crambophagus, cabbage-eater.
Lymntsius, called from the lake.
Calaminthius, from the herb.
Hydrocharis, who loves the water.
Borbocates, who lies in the mud.
Prasaphagus, an eater of garlic.
Pelusius, from mud.
Pelobates, who walks in the dirt.
Prassaeus, called from garlic.
Craugasides, from croaking.
THE BATTLE OF THE FROGS AND MICE.

BOOK I.

To fill my rising song with sacred fire,
Ye tuneful Nine, ye sweet celestial quire!
From Helicon's imbow'ring height repair,
Attend my labours, and reward my prayer.
The dreadful toils of raging Mars I write,
The springs of contest, and the fields of fight;
How threat'ning mice advanc'd with warlike grace,
And wag'd dire combats with the croaking race.
Not louder tumults shook Olympus' tow'rs,
When earth-born giants dar'd immortal pow'rs.

These equal acts an equal glory claim,
And thus the Muse records the tale of fame.

Once on a time, fatigu'd and out of breath,
And just escap'd the stretching claws of death,
A gentle mouse, whom cats pursu'd in vain,
Flies swift of foot across the neighbouring plain,
Hangs o'er a brink his eager thirst to cool,
And dips his whiskers in the standing pool;
When near a courteous frog advanc'd his head,
And from the waters, hoarse resounding said.

What art thou, stranger? what the line you boast?
What chance hath cast thee panting on our coast?
With strictest truth let all thy words agree,
Nor let me find a faithless mouse in thee.
If worthy friendship, proffer'd friendship take,
And entering view the pleasurable lake:
Range o'er my palace, in my bounty share,
And glad return from hospitable fare.
This silver realm extends beneath my sway,
And me, their monarch, all its frogs obey.
Great Physignathus I, from Peleus' race,
Begot in fair Hydromeduse' embrace,
Where by the nuptial bank that paints his side,
The swift Eridanus delights to glide.
Thee too, thy form, thy strength, and port proclaim,
A scepter'd king; a son of martial fame;
Then trace thy line, and aid my guessing eyes.
Thus ceas'd the frog, and thus the mouse replies.
Known to the gods, the men, the birds that fly
Through wild expanses of the midway sky,
My name resounds; and if unknown to thee,
The soul of great Psycarpax lives in me.
Of brave Troxartes' line, whose sleeky down
In love compress'd Lychomyile the brown.
My mother she, and princess of the plains
Where'er her father Pternotroctas reigns:
Bora where a cabin lifts its airy shed,
With figs, with nuts, with varied dainties fed.
But since our natures nought in common know,
From what foundation can a friendship grow!
These curling waters o'er thy palace roll;
But man's high food supports my princely soul.
In vain the circled loaves attempt to lie
Conceal'd in flasks from my curious eye;
In vain the tripe that boasts the whitest hue,
In vain the gilded bacon shuns my view,
In vain the cheeses, offspring of the pail,
Or honey'd cakes which gods themselves regale.
And as in arts I shine, in arms I fight,
Mix'd with the bravest, and unknown to sight.
Though large to mine the human form appear,
Not man himself can smite my soul with fear;
Sly to the bed with silent steps I go,
Attempt his finger, or attack his toe,
And fix indented wounds with dext'rous skill,
Sleeping he feels, and only seems to feel.
FROGS AND MICE.

Yet have we foes which direful dangers cause,
Grim owls with talons arm'd, and cats with claws!
And that false trap, the den of silent fate,
Where death his ambush plants round the bait; 70
All dreaded these, and dreadful o'er the rest
The potent warriors of the tabby vest:
If to the dark we fly, the dark they trace,
And rend our heroes of the nibbling race,
But me, nor stalks, nor wat'rhish herbs delight, 75
Nor can the crimson raddish charm my sight:
The lake-resounding frogs' selected fare,
Which not a mouse of any taste can bear.

As thus the downy prince his mind exprest,
His answer thus the croaking king address'd. 80
Thy words luxuriant on thy dainties rove,
And, stranger, we can boast of bounteous Jove:
We sport in water, or we dance on land,
And born amphibious, food from both command,
But trust thyself where wonders ask thy view, 85
And safely tempt these seas, I'll bear thee through:
Ascend my shoulders, firmly keep thy seat,
And reach my marshy court, and feast in state.

He said, and lent his back, with nimble bound
Leaps the light mouse, and clasps his arms around, 90
Then wonder float, and sees with glad survey
The winding banks dissemble ports at sea.
But when aloft the curling water rides,
And wets with azure wave his downy sides,
His thoughts grow conscious of approaching woe, 95
His idle tears with vain repentance flow,
Hls locks he rends, his trembling feet he rears,
Thick beats his heart with unaccustomed fears;
He sighs, and chill'd with danger, longs for shore:
His tail extended forms a fruitless oar. 100
Half drench'd in liquid death, his pray's he spake,
And thus bemoan'd him from the dreadful lake.

So pass'd Europa through the rapid sea,
Trembling and fainting all the vent'rous way;
With oary feet the bull triumphant rode, 105
And safe in Crete depos'd his lovely load.
Ah safe at last! may thus the frog support
My trembling limbs to reach his ample court.
As thus he sorrow, death ambiguous grows,
Lo! from the deep a water-hydra rose;
He rolls his sanguin'ed eyes, his bosom heaves;
And darts with active rage along the waves.
Confus'd, the monarch sees his hissing foe,
And dives to shun the sable fates below.
Forgetful frog! the friend thy shoulders bore,
Unskill'd in swimming, floats' remote from shore.
He grasps with fruitless hands to find relief,
Supinely falls, and grinds his teeth with grief;
Plunging he sinks, and struggling mounts again,
And sinks, and strives, but strives with fate in vain.
The weighty moisture clogs his airy vest,
And thus the prince his dying rage exprest.

Nor thou, that sings me sound'rering from thy back,
As from hard rocks re bounds the shatter'd wrack,
Nor thou shalt 'scape thy due, perfidious king! Pursu'd by vengeance on the swiftest wing:
At land thy strength could never equal mine,
At sea to conquer, and by craft, was thine.
But heav'n has gods, and gods have searching eyes:
Ye mice, ye mice, my great avengers rise!

This said, he sighing gasp'd, and gasping dy'd.
His death the young Lycho pinax esp'y'd,
As on the bow'ry brink he pass'd the day,
Bask'd in the beam, and loiter'd life away:
Loud shrieks the mouse, his shrieks the shores repeat:
The nibbling nation learn their hero's fate;
Grief, dismal grief ensues; deep murmurs sound,
And shriller fury fills the deafen'd ground;
From lodge to lodge the sacred heralds run,
To fix their counsel with the rising sun;
Where great Troxartes crown'd in glory reigns,
And winds his length'ning court beneath the plains;
Psycarpax' father, father now no more!
For poor Psycarpax lies remote from shore:
Supine he lies! the silent waters stand,
And no kind bellow wafts the dead to land!
BOOK II.

WHEN rosy-finger'd morn had ting'd the clouds,
   Around their monarch-mouse the nation crowds,
Slow rose the monarch, heav'd his anxious breast,
   And thus the council, fill'd with rage, address'd.
   For lost Pyscarpax much my soul endures,
'Tis mine the private grief, the public, yours;
Three warlike sons adorn'd my nuptial bed,
Three sons, alas, before their father dead!
Our eldest perish'd by the rav'ning cat,
As near my court the prince unheedful sate.
Our next, an engine fraught with danger drew,
The portal gap'd, the bait was hung in view,
Dire arts assist the trap, the fates decoy,
And men unpitying kill'd my gallant boy.
The last, his country's hope, his parent's pride,
Plung'd in the lake by Physignathus dy'd.
Rouse all the war, my friends! avenge the deed,
   And bleed that monarch, and his nation bleed.
   His words in ev'ry breast inspir'd alarms,
And careful Mars supply'd their host with arms.
In verdant hulls despoil'd of all their beans,
The buskin'd warriors stalk'd along the plains,
Quills aptly bound, their bracing corslet made,
Fac'd with the plunder of a cat they flay'd;
The lamp's round boss affords their ample shield,
Large shells of nuts their cov'ring helmet yield;
And o'er the region, with reflected rays,
Tall groves of needles for their lances blaze.
Dreadful in arms the marching mice appear:
The wond'ring frogs perceive the tumult near,
Forsake the waters, thick'ning form a ring,
And ask, and hearken, whence the noises spring;
When near the crowd, disclos'd to public view,
The valiant chief Embasichytros drew:
The sacred herald's sceptre grac'd his hand,
   And thus his words exprest his king's command.
BATTLE OF THE

Ye frogs! the mice, with vengeance sir'd, advance,
And deck'd in armour shake the shining lance;
Their hapless prince, by Physignathus slain,
Extends incumbent on the wat'ry plain.

Then arm your host, the doubtful battle try;
Lead forth those frogs that have the soul to die.

The chief retires, the crowd the challenge hear,
And proudly swelling, yet perplex'd appear;
Much they resent, yet much their monarch blame,
Who rising, spoke to clear his tainted name.

O friends! I never forc'd the mouse to death,
Nor saw the gaspings of his latest breath.
He, vain of youth, our art of swimming try'd,
And vent'rous in the lake the wanton dy'd,

To vengeance now by false appearance led,
They point their anger at my guiltless head.
But wage the rising war by deep device,
And turn its fury on the crafty mice,
Your king directs the way; my thoughts elate
With hopes of conquest, form designs of fate.
Where high the banks their verdant surface heave,
And the steep sides confine the sleeping wave,
There, near the margin, and in armour bright,
Sustain the first impetuous shocks of fight:
Then where the dancing feather joins the crest,
Let each brave frog his obvious mouse arrest;
Each strongly grasping headlong plunge a foe,
Till countless circles whirl the lake below;
Down sink the mice in yielding waters drown'd;
Loud flash the waters, echoing shores resound:
The frogs triumphant tread the conquer'd plain,
And raise their glorious trophies of the slain.

He spake no more, his prudent scheme imparts
Redoubling ardour to the boldest hearts.
Green was the suit his arming heroes chose,
Around their legs the greaves of mallows close,
Green were the beets about their shoulders laid,
And green the colewort which the target made,
Form'd of the vary'd shells the waters yield,
Their glossy helmets glisten'd o'er the field:
FROGS AND MICE.  419

And tapping sea-reeds for the polish'd spear,
With upright order pierce the ambient air,
Thrust dress'd for war, they take th' appointed height,
Poise the long arms, and urge the promis'd fight.  80

But now, where Jove's irradiate spires arise,
With stars surrounded in ethereal skies,
(A solemn council call'd) the brazen gates
Unbar; the gods assume their golden seats:
The sire superior leans, and points to show

What wondrous combats mortals wage below:
How strong, how large, the num'rous heroes stride;
What length of lance they shake with warlike pride;
What eager fire their rapid march reveals!
So the fierce Centaurs ravag'd o'er the dales;
And so confirm'd the daring Titans rose,
Heap'd hills on hills, and bid the gods be foes.

This seen, the pow'r his sacred visage rears,
He casts a pitying smile on worldly cares,
And asks what heavenly guardians take the list, 95
Or who the mice, or who the frogs assist?

Then thus to Pallas.  If my daughter's mind
Have join'd the mice, why stays she still behind?
Drawn forth by sav'ry steams they wind their way,
And sure attendance round thine altar pay,
Where while the victims gratify their taste,
They sport to please the goddess of the feast.

Thus spake the ruler of the spacious skies,
When thus, resolv'd, the blue-ey'd maid replies.

In vain, my father! all their dangers plead;
To such, thy Pallas never grants her aid.
My flow'ry wreaths they petulantly spoil,
And rob my crystal lamps of feeding oil:
(ills following ills) but what afflicts me more,
My veil that idle race profanely tore.

The web was curious, wrought with art divine;
Relentless wretches, all the work was mine:
Along the loom the purple warp I spread,
Cast the light shoot, and cross the silver thread.
In this their teeth a thousand breaches tear; 115
The thousand breaches skilful hands repair;
For which, vile earthly duns thy daughter grieve:
But gods, that use no coin, have none to give;
And learning's goddess never less can owe;
Neglected learning gets no wealth below.  120
Nor let the frogs to gain my succour sue,
Those clam'r'ous fools have lost my favour too.
For late, when all the conflict ceas'd at night,
When my stretch'd sinews ach'd with eager fight,
When spent with glorious toil I left the field,  125
And sunk for slumber on my swelling shield;
Lo from the deep, repelling sweet repose,
With noisy croakings half the nation rose:
Devoid of rest, with aching brows I lay,
'Till cocks proclaim'd the crimson dawn of day.  130
Let all, like me, from either host forbear,
Nor tempt the flying furies of the spear.
Let heavenly blood (for what for blood may flow)
Adorn the conquest of a meauner foe,
Who, wildly rushing, meet the wond'rous odds,  135
Though gods oppose; and brave the wounded gods.
O'er gilded clouds reclin'd, the danger view,
And be the wars of mortals scenes for you.
So mov'd the blue-ey'd queen, her words persuade,
Great Jove assented, and the rest obey'd.  140
FROGS AND MICE.

BOOK III.

NOW front to front the marching armies shine,
Halt ere they meet, and form the length'ning line;
The chiefs conspicuous seen, and heard afar,
Give the loud sign to loose the rushing war;
Their dreadful trumpets deep-mouth'd hornets sound,
The sounded charge murmurs o'er the ground; 6
Ev'n Jove proclaims a field of horror nigh,
And rolls low thunder through the troubled sky.

First to the fight the large Hypsiboeas flew,
And brave Lychenor with a jav'linslew; 10
The luckless warrior fill'd with gen'rous flame,
Stood foremost glitt'ring in the post of fame,
When in his liver struck, the jav'ling hung;
The mouse fell thund'ring, and the target rung:
Prone to the ground he sinks his closing eye, 15
And, soil'd in dust, his lovely tresses lie.
A spear at Pelion, Troglydotes cast;
The massive spear within the bosom past;
Death's sable shades the fainting frog surround,
And life's red tide runs ebbing from the wound. 20

Embassichytros felt Seutlaeus' dart
Transfix, and quiver in his panting heart;
But great Artophagus aveng'd the slain,
And big Seutlaeus tumbling loads the plain.
And Polyphonus dies, a frog renown'd 25
For boastful speech, and turbulence of sound;
Deep through the belly pierc'd, supine he lay,
And breath'd his soul against the face of day.
The strong Lymnocharis, who view'd with ire
A victor triumph, and a friend expire;
With heaving arms a rocky fragment caught,
And fiercely flung where Troglydotes fought,
A warrior vers'd in arts of sure retreat,
Yet arts in vain elude impending fate;
Full on his sinewy neck the fragment fell,
And o'er his eye-lids clouds eternal dwell.
Lychenor (second of the glorious name)
Striding advance'd, and took no wand'ring aim;
Through all the frog the shining jav'lin flies,
And near the vanquish'd mouse the victor dies. 40
The dreadful stroke Crambophagus affrighted,
Long bred to banquets, less incur'd to fights;
Needless he runs, and stumbles o'er the steep,
And wildlyound'ring, flashes up the deep:
Lychenor, following, with a downward blow 45
Reach'd, in the lake, his unrecov'r'd foe;
Gasping he rolls, a purple stream of blood
Distains the surface of the silver flood;
Through the wide wound the rushing entrails throng,
And slow the breathless carcass floats along. 50
Lyanisia good Tyroglyphus assails,
Prince of the mice that haunt th' flow'ry vales,
Lost to the milky fares and rural seat,
He came to perish on the bank of fate.
The dread Pternoglyphus demands the fight, 55
Which tender Calaminthus shuns by flight,
Drops the green target, springing quits the foe,
Glides through the lake, and safely dives below.
The dire Pternoglyphus divides his way
Thro' breaking ranks, and leads the dreadful day; 60
No nibbling prince excell'd in fierceness more,
His parents fed him on the savage boar:
But where his lance the field with blood imbru'd,
Swift as he mov'd Hydrocharis pursu'd,
'Till fall'n in death he lies; a shatt'ring stone 65
Sounds on the neck, and crushes all the bone;
His blood pollutes the verdure of the plain,
And from his nostrils bursts the gushing brain.
Lychopinax with B orbocætes fights,
A blameless frog; whom humbler life delights; 70
The fatal jav'lin unrelenting flies,
And darkness seals the gentle croaker's eyes.
Incens'd Prassophagus, with sprightly bound,
Bears Cuissodiptetes off the rising ground;
FROGS AND MICE.

Then drags him o'er the lake, depriv'd of breath; 75
And downward plunging, sinks his soul to death.
But now the great Psycarps shines afar
(Scarce he so great whose loss provok'd the war),
Swift to revenge his fatal jav'lins fled,
And through the liver struck Pelusias dead; 80
His freckled corpse before the victor fell,
His soul indignant sought the shades of hell.
This saw Pelobates, and from the flood
Lifts with both hands a monstrous mass of mud.
The cloud obscene o'er all the warrior flies, 85
Dishonours his brown face, and blots his eyes.
Eurag'd, and wildly spurt'ring from the shore.
A stone immense of size the warrior bore;
A load for lab'ring earth, whose bulk to raise,
Asks ten degenerate mice of modern days: 90
Full to the leg arrives the crushing wound;
The frog, supportless, writhes upon the ground.
Thus flush'd, the victor wars with matchless force;
'Till loud Craugasides arrests his course:
Horse croaking threats precede; with fatal speed 95
Deep through the belly runs the pointed reed,
Then, strongly tugg'd, return'd imbru'd with gore;
And on the pile his reeking entrails bore;
The lame Sitophagus, oppress'd with pain,
Creeps from the despair dangers of the plain: 100
And where the ditches rising weeds supply,
To spread the lowly shades beneath the sky;
There lurks the silent mouse reliev'd of heat,
And, safe imbower'd, avoids the chance of fate.
But here Troxartes, Physignathus there, 105
Whirl the dire furies of the pointed spear:
Then where the foot around its ankle plies,
Troxartes wounds, and Physignathus flies,
Halts to the pool, a safe retreat to find,
And trails a dangling length of leg behind. 110
The mouse still urges, still the frog retires,
And half in anguish of the flight expires;
Then pious ardour young Prassæus brings,
Betwixt the fortunes of contending kings:
BATTLE OF THE

Lank, harmless frog! with forces hardly grown, 118
He darts the reed in combats not his own,
Which faintly tinkling on Troxartes' shield,
Hangs at the point, and drops upon the field.

Now nobly tow’ring o'er the rest appears
A gallant prince that far transcends his years, 120
Pride of his sire, and glory of his house,
And more a Mars in combat than a mouse:
His action bold, robust his ample frame,
And Meridarpax his resounding name.
The warrior, singled from the fighting crowd, 125
Boasts the dire honours of his arms aloud;
Then strutting near the lake, with looks elate,
Threats all its nations with approaching fate.
And such his strength, the silver lakes around
Might roll their waters o'er unpeopled ground. 130
But pow'rful Jove, who shows no less his grace
To frogs that perish, than to human race,
Felt soft compassion rising in his soul,
And shook his sacred head, that shook the pole.
Then thus to all the gazing pow'rs began, 135
The sire of gods, and frogs, and mouse, and man.

What seas of blood I view, what worlds of slain!
An Iliad rising from a day's campaign!
How fierce his jav'lin, o'er the trembling lakes,
The black-furr'd hero, Meridarpax, shakes! 140
Unless some fav'ring deity descend,
Soon will the frogs' loquacious empire end.
Let dreadful Pallas wing'd with pity fly,
And make her ægis blaze before his eye:
While Mars, resulgent on his rattling car, 145
Arrests his raging rival of the war.

He ceas'd, reclining with attentive head,
When thus the glorious god of combats said.
Nor Pallas, Jove! though Pallas take the field,
With all the terrors of her hissing shield; 150
Nor Mars himself, though Mars in armour bright
Ascend his car, and wheel amidst the fight:
Nor these can drive the des'rate mouse afar,
And change the fortunes of the bleeding war.
FROGS AND MICE.

Let all go forth, all heaven in arms arise; 155
Or launch thy own red thunder from the skies;
Such ardent bolts as flew that wond’rous day,
When heaps of Titans mix’d with mountains lay;
When all the giant race enormous fell;
And huge Enceladus was hurl’d to hell.

'Twas thus th’ armipotent advis’d the gods,
When from his throne the cloud-compeller nods;
Deep-length’ning thunders run from pole to pole,
Olympus trembles as the thunders roll.
Then swift he whirs the brandish’d bolt around, 165
And headlong darts it at the distant ground;
The bolt, discharg’d, inwrap’d with lightning flies,
And rends its flaming passage through the skies:
Then earth’s inhabitants, the nibblers, shake;
And frogs, the dwellers in the waters, quake. 170
Yet still the mice advance their dread design,
And the last danger threats the croaking line;
'Till Jove, that inly mourn’d the loss they bore,
With strange assistance fill’d the frightened shore.

Pour’d from the neighb’ring strand, deform’d to view,

They march, a sudden unexpected crew.
Strong suits of armour round their bodies close,
Which like thick anvils blunt the force of blows;
In wheeling marches turn’d, oblique they go;
With harpy claws their limbs divide below; 180
Fell sheers the passage to their mouth command;
From out the flesh the bones by nature stand:
Broad spread their backs, their shirring shoulders rise,
Unnumber’d joints distort their lengthen’d thighs,
With nervous cords their hands are firmly brac’d,
Their round black eye-balls in their bosom plac’d,
On eight long feet the wond’rous warriors tread,
And either end alike supplies a head.
These to call crabs, mere mortal wits agree;
But gods have other names for things than we. 190

Now, where the jointures from their loins depend,
The heroes’ tails with sever’ ring clasps they rend.
BATTLE OF THE FROGS AND MICE.

Here, short of feet, depriv'd the power to fly;
There, without hands, upon the field they lie.
Wrench'd from their holds, and scatter'd all around,
The bended lances heap the cumber'd ground. 196
Helpless amazement, fear pursuing fear,
And mad confusion through their host appear;
O'er the wild waste with headlong flight they go,
Or creep conceal'd in vaulted holes below. 200

But down Olympus, to the western seas,
Far-shooting Phæbus drove with fainter rays:
And a whole war (so Jove of dain'd) begun,
Was fought, and ceas'd, in one revolving sun.

END OF THE BATTLE OF THE FROGS AND MICE.
A COLLECTION of the WORKS of the most popular English Poets, and of those Prose Writers who have attained Classical Fame; with Translations from the Greek and Roman Classics, prose and verse; and Translations of the best French and Italian authors; has been for some time preparing on a new, elegant, and commodious plan, which embraces at once the two important objects—Correctness of text and beauty of printing.

These works, which are intended to be published periodically, one, or perhaps two, appearing each month, may be continued in regular series; in which case they will form a complete library of standard English literature: or they may be purchased separately, each volume containing an entire work, a life of the author, or a critical essay, and embellished with a vignette title and frontispiece, designed and engraved by best artists, from the most interesting and characteristic subjects.

The size of these volumes is that which has been so long celebrated on the continent, by the name of Elzevir, and has not only been deemed the most convenient for readers in general, but is most happily adapted for presents to young persons, of such works as may gratify their curiosity and improve their taste. And to secure this valuable purpose no works will be admitted but such as have been honoured by the universal sanction of criticism and popularity; such as have been approved by teachers of wisdom and the arbiters of taste, and may be circulated with confidence, as the proudest triumphs of English genius.

It may not be unnecessary to add, that the writings of our eminent authors have never before been printed in a form which so strictly combines elegance, accuracy, and cheapness. That the public, however, may be enabled to judge of the superiority of these editions, the following are already completed, at the prices annexed:
